S.G.A. has chance for new beginning

A truly new semester is upon us. For reasons unknown, last semester seemed to be extremely difficult for many people, the student leaders of Bridgewater State included. Now it is time for all of us to start over.

The Student Government Association should take heed of this message. There have been recent resignations, including the President, Vice President, Attorney General, and Speaker of the House. Twenty-nine percent of our SGA are not returning to Council Chambers.

The S.G.A.'s last semester fell far short of its potential. They were working on their new Constitution and their new two-house system. Although the number of people who fall into student government increased, they seemed bogged down in their own bureaucracy.

The S.G.A. was not totally inept. Homecoming Weekend went well. The Town and College Relations Committee seemed to be off to a good start (the committee is now defunct). But the budget hearings, held last December during a joint session of the House and Senate, went smoother than any in recent history.

But the two-house system just didn't work. When setting up a committee to study the funding of walking security, a female student was attacked on campus, something the Office of Student Services began it again on their own. When it was announced that free housing was being made available, our representatives were silent. (Another organization met with President Indriko, found out why it was being done, and then nothing.)

Thursdays this semester. Next fall, it will be moved to early Wednesday afternoon. They have yet to decide which members of the House represent which members of the student body. Also, there were vacant seats in both houses because of students' lack of interest in running for office.

The two-house system might work in a school of 20,000 people, but here at Bridgewater, with less than 6,000, two bodies is simply too much bureaucracy.

The two houses have recently combined for the General Assembly. They seemed to have realized their mistakes, and are ready to rectify the problem. The new officers, upon election, should rewrite the Constitution, drawing the better parts from both the old and the new.

The new system should also set specific goals for themselves and for the school.

S.G.A. should be done with the utmost haste, so they can move on to do what they were elected to do: represent the students and fight for new things for students.

Swimming teams return to action both end first week still looking for first victory

The BSC men’s and women’s swim teams returned to action last Saturday at Boston College. Both teams suffered defeats, dropping their seasons to 0-2, but losing by a lopsided 120-50 victory, and 110-63, respectively.

Both teams saw key performers from last semester, but have had to add new elements to their routines. Several newcomers, including Chris and Jenny Morgen, transfers from Cal State, Northridge, and divers Tony Laflamme and Lou Polito, were on a dominating performance from Cal State High School, having earned all-American honors.

The swimmers cannot afford the losses, however, as the NCAA dual-meet scoring format requires team depth in win, commented Coach Vaska.

Coach Markham noted one positive from last week, as the team put us in a tough situation.

The women opened their meet against the University of Massachusetts-Amherst with a 12-6 victory in the six-event meet.

As the Junior All-American, he is getting ready to make his debut in the 200m relay. Chris Morgen won 400m freestyle and 50m in the 100m freestyle, while junior Janice Morgen took third place in the 100m breaststroke. The Senior All-American scored BSC’s first points of the meet, followed by Lydia and Joyce and Lynn Morgen 5th and 6th in the 100m breaststroke. The team then scored points in the 100m breast, 200m backstroke, and 200m medley.

Winners included John Male, a Middlebury student, and Steve Male, 1985 National champion, who has an interest in playing professional hockey.

As for the rest of their season, Champagne says, “we’ll be right half of their season. We’ve started to string a few more of these wins together since training camp and have really been building up our momentum. It’s a great time for us to possibly come against last year’s national team.”
