Supports FitzGerald

Dear Editor:

In response to last week’s letter criticizing the apartment residents’ use of the public area, I would like to voice my agreement with the sentiment expressed.

It seems to me that all of the new residents have done their best to treat the entire three buildings equally. I'm so that the entire three buildings can be checked. I'm not sure

Supports FitzGerald

Dear Editor:

In response to last week’s letter criticizing the apartment controversy, I would like to add my voice to the chorus of support for Mr. FitzGerald and the various student groups involved. The controversy is not just about apartment living, but about the larger issue of student autonomy and rights. It is unfortunate that the student government has chosen to undermine the efforts of these groups instead of working with them to find a solution.

Thank you to Dr. Harper

Dear Dr. Harper,

I would like to thank you, both personally and as a representative of the Student Union, for your active support of the Clowns of P.E. 462. The work you do is greatly appreciated by all of us.

Letter of Resignation

To the Editor:

I feel it is my responsibility to inform you of my decision to resign from The Comment. My reasons for resigning are many, but they should be explained to the college community. It is important for me to state the reasons for my resignation.

Firstly, I have recently become aware of the lack of diversity in The Comment’s content. While I believe in the importance of diverse perspectives, I feel that The Comment has not adequately represented the voices of underrepresented groups.

Secondly, I believe that The Comment has not adequately covered the issues that are most important to me as a student. I have been unable to find any articles or coverage that align with my interests and concerns.

I feel that it is necessary for me to step down from this position, as I do not believe I can continue to contribute to The Comment in a meaningful way.

Thank you for your understanding.

Opposes FitzGerald

Dear Editor,

I am writing to express my opposition to the stance taken by Mr. FitzGerald in his letter. While I understand the concerns he raises, I believe that the student government’s response is not sufficient.

During the investigation that was conducted by the student government, there were claims made against Mr. FitzGerald. However, during that process, our apartment was granted an extension. It seems to me that the student government is not acting in a fair or transparent manner.

I would like to encourage others to speak out against the actions of the student government.

Thank you for your consideration.

Rape Prevention

By Beth DeCicco

This article is one in a series of articles that appear in this community on specific topics of concern to us. The articles are written by people with firsthand experience of rape. In the area there is a rape crisis center and we are working together as women to provide emotional, legal, and psychological services. From our experiences as a staff person, we know that rape is not an isolated experience, but rather a way of life. Rape is a four letter word, it is the number one crime against American women today. Over the last few years, the crisis center has been notified of rapes being reported in the area among the ABCS calendar categories, which includes reports, emergency, sexual assault, and obituaries. The fear of sexual assault is a normal response. It can be important to remember that not all sexual experiences are rape. One must always be aware that situations can be recognized, and that intervention can be made. In some cases, rape occurs indoors, often in the home. While the circumstances of a rape may be different for each woman, we believe that there are common elements of the experience that allow us to identify rape in a more consistent manner.

The study also found that alcoholic patients were more likely to have a history of mental illness, and that their families were more likely to have a history of alcoholism.

RAcking Them Up:

Energy Savers

by Robert A. Coen

It is no secret that power costs are high, or "astrological" to use a less blunt term, or high in the price of oil, gas, and electricity. As the cost of these services continues to rise, it is important for all of us to be aware of the energy we consume. The following tips are designed to help us conserve energy for ourselves as well as for the environment.

Among the energy-saving tips listed below are:

1. Turn off lights when leaving a room.
2. Use energy-efficient light bulbs.
3. Turn down the thermostat by 5 degrees.
4. Use a programmable thermostat.
5. Heat or cool only one room at a time.
6. Use insulation in all homes.
7. Use fans to circulate air.
8. Use solar panels to generate electricity.

Another important energy-saving tip is to use public transportation. This reduces the number of cars on the road and helps to reduce air pollution.

One step that we can take to reduce our energy consumption is to use renewable energy sources, such as solar, wind, and hydroelectric power.

These are just a few of the many energy-saving tips that we can use to help conserve energy and protect our environment. Let's all do our part to make a difference.

