Hyannis State Normal School Administrative History

Surrounded by Cape Cod, the State Normal School at Hyannis, Massachusetts provided almost fifty years of progressive educational training, influencing generations of teachers and students in Massachusetts and beyond. The Hyannis State Normal School opened on September 9, 1897. The first principal, William A. Baldwin, helped Hyannis strive for its motto, “Experience—Thinking—Experience.” He would be the longest serving principal at Hyannis, holding the position from 1897-1924.

In 1932, the Massachusetts Legislature voted to grant college status to the State Normal Schools, with each headed by a president rather than a principal. Hyannis State Normal School became the State Teachers College at Hyannis. In 1937 the Massachusetts Commissioner of Education granted the college permission to offer summer sessions carrying credits leading to a Master’s degree in education. The school was co-educational until the early 1920s, when enrollment was restricted to women only. Men were readmitted beginning in 1933. One of the more popular curriculum programs offered was the Physical Education Program, which began in 1899. The effects of World War II were felt on the school and attendance declined, particularly the number of male students.

Although the State Teachers College at Hyannis officially closed in August 1944, the summer sessions were continued for many years with class offerings for both graduate and undergraduate students. From 1945 to 1950 the Hyannis Summer Session was still referred to as a session of the State Teachers College at Hyannis, and classes were held at Barnstable High School. Beginning in 1951 the Hyannis Summer School came under the auspices of Bridgewater State Teachers College. The Summer School became part of Bridgewater’s Program of Continuing Studies (later called the Division of Continuing Education) in 1964. Classes were moved to Cape Cod Community College in the mid-1970s.

Scope and Content Note

The collection covers the entire history of the Hyannis State Normal School/Hyannis State Teachers College. It includes material such as land deeds that predate the opening of the school in 1897. Nearly a complete run of course catalogs can be found in the collection, as well as a large amount of student rosters and commencement material. Other material includes school finances and statistics, correspondence, and information on the logistics of running the school. Due to the sensitivity of student records, any researcher should consult with the University Archivist prior to research. Access to some of this material will be determined by the date the material was originally created.

Related collections include the Mary Jo Moriarty Collection, which includes more personal material relating to the Hyannis School, such as student handouts, camp life, photographs, and scrapbooks.
