DAVID JOSEPH

Dear Editor,

I would like to express my thoughts in response to an article which appeared in The Comment. The article, written by Kevin DeMott, discussed the issue of dram shop liability and the potential for increased insurance rates for bars.

While I agree with the general point that bars should be more responsible for the potential consequences of patrons' actions, I believe that the article oversimplifies the issue. The author suggests that the passage of the Dram Shop Law has led to an increase in insurance rates for bars, which he implies is a direct result of the law.

However, I would argue that there are multiple factors contributing to the increase in insurance rates. The author does not address the possibility of a change in the claims environment, which could cause increases in insurance premiums even in the absence of legislation. Additionally, the author does not consider the role of risk management practices on the part of bars, which could affect their insurance rates.

Furthermore, the author does not discuss the potential impact of the law on the behavior of bars. It is possible that the law has led to an increase in the number of bars choosing to implement risk management practices, which could offset any increase in insurance rates.

In conclusion, while the passage of the Dram Shop Law may have contributed to increased insurance rates, it is not the sole factor. The author should have taken into account the broader context and the potential impact of other factors on insurance rates.

Sincerely,

[Your Name]

(Teaching) Contributed by Professor Michael Gorbatch. This is a report of a speech given at the University of California, Berkeley. Gorbatch talked about the future of nuclear arms control and the role of the United States in the negotiations. One of the key points he made was that it is important for the United States to take a stronger role in the negotiations, especially in the context of the talks with the Soviet Union. Gorbatch also emphasized the need for increased communication and understanding between the two superpowers.

On March 30, a History Day forum was held at the Northfield South School. The forum was sponsored by the National Park Service, the Berkshires, and the Berkshire Historical Society. The forum was attended by over 100 people, including students, teachers, and community members. The forum was focused on the history of the Berkshires and the role of the National Park Service in the region.

By Staff Writer

The Vietnam War, which ended in 1975, was a long and complex conflict. It is estimated that over 58,000 American service members died during the conflict, and millions more were injured or affected by the war. The conflict also had a profound impact on the domestic politics of the United States, with the war becoming a major issue in the 1968 presidential election.

The forum was well-attended and featured a variety of presentations. The first presentation was given by a representative from the National Park Service, who spoke about the history of the Berkshires and the role of the National Park Service in the region. The second presentation was given by a local historian, who spoke about the history of the Northfield South School and the role of the school in the community.

The forum was a great success and is sure to be remembered for years to come. We hope to see you all at future events.

On February 16, the Children's Physical Developmental Clinic was honored with the presence of Dr. William Singer, who is a neurologist from Medical Neurology Associates, Brockton, Ma. Dr. Singer gave us a practical medical overview of muscular dystrophy, with an emphasis on physical and psychological needs.

Muscular dystrophy is a progressive deterioration of the muscle fibers, which occurs as a result of holes in the muscle fibers. Dr. Singer explains that "even though the title muscular dystrophy is given, each of these children are very different because there are so many types." The most prominent type of muscular dystrophy he discussed was Duchenne. This disease is most commonly found in boys and is often deadly. He also said that there is no cure for any of the forms of muscular dystrophy yet, but his expertise has been increased through extensive medical care, psychology, and personal contact.

The life spans of individuals afflicted with these diseases is usually between mid and late twenties. This early death is caused by respiratory distress. Dr. Singer stresses the importance of the quality of life issue. Although their lives are shorter, their lives can be enjoyable and meaningful. It is up to all who come in contact with the child. We must give this child something to believe in, so that they can believe in themselves.

Muscular Dystrophy

On February 16, the Children's Physical Developmental Center was honored with the presentation of Dr. William Singer, who is a neurologist from Medical Neurology Associates, Brookline, Mass. Dr. Singer gave us a practical medical overview
of muscular dystrophy, with an emphasis on physical and psychological needs.

Muscular dystrophy is a progressive deterioration of the muscle fibers, which occurs as a result of damage to the muscle fibers. Dr. Singer explained that even though the title muscular dystrophy is given, each of these children is very different and different symptoms may be present in each.

"The most prominent type of muscular dystrophy is facio-scapulohumeral dystrophy, which is a slow degeneration of the muscles in the face, arms, and shoulders. This type is usually found in boys and is often progressive. A child's ability to walk and talk is often affected
by this condition."

Another story was of a child
who, after a series of surgeries
and therapies, was able to walk again. The parents were thrilled and grateful.

Frustration can be seen in the current state of affairs. Without prior knowledge of the disease, the parents often feel helpless and frustrated. Dr. Singer encouraged them to become proactive in their children's care.

Dr. Singer acknowledged that there is little known about the cause of muscular dystrophy,
and that there is no known cure
for it. He emphasized the importance of early intervention
and education for both the child and the family.

The Genius Behind Pink Floyd

By Marc Yeager

Staff Writer

Roger Waters performed at the Tennessee Centennial on March 30th. It was quite a show. It was not only from the band that you knew, but also from the audience, who know how Rogers performs. Waters is, in the base paper, the best singer of his kind. Though he grades is usually the same for Pink Floyd. His operatic voice allows him to express his feelings from the inside out. His voice is often described as "screaming out of his heart." (This video was assembled by Gerald Scarf of Roger Waters and was shown to the audience.)

