Two-And-A-Half Cheers
For A Practical, Liberal Education

November 16, 1972

Morn. P. If I'm challenging such an obvious and "relevant" view, it is because I shall explain why the liberal arts education at Stetson University in DeLand is a practical and "relevant" view. The Student Union Program Committee, however, makes its own decision this year, and for the first time, a significant number of students are selected for the annual Fall Student Union Program Committee. The committee is not only relevant to the students' lives, but it is also a practical way for them to gain experience and to be part of the decision-making process.

One must not confound the "practical" or "temporarily relevant" activities of occasional college courses for the central aim of liberal education. The purpose of the university and college of the college degree has been to provide a set of courses that are not only relevant to the students' lives, but it is also a practical way for them to gain experience and to be part of the decision-making process.

The point is the criticism of "relevance" and "utility" in our university reflects the assumption that higher education is only a technical education. Anyone who still believes that education is the same as a technical education is not aware of the number of courses that are included in the university curriculum. The number of courses that are included in the university curriculum is not only relevant to the students' lives, but it is also a practical way for them to gain experience and to be part of the decision-making process.

As three members of the Student Union Program Committee, we are under constant criticism because of the types of programs we have but for present purposes, the broad outline of the philosophy department is described in more detail than some other parts of the university.

Philosophy Department Shoos

Expansion & Improvement

The Department of Philosophy is celebrating its bicentennial. The program consists of 12 hours of courses in philosophy. The specific sequence of courses will vary depending on the student and the availability of faculty members. In order to fulfill general education requirements, it is suggested that a student's composition of the course list be designed in consultation with a faculty member.

Philosophy Effective-Spring Semester 1972:

Of Philosophy.

Ancient and Medieval Philosophy (100).

The Pre-Socratic, Socratic, and Aristotelian schools.

Aristotle, with emphasis on his contributions to the development of philosophy.

Philosophy Effective-Spring Semester 1972:

In addition to the courses in philosophy, there are courses in the humanities. This includes courses in the classics, the sciences, and the arts. The courses are designed to provide a broad perspective on the development of philosophy and the humanities.

...you didn’t

Remember the time I spilled cake on your new suit?
I thought you would kill me, but you didn’t.

Remember the time I forgot to set the dinner was formal and you thought you would hate me but you didn’t.

Remember the time I fitted with the guys to make you jealous?
I thought you would hurt me, but you didn’t.

Remember the time I dragged you down to the beach and you said it would ruin and eat it?
I thought you wouldn’t care, but you didn’t.

You there a lot of things you did, but you loved me, made me happy.
I wanted to tell you this when you are back from Viet Nam that you didn’t.
