"Young Alummi Speak" Is Theme of Biennial

It was home-coming day on the campus last Saturday when approximately 1000 members of the Alumni Association returned for the biennial exercises. Youth and age became one as oldsters from the class of 1939 mingled with the babies of the alumni organization, the class of 1939 and those of the class of 1888 leading and the class of 1875 mingled with the babies of our college are reaching to the far corners of the world. He enumerated many achievements in education which Bridgewater has accomplished in the past few years, not the least notable of which is the organization of the graduate school and extension classes in 1937; the revision of curriculum to include cultural courses during the freshman and sophomore years and professional training in the junior and senior years; the organization of a remedial reading department; the development of an extensive physical education department and the organization of Saturday classes in art for training school pupils.

President Kelly announced that the opening celebration in honor of Bridgewater's Centennial observance in 1940 would turn for the biennial exercises. Youngsters were privileged to hear Mr. Bancroft Beatley of Simmons College speak at the Parker House Roof Garden. Mr. Bancroft Beatley advocated the theme: "For us after graduation. First, adopt a vision of curriculum to include cultural and extension classes in 1937; the development of an extensive physical education department and the organization of Saturday classes in art for training school pupils.

Mr. Gordon Reynolds

To be Dean of Studies

After seven years at Bridgewater, as art instructor and supervisor, Mr. Gordon L. Reynolds is leaving to accept a position as assistant dean at the Massachusetts School of Art. Mr. Reynolds has included handwork courses, art appreciation courses, and history of art courses. In the Training School of the college he has been the art supervisor. Among the new things initiated by Mr. Reynolds has been the senior art trip to New York. He has planned and guided these trips for five years. This year's trip, correlated with the senior history of art course, will be especially remembered because of the extra day at the World's Fair.

One of the things the students will remember were the new images on campus created by the art supervisors and art students. Another new feature of the art department was the organization of the Saturday morning art classes. Children of the Training School attended. Paints, crayons, cloth, wood, clay and paper-mache were some of the media used. His assistants in this work were students of the college.

Mr. Reynolds has organized the sketch group. It is made up of students interested, and with ability in that activity. On any Saturday morning one could see the students working in some section of the campus. -Mr. Reynolds working with them.

In addition to all these various activities, Mr. Reynolds was practice teaching supervisor.

At Massachusetts School of Art Mr. Reynolds will be Dean of Studies and Coordinator of Curriculum.

For four long years we have welcomed our good fortune and our gratitude to an institution which has become so dear to us that it is impossible to say goodbye. Throughout our years here we have known and loved our Alma Mater. The friendly atmosphere and the glories of our college have stowed upon us a lasting heritage. No other profession is so graced with the opportunity of living for the good of others.

As seniors, we look back to our alma mater with a feeling of pride and respect for the years that have passed. The college has been a place of growth and development for all of us, and we are grateful for the opportunity to have been a part of such a great institution.

It is true that our college has developed over the years, but the core values remain the same. The college has always been a place where students are encouraged to think critically and to pursue their passions. The college has always been a place where students are encouraged to be leaders and to make a difference in the world.

As we graduate and move on to the next chapter of our lives, we carry with us the lessons we have learned here. We carry with us the memories of the people we have met and the experiences we have had. We carry with us the knowledge and skills we have gained.

We will always be grateful to our college for what it has given us, and we will always be proud to be a part of such a great institution.

Senior Class President

Stresses Bridgewater Ideals

Four happy years have been spent here at Bridgewater and it is truly exciting to think about the future. Our college has provided us with a solid foundation for our lives and we are grateful for the opportunities we have had. As we move on to the next chapter of our lives, we will carry with us the lessons we have learned here. We will always be proud to be a part of such a great institution.

The college has always been a place where students are encouraged to think critically and to pursue their passions. The college has always been a place where students are encouraged to be leaders and to make a difference in the world.

We will always be grateful to our college for what it has given us, and we will always be proud to be a part of such a great institution.

W. A. A. Sports

The annual W. A. A. banquet was held in Tillinghast on Thursday, May 25th. The banquet came as a climax of an affternoon when the athletic activities of all types played by faculty and students on the campus.

With Gerry Bahan, president of W. A. A., as toastmaster, the program included an address of welcome by President John J. Kelly in behalf of the faculty and himself.

Mary Bridgida in her report of the Round-Up told the group that the sports results were "a draw".

The evening of the address was given by Miss Elizabeth Levison which was entitled "Manpower". She told of the words of one speaker who said the best travelers are those who have some meaning to which they can return. Giving four suggestions for full lives, she said - (1) keep the spirit of adventure, (2) keep your good health, (3) develop a
