Scandals like one of those postcard or T-shirt jokes, but it’s no joke. Anyone living inside of Route 128, even in the Quinsigamond Valley, could probably not tell you without a show of hands who the district attorneys or state troopers or state officials were. New Bedford, as is usual, if people are close to the law and you know it isn’t exactly an industry area. This anonymity is hard to break, but there is one person using hard work to break it: the City of Governor Michael Dukakis, and his BSC forces. He is in the middle of Southeastern Massachusetts. The region’s success could mean benefits for the college, too.

The Governor spent the whole day last Thursday traveling through the region’s industries, ending up in Middleboro and right here in Bridgewater. He also participated in groundbreaking ceremonies for Commerce Park, a new industrial park near the county, which has no companies ready to build. There are only one or two, and they have received several inquiries from other high-tech companies. The Commerce Park opening is just one of theotics Governor Dukakis faced with the training center, or it can do something to the area. He set up his office hours for several days in New Bedford, and when he settled with Codex officials in the Pawtucket area. The city that lost the multi-million dollar Microelectronics Training Center to industry undoubtedly saturated Westboro, thanks to the votes of the Boston politicians. Even though Dobson failed with the training center, the Governor decided to do something for the college, too.

Michael Dukakis, and with BSC President Daniel Dobson, tossed the idea out as a vote for the state. However, the Governor, having headed by Mr. Lou Perry, contacted contractors and engineers in the area. He set up his office hours for several days in New Bedford, and when he settled with Codex officials in the Pawtucket area, the city that lost the multi-million dollar Microelectronics Training Center to industry undoubtedly saturated Westboro.

Ruggiero’s Policies Create “Concerns”

On Saturday, September 15th, the Bridgewater State Bears football team opened their 1984 season with a sparkling romp over Framingham State College. It was a win for the team, but it wasn’t enough to lift the spirits of the fans. The Bears football team desperately needed a win to ignite a flame of optimism in the minds of the student body and set the course for a successful year record.

However, Bo Ruggerio, the new Athletic Director, has a different approach. He believes that it’s important to promote the sports program to the students and the community as a whole. He also wants to focus on building a strong student body and faculty support, which has been lacking in recent years.

Ruggerio’s Policies Create “Concerns”

Ruggerio’s policies have created some concerns among the student body and the faculty. The new policies are aimed at improving the state of athletics at Bridgewater State University. However, some students and faculty members are concerned that the new policies may not be fair and equitable.

Tennis Court Completion in Sight

By John J. Benson
Staff Writer

The revision of the tennis courts behind the Student Union building has been a long and tedious process. The idea started approximately seven months ago as a joint venture of the Student Government Association (SGA) and the Athletic Department. The courts were finally opened as a result of the combined efforts of the students and the administration.

The tennis courts were designed to be a multi-purpose facility, with separate areas for singles and doubles play. The courts are also equipped with lights for night play, making them available for use throughout the year.

The courts are a major improvement for the Student Union building, providing a much-needed space for physical activity and recreation. They are intended to be a focal point for the student body, encouraging them to participate in sports and physical fitness activities.

The courts were dedicated during a ceremony held on September 15th, with speeches from the SGA and the Athletic Department. The event was attended by many members of the student body and faculty, as well as community members.

The tennis courts are a testament to the dedication and hard work of the students and faculty involved in the project. They are a valuable addition to the Student Union building, and an important part of the campus community.

Canada’s Bear of Beers is here!

Canada’s Bear of Beers is here! Down from the North Woods of Canada comes Grizzly Bear. Not just another Canadian beer, but a rare breed of snow. An authentic Canadian lager—naturally aged, so it’s remarkably smooth. With a flavor no other Canadian beer can stand up to. The bear of beers is here!
WASHINGON — A lumber company whose former general counsel heads the U.S. Forest Service has had to hand over to federal investigators the financial records and computer tapes of sales at the service's Pacific Northwest region.

The records were turned over by the service's regional office in Portland, Ore., in response to a subpoena from the grand jury investigating allegations of corruption within the service.

The records include sales data and other financial information for the past two years, officials said.

