Dear friends,

There was a time not all that long ago when the phrase “getting a college education” represented a relatively simple, discrete component of the American dream. Students would spend four years of their young lives at a given institution, earn a bachelor's degree and enter the workforce with an advantage. Back then, going to college was thought of as just one of the many obvious and necessary steps in a very linear path to success — or at least, so it was, for the people who could afford it.

As access to higher education has improved (thanks in no small part to the growth of state colleges and universities), its function has become increasingly dynamic. Once charged solely with stimulating the learning process, institutions of higher learning are now called upon to prepare the next generation of well-rounded citizens, instill it with character and prepare it to participate in the world of the 21st century. Furthermore, educating this new generation can no longer be thought of as an open-and-shut process; rather, colleges and universities have adapted to become full partners in the lifelong quest for growth and discovery.

At Bridgewater State College, these are missions we take very seriously. As you'll read about on the pages that follow, we have positioned ourselves exceedingly well to meet these challenges, as evidenced by the achievements of our students and faculty. Whether it's through the unique travel opportunities we make available to our students, the wealth of innovative options we offer at the graduate level or the many ways in which the college helps to connect one generation with another, it's obvious that we've embraced our expanded role with great alacrity.

I hope you'll take a few moments to read about the many exciting things going on at Bridgewater State College and to discover the multitude of ways in which we are preparing our people not just to participate in today's world, but to lead it.

Sincerely,

Dana Mohler-Faria
President

President’s Message
Soon after her husband died, Lisa Brennan realized she would have to return to school. “I looked at my situation and thought I couldn’t continue doing what I was doing and support myself and my three children,” she said.

Ms. Brennan saw an ad for the new Master of Social Work (MSW) program at Bridgewater State College last spring and decided to call. She asked some questions about the curriculum and decided immediately that she had found the right course of study.

“I had been thinking that I’d like to get into counseling,” she said. “When my family and I were helped so much by grief counseling, I decided I wanted to work with families who were going through the same thing I did.” Ms. Brennan, an educational assistant at the Burnell School, began her master’s program this fall. She expects to complete the course work in three years and begin a career in family therapy.

Bridgewater State College’s MSW program is the college’s latest addition to its expanded graduate degree offerings.

BSC’s Master of Public Administration program enrolled its first students in 1996, followed by new master’s programs in management in 2000 and criminal justice in 2001. These programs complement graduate offerings in the School of Education and Allied Studies.

The college’s growth in graduate programs reflects its commitment to meet regional economic needs by providing trained professionals to businesses, government agencies and other employers in Southeastern Massachusetts, said Dr. Nancy Kleniewski, BSC’s provost and vice president for academic affairs. Each program was created based on needs surveys and input from local industry leaders.

“The public has long been aware of Bridgewater’s many fine offerings in education fields, and I am happy that people are discovering our master’s programs in other fields,” Dr. Kleniewski said. “Many employees besides teachers need graduate degrees to move ahead in their careers, so we expect to see a steady increase in demand for graduate programs in professional and liberal arts areas.”

Recently added master’s degrees in social work, criminal justice, management and public administration join BSC’s graduate programs in education, teaching, English, psychology, physical education and computer science. Graduate enrollment at the college for the 2002-2003 academic year stood at 1,968, which marked a 12 percent increase from the previous year. Statewide, the college’s graduate program is the 14th largest of all colleges and universities, both public and private.

As word spreads of the college’s expanded graduate offerings, more prospective students are asking about courses, said Dr. Edward Minnock, dean of graduate and continuing education.

“We receive between 30 and 50 calls a day, and that doesn’t include e-mails,” he said. “That’s one of the reasons we moved so quickly on the Master of Social Work program. We kept getting calls saying ‘When are you going to start one here?’"

The social work program grew out of BSC’s strong undergraduate curriculum. In the mid-1990s, the program regularly enrolled more than 250 students, which ranked it among the top 10 percent of undergraduate programs in the country based on size, said Dr. Rebecca Leavitt, professor of social work and former department chairperson. The program’s legacy, combined with a growing need for master’s-level, trained social workers made the timing right to start the graduate program this year, she said.

The program takes a strength-based approach to social work that involves clients, families and their communities in solving problems. “We see people as having strengths rather than deficits,” said Dr. James Decker, coordinator of the master’s program. “The program will teach students to honor individuals and their communities. Our intent is to build on their strengths and resiliencies.”

Faculty are establishing an advisory board of social work practitioners to ensure the college remains aware of regional needs and addresses those requirements in the curriculum. The advisory group will also help the college strengthen relationships with community-based programs and take advantage of collaborations, said Dr. Lucinda King-Frode, associate professor of social work and chairperson of the department.

