1984 Article about SAGE: A Scholarly Journal on Black Women in Soujourner: The Women’s Forum by Angela Bowen

Angela Bowen

Follow this and additional works at: https://vc.bridgew.edu/jiws

Part of the Women's Studies Commons

Recommended Citation

This item is available as part of Virtual Commons, the open-access institutional repository of Bridgewater State University, Bridgewater, Massachusetts. This journal and its contents may be used for research, teaching, and private study purposes. Any substantial or systematic reproduction, re-distribution, re-selling, loan or sub-licensing, systematic supply, or distribution in any form to anyone is expressly forbidden. Authors share joint copyright with the JIWS. ©2022 Journal of International Women's Studies.
This journal and its contents may be used for research, teaching and private study purposes. Any substantial or systematic reproduction, re-distribution, re-selling, loan or sub-licensing, systematic supply or distribution in any form to anyone is expressly forbidden. ©2021 Journal of International Women's Studies.

This article was originally published in SAGE: A Scholarly Journal on Black Women in Soujourner: The Women’s Forum in 1984. It discusses the importance of creating a journal that fills a long-unmet need for scholarly research on Black women.

"SAGE: A Journal That Fills a Long Unmet Need" by Angela Bowen

SAGE is a journal that specifically addresses the needs of Black women in academia and society. It aims to provide a platform for the voices and research of Black women, which are often overlooked in traditional academic journals.

The journal is published quarterly and welcomes submissions from scholars, activists, and other stakeholders who are dedicated to advancing the understanding of Black women's experiences and contributions.

The editorial board includes a diverse group of scholars and activists who are committed to ensuring that the journal reflects the diverse perspectives and voices of Black women.

SAGE is an important resource for researchers, activists, and policymakers who are working to advance the causes of Black women and to promote equity and justice for all.

The journal's focus on Black women in academia is particularly important, as it highlights the unique challenges and barriers that Black women face in the academic community.

Overall, SAGE is a valuable resource for anyone interested in understanding the experiences and contributions of Black women in academia and society.