The grand jury is investigating allegations that the service's Pacific Northwest region, which includes Washington, Oregon and Idaho, has been involved in corrupt practices.

The service has been under scrutiny since last year, when a former employee of the service, Alvin C. Haws, was charged with mail fraud and wire fraud.

Haws, who worked for the service's Pacific Northwest region, was accused of using his position to influence the sale of federal timber lands.

The service has also been under investigation by the Department of Justice, which is looking into allegations that the service's Pacific Northwest region has been involved in corruption.

The service's Pacific Northwest region is responsible for managing timber resources on federal lands in the region.

The records turned over to the grand jury include sales data, invoices, receipts and other financial information.

The grand jury is expected to use the records to help prosecute those accused of corrupt practices.

The grand jury has already indicted three former service employees for their roles in the corruption.

The records will also be used to help investigators look into other potential cases of corruption.

The service has been working closely with federal investigators to ensure that all evidence is properly handled and that the investigation is conducted fairly.

The service has also been working to improve its internal controls and procedures to prevent similar abuses from happening in the future.

The service's Pacific Northwest region has been a focal point of the investigation, and the service has been working to improve its management and accountability in the region.

WASHINGTON — A number company whose former general counsel heads the U.S. Forest Service has its hand in bill-making deals for developers from its home state, government officials say.

The company, which traded under the name of the former general counsel, has been a key player in the debate over the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) in the Forest Service, according to government officials. The company, which traded under the name of the former general counsel, has been a key player in the debate over the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) in the Forest Service, according to government officials.

As we reported in the past, Forest Service officials have been well aware that their old company is, in fact, still operating, and they have also been watching the company’s influence in the Forest Service.

The Forest Service also refused to cooperate with the government’s investigation, saying that the company’s activities were not illegal.

The so-called “independent” forest management company, as it is known, is a front for a series of related companies, all of which are owned by the same person.

Boston's 1984-85 theatre season will include a major Shakespearean production to be held in October. The play, "The Comedy of Errors," will run from October 25 to November 19. The production will be directed by John Mahoney, the new artistic director of the Boston Shakespeare Festival.

The play, which is part of the first annual Shakespeare Festival, will be presented at the Harvard University Theatre, where Mahoney is an associate professor of English.

Shakespeare's play tells the story of a set of mistaken identities and comedic misunderstandings that occur when a merchant and his servants travel to Italy. The play was originally written in the late 16th century and is considered one of Shakespeare's earliest works.

In addition, the festival will include a series of lectures, workshops, and other events related to Shakespeare's work. The festival will also feature performances by the Boston Shakespeare Company, a provincial troupe that has been performing Shakespeare's plays for over 20 years.

PRINCE REIGNS

By Audrey Little

Entertainment Editor

Prince's latest, Purple Rain, is a somber and introspective look at his personal transformation from the carefree, party-loving Prince of Pop to the more introspective and self-reflective Prince of the 80s. The album features a diverse range of styles and influences, ranging from jazz and R&B to funk and soul, all blended into a cohesive whole. The album's title track, "Purple Rain," is a haunting ballad that explores themes of loss and change, while "When Doves Cry" is a upbeat and engaging pop song that showcases Prince's vocal abilities.

“Tightrope” Lacks Timing

By John J. Benson

Staff Writer

Clint Eastwood is lucky to have such high success at the box office. If he didn’t, the producers of “Tightrope” would have thought twice before releasing it. Considering that Eastwood’s name has continually pulled big bucks for Hollywood, co-producer Fritz Fenn would do well to make sure that Eastwood keeps this film from slipping into some of the same traps.

Although many scenes from the film are so much a display that you’re probably sick of seeing them, it’s a wonder that you can listen to this film.

As Athletic Director, I am also living with nineteen different crises, each of which could prove to be the most important," he explained. "Our present problems include the termination of our contract with Peter Mazzaferrro, Head Coach of the BSC football team. Mazzaferrro is alleged to have been involved in sexual improprieties during his time as coach and, as a result, he has been fired from his position. This is a difficult situation for the team and the university, but it is necessary to ensure the well-being of all involved.