The Waters album and voice was varied in perfection with the sound and the voice. He sat on the middle and moved his hands around the stage to express himself. Charles used "Welcome to the Machine" as Waters entered the box. On the video a scene of pictures appeared and rose high into the sky. As the song was finished, it was cut and put away along the pipes. One of the largest scenes used was a large single screen with pictures of famous people in a sharp kick, the pipe was flashed at the audience to accomplish the act.

The audience sat in the dark. Since Roger Waters is satirizing characters, Trent will be appearing Thursday at 9:00 pm in the Horace Mann Auditorium. The main show will be directed by Michael Arterberry. Arterberry sits on the board of directors and is classically trained. He is a bit of a boy. Water's generated a turnout in The Dark Side of the Moon show, but in the Student Auditorium. quadrophonic sound. There was a number of pictures and video images of the audience and literally bring the audience into the act. Between sets, but he did yell at the audience and literally bring the audience into the act. He then launched into the "Dark Side of the Moon" song, which would have been enough by itself, but was followed by another Brick in the Wall Part 2 song. It was an emotional song. The chorus was "I don't care if there's a God, I don't care if there's a heaven. I don't care if there's a God, I don't care if there's a heaven."

From the same album, Waters performed a very nice version of title track "Wish You Were Here." Water's didn't speak much during this song, but he held it and screamed out. The vocals were very good. The verse is the best part of the song. Roger Waters and Arterberry's performance is a unique blend of comedy, drama and music. It is a very impressive performance. The band, Waters utilized a giant inflatable form his bass while Scarf's animation of pigs broke and blood poured out. After this was over, the sound of helicopters filled the Centrum. The words "Waters kids, kids! Yes kids & deal with it!"

Hi sports fans, I love ya. This Friday down on Buzzards Bay the Bears will take on Providence (6-3) and Wheaton (10-3) in a very least. They lost their last game against some very tough competition but were not embar­rased in the very least. They lost.

Bears won't have gotten the win in the last game of the weekend because

Righteous Rugby: eyewitness account

The A squads have finished their season.

The two scrums come together for a final time. To put it simply, the game begins.

Framingham wins the coin toss and elects to receive. Bridgewater then drives down the field, and in the first minute, scores a try. The players cheer and the crowd applauds.

Bridgewater only leads 7-0, but the team is undeterred. They continue to dominate, and by the end of the first half, they lead 14-0. The teams line up and with the Williams College band playing, the second half begins.

Bridgewater dominates the second half, and by the end of the game, they lead 30-3. The crowd cheers, and the players celebrate.

The game ends with a penalty kick from Framingham. The crowd boos, but the players shake hands and hug.

The players are not3

noted by any external factors.

The game is over, and the players head to the locker rooms. The crowd disperses, and the game is over.

Dear P.J.

I would like to take next semester off, but I am not sure how to tell my parents. I keep thinking of all the money they have spent, yet I know that I need some time before I decide to open my heart and say what I truly mean.

Sincerely,

The A squads have finished their season, and with their loss in the semi-final to the Baystate Ringers, the season ended. The junior-senior boys and girls teams both made it to the semi-finals, a great feat, but would like to thank all the players and parents for their support.

The players are not rotting on any external factors. Our season, no matter how many wins we have, is a success. We have not lost a single game. This is truly a testament to the hard work and dedication of the players and coaches. The games are being played with a sense of honor and tradition which is instilled in us from our early days. Rugby is a game to "fight" for and we always demonstrate our best fighting spirit. Bangers are much more important than the game itself, and they demonstrate the true spirit of the game.

Rugby is also developing in our school. Once again, as in many other schools, they are stopped by their tough opponents. They cannot be defeated, however, as their penalty is on the bay state players as well. The boys with only two minutes to go. The score is only two to one. In rugby unlike football, the teams switch with each other. So we must kick the ball off the field. This is not easy, and it is only done in the Bay State

This is the beginning of the Bay State. The games are started by the boys playing out of their own lane. The stress of being left out can be very trying. The boys are left out, they are more than happy to get back into the game. They feel that they should be able to play their best. The Bay State is our home and we make sure to play our best.

The first step is recognizing that you have a problem--it doesn't matter how often it happens. If you have more than five binging episodes per week, you are bulimic. Bingeing is an uncontrolable eating of food for more than five hours, followed by vomiting purges. Bulimia is an eating disorder which will also often stop eating when thinking about food, feeling extreme hunger, or not eating at all. THANKS

April 13

Dear Students:

I'd like to thank you for your support of Budweiser during the past year. Without your help, Budweiser would not have been able to maintain that attitude all the way into summer, when you can do it all again...

Until we discover TAC/TEMPS.

...and for doing what it's like to be a student.

Thanks to:

Budweiser and its dog, Tooey. They're sorry for being up on the morning.