Management degree responds to business needs

The Master of Science in Management (MSM) program, like the college's other graduate programs, serves a combination of pre-career students and mid-career professionals. The program's development was supported by a needs assessment showing that business activity was continuing to expand in Southeastern Massachusetts. Management faculty designed the curriculum with input from local CEOs and company vice presidents through the college's Business Advisory Council.

The panel of 20 regional industry leaders described the need for graduate business education that differed from a traditional MBA. Executives said their companies would benefit most from training that emphasized critical thinking, use of information technology and the cross-functional skills that help workers function more effectively in teams.

“Our program requires teams of students to work on projects where each participant contributes in his or her area of expertise,” said Dr. Laurence Richards, dean of the School of Management and Aviation Science. That students have diverse backgrounds and professional experience creates a richer learning experience, he said.

The MSM program began offering Saturday classes in a compressed, six-week format last spring.

Karen Jason, a management student and director of planning and construction for BSC’s Office of Facilities Management and Planning, heard about the Saturday option and switched her summer schedule to take advantage of the all-day classes. “My husband coaches football in the fall, so having six Saturdays when he has to watch the kids is better than 14 weeknights when we would need childcare,” she said.

Criminal justice program tackles rigors of profession

BSC’s graduate program in criminal justice grew out of a popular criminology concentration in the sociology major and was designed to meet requests by local law enforcement and corrections officials for more rigorous and relevant training.

“Criminal justice programs across the state had a bad reputation,” said Dr. Walter F. Carroll, professor of sociology and criminal justice and former chairperson of the department. “We wanted an intellectually rigorous program that addressed the five primary areas that the Academy of Criminal Justice Sciences said that a graduate program should cover — criminology, corrections, law adjudication, juvenile and criminal justice processes, and the role of law enforcement in society.”

Dr. Carroll said an effort was made to hire program faculty with a combination of field experience and solid academic training. “We didn’t just want people in the classroom telling war stories,” he said.

Timothy Murray, who works for the Massachusetts State Police Bomb Squad at Logan Airport, said he chose BSC's graduate program in criminal justice based on its broad mix of students and focus on data-driven theory. “It's nice to know that some of the theories we apply are supported empirically. My courses have helped me to think more critically when I'm faced with an issue on the job,” Mr. Murray said.

Student interest and enrollment numbers continue to exceed expectations as the program enters its third year, said Dr. Kim MacInnis, associate professor of sociology and criminal justice. Students must apply formally for one of 30 full-time program slots after taking two courses. They are required to describe their backgrounds and explain how graduate training will enhance their professional lives, Dr. MacInnis said.

Boosting professionalism in the public sector

The Master of Public Administration (MPA) program began in 1996 on the heels of a statewide movement to professionalize town and city government. The administrative core of local government had generally lacked formal training prior to the 1990s, said Dr. Victor DeSantis, executive assistant to the president, who was hired in 1995 to help create the graduate public administration program.

In its first few years, the MPA program attracted students mainly from municipal government and nonprofit human services. Today's students reflect a broader representation of the public sector, including state government officials and people working in higher education, Dr. DeSantis said.

Some course topics overlap with the MSM program, but there are major distinctions as well. “We strive to help students understand that managing in the public sector is different from managing in the private sector,” Dr. DeSantis said. “There are political, legal and ethical contexts that demand attention in the public sector.”

John Klimm, Barnstable town manager, is a student in the MPA program.

John Klimm had just started in his position as Barnstable town manager when he enrolled in the MPA program. He said the academic training gave him the tools and confidence to handle labor relations, human resources and municipal finance. “I’m really indebted to the program,” he said.

Master of Science in Management Rises From Skill Sets Required by New Economy

The modern business environment places new demands on 21st century managers.

Globalization, technology and the accelerated pace of change in business all require today’s industry leaders to develop new skills.

Bridgewater State College responded four years ago with a Master of Science in Management program that prepares students and professionals in Southeastern Massachusetts to succeed in the new economy.

“The primary purpose of the MSM is to prepare students for modern managerial positions that require the use of information technology, applied systems thinking, large-scale project management, and the ability to lead people and organizations through complex change,” said Dr. Laurence Richards, dean of the School of Management and Aviation Science.

The program was introduced after more than a year of study and consultation with local business leaders and economic development professionals through the college’s Business Advisory Council. This group, along with a new Economic Development Council, will continue to ensure that the program provides the type of training that meets regional trade and industry needs.

Management faculty had first leaned toward creating an MBA program from the perspective of name recognition, Dr. Richards said. But local employers told faculty there was a need for a different kind of business education in the region — one that trained managers for the particular demands of the 21st century economy.

“The biggest difference between a Master of Science in Management and a traditional MBA is that MBAs are functionally focused programs with courses in finance or accounting or human resources,” said Dr. Carleton Donchess, chairperson of the Department of Accounting and Finance. “We intentionally chose to be cross-functional and train students in such areas as project management and leadership.”