Sports (continued)

Concerning the cut of the football team, Director of Athletics Robert Ruggerio "has no concerns, only expectations," he said. "We expect the football team to be filled.

Mazzaferrro, at first, was told that sixtysix is an ideal number. But after thirty, he would like to see the roster reduced to fifty.

There are no concerns, only expectations that the team will be filled.

In closing, Bo Ruggerio would like to see the student body perceive these changes as some sort of personal failure. I don't have a root of all, "I know for a while I will be in a good mood," but I have studied the student body and I have known how to be. I've learned that, like Harry S. Truman, I'm not a man who is afraid to say "no." Ruggerio feels this situation areas overall matter of perspective. He continues, "Look it this way: if you are a pessimist, the glass is half-empty. If you are an optimist, the glass is half-full."

For example, although the student body has been cancelled, he believes that they will always be given a chance.

What effect has all of this had on the student body? Co-Captain Steve Hughes stated that "at this point, the student body is ready to say, "We're going to take it as it comes."

We are a football team to be filled, not cut, but there is no doubt that our morale is going to be filled.

As for the morale, there is no question that the student body is going to be filled. All students that are going to be cut are going to be cut, and all of our students are going to stay cut.

There are not enough students in the student body to participate.

"We are not a school without a school spirit. A school without a school spirit is an empty school. There are no concerns, only expectations that the student body will be filled.

As Athletic Director, I am also responsible for seventeen different teams, each of which consider to be the most important," he explained. "One reason is that we have a very strong and widespread program of competitive athletics, which we believe is one of the most important aspects of our educational system."

BSC athletic teams and facilities are the envy of many schools in the region, according to Head Coach John M. "Jack" Caputo.

As for the BSC team, Caputo said, "the players are doing a great job of making us all proud."

One reason for the success of the BSC team is the fact that they have a strong base of student support. "The students are really behind the team," said Caputo. "They give us a lot of encouragement and support throughout the year."

The team has also benefitted from the hard work of the coaching staff, who work tirelessly to prepare the players for each game. "The coaches are always available to the players," said Caputo. "They are always willing to help them get better."

The first six years it was staffed by one clinical psychologist, David R. Dickens, Director of the Counseling Center. The interest and support of the College is evident in the growth of the staff over the last five years. A second full-time psychologist, David D. DeLuca, was appointed in October 1979. In addition, we have two part-time psychologists, Susan E. Allen, who is currently completing her Doctoral work at Northwestern University, and Bernice Kelly, who is also a Doctoral candidate at the School of Professional Psychology.

Generally, college students are very responsive to counseling. Most often they come self-referred, either themselves or by a friend who has been to the Counseling Center. They come, too, with already developed skills which can be utilized in the counseling process. Counseling is confidential and there is no charge for the service. While first priority is given to undergraduate students, the staff is also available to graduate students in the college community. It may be of help to the student who is considering counseling to know what may occur in the first meeting with a counselor: an exploration of the presenting problem or conflict, going as far back and as deeper than is comfortable at this point. Some will talk about the future and conditions of counseling: an answer to the question of voice and frequency of meetings. The counselor must work through the complexities of the patient’s life, further exploring what can benefit from counseling, an attempt to know what may occur in the counseling process.

The newest member of the staff is a graduate assistant who is currently completing her studies in Psychology.

Campus Issues

Campus Herpes Cases Drop Off; Suicide Disorders Increase

The American College Health Association (ACHA) has recently reported that the number of herpes cases on college campuses has decreased, but the number of suicide cases has increased.

"There has been a decrease in herpes cases on college campuses," said CDC. "This is due to increased awareness and education about the disease." However, the number of suicide cases has increased significantly, with reports from across the country indicating a rise in student suicide rates.

A recent study by the American College Health Association found that 10% of college students had seriously considered suicide in the past year, with the highest rates among freshmen and students in the health sciences.

The rise in suicide cases is concerning to mental health professionals, who are calling for increased support and resources for students in need.

"We need to do more to support our students," said Dr. Jane Reifler, a physician at the University of Rochester. "They are facing a lot of stress and pressure, and we need to provide them with the resources they need to cope."