The Student Union is alive and well and planning busily for Week not only next comfortable Union. The Health Issue Workshop will consist of a film, speaking on the psycho-... ... and a workshop will be held on Wednesday, May 2 at 2:00 p.m. in the Student Union, and the new reactor, steam generated, and turbines will be located in the Rathskellar focused on the panels, thereby still generating electricity. Actually, small turbines would be hooked up to each shower drain and toilet stalls. This proposal was dropped because many people may regard electricity generated in such a manner unsanitary and not for human use.
Jimbo Bradley's Nasty Comment: The Lindmard Report

It has often been said that we humans are creatures of habit, performing the same actions over and over again. And it is true, many studies have been done on the subject, which have shown that we are indeed very much creatures of habit. However, it has only been recently that scientists have begun to study the effects of these habits on our daily lives.

A survey of college students across the country revealed something very peculiar among the results. When students were asked what they do on a daily basis, they were quick to list off the same routine activities: wake up, shower, eat breakfast, go to class, eat lunch, go to class, eat dinner, go to class, study, and go to bed. This was repeated every day, without fail.

The study also found students who had unique habits, such as a student who woke up to the sound of a kiss and another who fell asleep while reading a book. However, the most interesting finding was that students who had unique habits performed better on their exams than those who had typical habits.

These findings have led scientists to believe that our habits are not just mindless actions, but are actually a source of motivation and inspiration. In fact, the Lindmard Report, published in 2019, states that habits are a key component of success.

But how do we know if a habit is good or bad? The Lindmard Report suggests that habits can be classified into two categories: those that are helpful and those that are not.

Helpful habits are those that help us achieve our goals, such as brushing our teeth twice a day or exercising regularly. These habits can improve our health, increase our productivity, and help us achieve our goals.

On the other hand, unhelpful habits are those that hinder our progress. These can include procrastination, overspending, and watching too much TV. These habits can lead to negative outcomes, such as debt, health problems, and a lack of motivation.

The Lindmard Report also offers tips on how to break unhelpful habits and form helpful ones. It suggests identifying the root cause of the habit, finding a replacement activity, and setting small, achievable goals.

In conclusion, the Lindmard Report has shown that habits are a powerful force in our daily lives. By understanding the effects of our habits, we can take control of our lives and achieve success. The key is to recognize which habits are helpful and which are not, and to make changes accordingly.
Worst Places to Study

by Roger

It's going to be a bit too early of your day, I know. The Editor has included her list of favorites based on the best places to study. Let's have a look at a few.

1. Hall of Fame: This is a great place to study. You can find someone to talk about anything. It has a cozy atmosphere and a lot of people tend to hang out there.

2. Library: The library is another great place to study. It is quiet and there are usually a lot of resources available.

3. Cafeteria: The cafeteria is a great place to study because there is a lot of food around and you can easily access drinks.

In general, these are great places to study. However, make sure to study in a place where you can focus and not be distracted by other people or activities.

EQUESTRIANS

The last two home events of the season will be Intramurals House Challenge, sponsored by TVC, and a college intramural horse show, sponsored by MAA/WRA. The final event will be on Saturday, May 5th. Both events will be held at the university's equestrian center.

Women's Intramurals

Congratulations to BSU's Intramural Women's Basketball Team, which won the championship at the Southeast Regional Basketball Tournament in March. The team consisted of Lisa Vaillancourt, Jean Ellis, Karen Hooper, Lisa Pignataro, Jeanne Arcudi, and Ann Merlin. The team played well throughout the season and showed good sportsmanship. UNH was 3-1 and 4-2, but in the first game UNH was 3-1. The Mouth was three hits in 13 innings. In the second game, double hit hitters kept the Mouth from scoring. Sandy Pallaria, Mark James, and Karen Hooper each hit three singles.

Renovations are Necessary

By Sue Arena

The building of some new and necessary facilities for the handicapped is necessary. In order to make the necessary building moves accessible, this is the planning stage. Some work has already been done. A street will open for renovation in the area. The project will be completed by June 1, 1979. Significant changes will have to be made. We can do some on our own. Sue will be cut within the next couple of months. We had not intended to make any changes since the last report. This will be cut at the beginning of the school year.
