BSC student killed by passenger train

By Anthony Fagen and Bryon Hayes

A northbound Cape Cod and Hyannis Railroad passenger train bound for Boston struck and killed a partially deaf 41-year-old Bridgewater State College student last Thursday afternoon as he was crossing the railroad tracks between the commuter lot and the Kelly Gymnasium.

William Murphy of Hanson was crossing the popular walkway between the main commuter lot and the Hyannis Railroad passenger train's warning horn as it sounded his warning horn as he was approaching the Route 30 to 60 feet from the tracks.

Murphy, who was 10 percent deaf in one ear and 90 percent deaf in the other, had been at Bridgewater State College for 27 years. He had been at Bridgewater State College for 27 years. He had been at Bridgewater State College for 27 years. He had been at Bridgewater State College for 27 years. He had been at Bridgewater State College for 27 years.

R.E.M.: An unexpected disappointment, but 10,000 Manics please all in attendance

By Dave Spira

Saturday night, I attended the Boston Calling Festival to watch a concert featuring R.E.M. and opening act The Djangos. Many people will probably disagree with me, but I believe that the show included a lot of what a R.E.M. concert should be.

To start off the show, 11,000 people crowded into the coliseum for the new album, "M.1.Y. V.I.P. Love so tough." Not only was the coliseum frame to the audience, but the crowd was divided into two major sections: those who could hear and those who could not. This might explain why the audience was not very enthusiastic about the new songs. The audience seemed to be more interested in the old songs, such as "Losing My Religion" and "Bills, Bills, Bills." Many people, however, walked out during the show because they did not expect to hear the old songs.

The audience was generally pleased with the performance, as it was the first concert they had attended in months. However, I believe that the R.E.M. concert could have been more successful if the crowd had been better organized. The stage was set too close to the audience, which made it difficult for the band to move around. The lighting was also not very effective, as it did not provide enough light for the audience to see the performers. Overall, the concert was enjoyable, but I believe that it could have been even better if the crowd had been better organized.

Concert Dance Company of Boston visits Bridgewater with their unique style of dancing

By Kristin Sanie

Recently, the Concert Dance Company of Boston visited Bridgewater College with their unique style of dancing. The concert was well-received by the students, who were extremely impressed with the performers' talent.

The concert began with a lively opening number, "Dancing in the Street," which featured a group of dancers dressed in colorful costumes. The dancers moved in unison, creating a beautiful visual effect that captivated the audience.

The next number, "Swingin'," was a jazz-inspired routine that showcased the dancers' athleticism and precision. The dancers moved fluidly, executing complex maneuvers with ease.

The third number, "Children of the Rainbow," was a beautiful piece that explored themes of peace and unity. The dancers performed a series of slow, sweeping movements, which were accompanied by soothing music.

The fourth number, "Ragtime," was a fun and energetic piece that brought the audience to their feet. The dancers performed a variety of moves, including tap and tap dancing.

The concert ended with a dynamic finale, "The Final Countdown," which featured a group of dancers dressed in black costumes. The dancers performed a series of fast-paced movements, which were accompanied by loud and energetic music.

Overall, the concert was a wonderful experience for the students, who were impressed with the performers' talent and creativity. The concert was a great way to end the week, and the students were excited to see more performances from the Concert Dance Company of Boston in the future.

Marc Jordan: newest big dreamer from the state of California

By Dave Spira

Marc Jordan is a rising star in the music industry, with a voice that is both powerful and melodic. He was born in California, where he grew up listening to the music of his favorite artists, including Michael Jackson and Stevie Wonder.

Marc Jordan began his music career at a young age, writing and performing his own songs. He quickly gained a following among fans of all ages, with his unique style of music and his thoughtful lyrics.

Marc Jordan's first album was released in 2012, and it quickly became a hit. His second album, released in 2014, was even more successful, with several of his songs becoming chart-toppers.

Marc Jordan is currently working on his third album, which he hopes will take his music to even greater heights. He is currently touring the country, with stops in many of the major cities.

Marc Jordan is a true talent, with a passion for music that is unmatched by anyone else. He is a true dreamer, with a vision that is only limited by his own imagination.
New adventures of the Ron Squad
By Russ Sherman

Bonjour and welcome to an exciting adventure of the Ron Squad, an adventure of great campaigns, financial wrestling, and sea adventures. This week's adventure: The oil rig that went off the grid (and never bothered you).

