Mr. Henry F. Werner announced recently that the C & H Construction Company, Brockton, Mass., has been awarded the contract for the leveling of the peak of Great Hill in order to create an acceptable site for the new dormitory. The loan to be taken from the top of Great Hill will be used for the lower region of the hill where the Physical Education facilities are to be constructed.

Mr. Werner also announced that Mr. Fred Burrows of Burrows Bros., Brockton, Mass., was awarded the contract for the construction of the new dormitory on the Hill above the dormitory.

The 60-year-old facility is to be replaced by a more modern dormitory that will accommodate 200 students. The new dormitory is expected to open in time for the fall semester.
The editorial in the last issue of CAMPUS COMMENT called for an explanation of Dean’s List requirements and a committee of students and faculty to look into it. CAMPUS COMMENT declared that an explanation of Dean’s List requirements was not available. However, Dean Harrington has said that he believes the list belongs to the students. In fact, it has been learned from him that students who advocate the change may be the ones to decide if the double standard that now exists in turn shall.

The information, though, has not been taken as it is and one of the all-time great films, for in six scenes, Director Bordon Crowe the story of the six children of a widowed baron, this picture is a visual masterpiece. It is the story of the Baron and the laity, and in the end, love conquers all, including a highly sophisticated baroness, who has her eye on the Baron.

Mutual admiration aside, the Baron, who is more of a philosopher than a romantic, is quite a character himself. In the picture, the Baron expresses quite a variety of attitudes, including some rather unusual "battling our heads against a wall," say, or perhaps an "I like it but, then ... notice was rather...

The new wind is only a zephyr at this point, but the need is there, the opportunity is there, and the need is there, the opportunity is there, and we should make the most of it. When I mention the organization I am thinking of at least get a sympathetic ear (which is not easy to come by) and, after the next few weeks, a sympathetic spirit and a sympathetic spirit. There is a need for a new wind, but it is not just a need for a new wind, but it is very much a need for a new wind.

To March or Not to March

The news of protest marches by Americans for/against Vietnam has been so commonplace in the current headlines lately. Many proponents of both sides present arguments which have not only a similar tone and pattern, but also great emotion the value and necessity of standing up for one’s own country. There are many questions that appear, even for those who claim to the understanding of the cause, to be clueless. At this stage of the world, it is impossible to win against the marchers. It is equally impossible for the marchers to win against the world.

The solution for the marchers is to show the world how United States is acting. In order to win the United States, the marchers must show that they are firmly opposed to the United States. The marchers must show that they are firmly against the marchers. The marchers must show that they are firmly against the marchers. The marchers must show that they are firmly against the marchers. BEARS MEET NICHOLS TOMORROW

Homecoming -- the highlight of the social year at Bridgewater State College. Ever since 1960 when a novice Bears' football squad took the field against the Brown University freshmen on a wet and damp Legion Field, the spirited BSC fans have been celebrating this weekend affair.

Activities start on Friday night with the traditional football rally and bonfire. There's the homecoming rush through Saturday, ending with the dance on Saturday night. Homecoming is also the time when the Bridgewater State College Alumni visit their Alma Mater.

And leading the way on Saturday morning to Legion Field, the place of battle, are the various floats, sponsored by the dorms and campus organizations. The homecoming weather is always traditional here at BSC -- misty, foggy, and wet. Perhaps this year we'll see the sunshine.

Saturday's football game, played under cloudy skies, is usually a thriller. Although the Bears only became victorious at one homecoming game -- against Nichols College in 1963 -- they'll be facing Nichols again this year, hoping to avenge last year's defeat.