Campus Herpes Cases Drop Off; Suicide Disorders Increase

Atlanta, GA (CP) — The campus herpes epidemic has slowed but the new virus is not (yet) a threat to another campus. "AIDS is worse in terms of how far we have spread the virus," said Dr. Alvin Cohen, a physician at the University of Georgia.

"The full-scale, sexually transmitted disease is one in which college students have been swept up by a big wave," added Clifford Fries, a psychologist at the State University of New York.

But in fact, Recher says, "there has already been a decrease in herpes cases on the college campus. The number of sexually transmitted disorders of college campuses is not as high as in the general population."

Although the Center for Disease Control (CDC) in Atlanta says it has no data supporting Recher's claim, "it is entirely possible there could be a decrease in herpes among the college population," says CDC medical officer Paul Breuer.

On the other hand, in 1984, "more students might be going off campus for herpes treatment," he said.

One of the 240 college health professionals attending the convention did agree that while herpes may have abated, suicide, eating disorders, and smoking are on the rise. They have skyrocketed in the last year.

Next to alcohol, suicide, and smoking, the most prevalent student health problem, according to Dr. Bob Swenson, AMC's executive director. "But we're dealing with it. We have a comprehensive suicide prevention program that has been developed in the last year." One of the highlights of the program is the "Call for Help" hotline, which is staffed 24 hours a day. Students can call 555-SUICIDE from any phone on campus.

"Suicide is still the second highest cause of death among college students," according to University of Connecticut suicides have increased about 4 percent over the last few years he adds.

First-year men's soccer coach Mark Maxfield is hoping for a "10" or, at the very least, a "9" season in 1984, a year in which he hopes to be looking for a 100 percent record.

Maxfield and his team have started the fall mid-season for 1984. Season high expectations have carried over into practice and the team has performed well, according to Maxfield.

Although this is Maxfield's first season, the coaching staff is experienced. Men's tennis, basketball and baseball have all been coached by Bob Maxfield, father of the BSC men's soccer coach.

"We're optimistic," concluded Maxfield, "but we have to prove it to ourselves."

On Wednesday, Maxfield and his squad surfed one on, second, and may Maxfield's plan succeed, the team could well win 10 or more games this season.

On Monday, BSC played host to Suffolk University and emerged with a 3-0 victory. The inner goal was scored by Bob Groce and was assisted by Lino Carneiro at 14:39 in the second period. Suffolk State will travel to Roger Williams for a scheduled game of 2:00 p.m. on Saturday. The Rams will travel to Roger Williams for a scheduled game of 2:00 p.m. on Saturday.

Where is Southeastern Mass?

Sounds like one of those postcards or T-shirts, but it's no joke. Anyone living inside Route 138, even in the Quincy area, could probably not tell you where places like Atholton or Tahitian, even Fall River or New Bedford, are located, let alone find the people in those towns. But in the minds of many, those places are not far away. That's because the University of Massachusetts is here.

Thanks to the efforts of the Boston Celtics, even though the Boston Celtics are not here, this school has made a name for itself in the basketball world. The Celtics have built a new arena here, and with that, the University of Massachusetts has become a major player in the basketball world.

Ruggiero's Policies Create "Concerns"

By Jeffrey Stlicker
Staff Writer

On Saturday, September 22nd, the Bridgeport State College basketball team opened its fall 1984 season with a 13-0 victory over the University of Massachusetts. The UMass team was more than happy to lose, but the Bridgeport State team was relieved to win.

The win was the first of the season for the Bridgeport State basketball team, which is coached by Harry Ruggiero. Ruggiero is known for his aggressive style of play, and his team always seems to come out on top.

The controversy surrounding the win is fueled by the fact that Bridgeport State College is located in Bridgeport, Connecticut, and is not a part of the University of Massachusetts. The University of Massachusetts is located in Amherst, Massachusetts, and is a part of the Massachusetts State University System.

The controversy over the win is likely to continue, as Bridgeport State College is expected to continue to perform well in the upcoming season.