So, now we find ourselves in the oil-rich waters of the Gulf of Mexico. The oil rig our friends at the Ron Squad have just lost power. No problem, they say. We'll just rely on our own backup systems to keep the rig running smoothly.

But what if something goes wrong with the backup systems? What if a hurricane or a tropical storm rolls in and knocks out our supplies?

The Ron Squad is known for its ability to handle such situations. They've been through hurricanes and storms before and always come out on top. But this time, they're not so sure. They're worried about the safety of their workers and the environment around them.

Ron, the leader of the Ron Squad, is searching for a solution. He knows that they need to find a way to power the rig again without relying on the grid. He thinks of using solar panels or wind turbines, but he's not sure if it's possible or feasible.

As he searches for a solution, Ron remembers a story he heard about a group of people who lived off grid for years. They used solar panels and wind turbines to power their homes and even grow their own food.

Ron decides to follow in their footsteps. He orders the necessary equipment and gets to work. It's not easy, but they manage to keep the rig running smoothly.

In the end, the Ron Squad proves once again that they can handle any situation. They don't need the grid to power their operations. They're true survivors.

WBIM's specialty shows: a variety of sounds

By Mona McNamara

You left all your favorite reggae tapes at home, and can't afford to buy new ones. You're tired of the Top 40, funk, and heavy metal played by the major Boston stations. You just would like to try listening to something different for a while.

Well, don't despair. 91.5 FM, WBIM, Bridgewater State College's radio station is a viable alternative.

WBIM offers a wide variety of specialty programming to appeal to the varied music tastes of the college community.

Jim Vaughn, a student advisor at WBIM, and a former station manager said that "Club 91," a folk show which is produced by Paul Bonito, is the most popular with college students. It has been on WBIM for a long time. It is an integral part of the station. Furthermore, the program also has a strong following.

"The college community is fascinated with this music. They buy mostly folk music," Vaughn added. "Club 91" can be heard Fridays from 9:00 p.m. to 12:00 a.m.

According to Vaughn, a second popular program is "Metal Mayhem." It receives more requests than any other specialty show. This program is hosted Thursday nights from 9:00 p.m. to 12:00 a.m.

"Metal Mayhem" is hosted by Vaughn and Unix on Mondays in the Rat from 9:00 p.m. to 12:00 a.m. The show is devoted to heavy metal music, which is extremely popular with the students. "We have a large number of students who are WBIM listeners," Vaughn said. "Metal Mayhem" receives more requests than any other specialty show. It is considered to be very progressive.

"This music is created by the average person in the community," Vaughn added. "It is a music that is played mostly is progressive. "Since we are a college station we should help local progressive music," said Unix.

"This Vicious Cabaret" is hosted by Vaughn and Unix on Mondays in the Rat from 9:00 p.m. to 12:00 a.m. The show is devoted to heavy metal music, which is extremely popular with the students. Save UIMS, WBIM staff member, said the reason that the show is so popular is that the 14-18-year-olds who make up the station receives.

"Once they hear a station that they like, they stick with it very long," he said. "One of the main reasons that [Lang] is so successful is that he plays "new" metal. Lang just doesn't rely on the classics. He plays music that in and of itself might not be played on regular radio.

A third program that is important in WBIM's "These Goes the Neighborhood," hosted by Colin Brown and Brian Hughes. It can be heard Tuesday nights from 8:00 p.m. to 12:00 a.m. This program focuses on new bands from this area. The music that it plays presently is progressive.

"Since we are a college station we should help local progressive music," said UIMS.

"This "Video Cabaret" is hosted by Vaughn and Ursus on Mondays from 9:00 p.m. to 12:00 a.m. This program features a range of musical styles. This music is also created by musicians that are not normally heard by the average person in the community that they are heard from. This program represents a few of the more popular special shows on WBIM. The specialty shows can be heard Monday through Saturday from 9:00 p.m. to 12:00 a.m. Leaders are asked to schedule specialty programming. The special shows are on Sunday for folk, jazz, new age, and easy progressive music.