The program offers concentrations in accounting, marketing, organizational development and technology management. In the past year, faculty modified the program to ensure sufficient numbers of students in each concentration so that group projects will more closely resemble real-world work teams, Dr. Richards said.

Students bring a range of experiences with them, which enhances the classroom interaction, said Professor Mercer Fellouris, chairperson of the management department. “We have people from the public sector, people from private industry, people who are heads of their own businesses and people who are somewhere on the management scale and looking to move up a notch,” she said.

A significant number of international students also enrich the instruction and provide a more global perspective on management issues, Professor Fellouris said.

Last spring, to accommodate time-strapped working adults, the program began offering Saturday classes in a compressed format. Karen Jason, director of planning and construction at BSC, jumped at the chance to accelerate her progress in the program.

“It’s a full day and a lot of work, so it’s not for everybody,” said Ms. Jason who enrolled in the MSM program to learn about organizational theory and managing contractors. “But for me, one full day of class was easier on my husband and kids than 14 weeknights. It just made sense logistically.”

Graduates of the MSM program are equipped for leadership positions in accounting, finance, project or product management, marketing and human resources.

Professor Fellouris said that some students are already applying new knowledge to their current jobs.

“A lot of the projects that they’re working on are for their actual businesses,” she said. “It’s real, hands-on business experience. You come to school at night, learn something and then go into work the next day and apply it.”
Gail Fortes found the training she received in the Master of Public Administration (MPA) program at Bridgewater State College to be so relevant to her executive position at the YWCA of Southeastern Massachusetts that she keeps her textbooks within arm’s reach.

“I use all of those skills that I learned in the program, especially in areas related to personnel, management, finances and ethics,” said Ms. Fortes, who was promoted to associate executive director at the YWCA after receiving her master’s degree in 2001.

James Gallagher was a Hanover firefighter in 1998 when he decided it was time to further his education. He heard about BSC’s MPA program and decided that his interests and the college’s curriculum were a good match.

“This was applicable to what I was doing, and the affordability and the ability to go to Bridgewater State College sold me on the program,” said Mr. Gallagher, who has since been promoted to fire captain.

The MPA program, which began in 1996, prepares students for leadership roles in public and nonprofit careers. The degree is designed to develop managerial competence and skills in data analysis, negotiating, budgeting, personnel management and balancing competing public interests.

“This is an exciting time to be involved in public sector leadership,” said Dr. Brendan Burke, assistant professor of political science and coordinator of the MPA program. He said public service professionals today feel the pull of two distinct forces. The heroics of firefighters and other public servants following Sept. 11, 2001, won new respect for the vocation. But at the same time, a struggling economy has forced government agencies, municipalities and nonprofits to cut costs and cope with uncertainty.

Dr. Burke said he saw students’ stress levels rise this spring as some wrestled with budget cuts and the threat of layoffs in their municipal departments. He responded by turning the fiscal climate into a learning opportunity and developing a summer course on “cutback management.” Each student picked a jurisdiction, analyzed its fiscal constraints and developed an action plan.

Instructors try to instill in students a sense of responsibility to contribute to the public good, beyond the limits of their jobs. This is accomplished by engaging students in fieldwork with local agencies.

Projects involve analyses of real-world scenarios. One assignment had students evaluate Department of Mental Health program sites to determine why certain locations relied more on hospitalizations than outpatient treatment. A student also performed a lifecycle cost analysis that involved calculating whether a local high school should plant grass seed or install artificial turf on its football field.

Some MPA students do not have professional work experience, but most are in-career professionals who are looking to advance in their jobs, said Dr. Victor DeSantis, executive assistant to the president and an instructor in the MPA program.

Barnstable Town Manager John Klimm had just started in his position in 1999 when he enrolled in the MPA program. “I chose Bridgewater because of its reputation in the field of public administration and because of the convenience,” he said. “I’m really indebted to the professors there. I got a lot out of the very specific courses that addressed labor relations, human resources and municipal finance.”

Dr. DeSantis said the MPA program is meeting its goals to enhance the professional development of public sector employees in Southeastern Massachusetts. “These are people who have moved forward in their careers in the public and nonprofit sectors,” he said. “And the MPA was one piece in their development that contributed to their success.”
Master of Social Work Grows From Strong Roots

Bridgewater State College’s undergraduate social work program had earned such a strong reputation by the mid-1990s that its enrollment climbed to more than 250 students, ranking it in the top 10 percent of social work programs in the country, based on size.

“It was a combination of the program being well known, the economy being strong and a lot of people going back to school,” said Dr. Rebecca Leavitt, professor of social work, who was hired in 1977 along with Dr. Dorothy Howard to help create a new Department of Social Work at BSC. Prior to that, the field of study had been a major within the Department of Sociology.

From these well-established undergraduate roots, the new master’s program in social work was developed and launched this fall.

“I’m so pleased this day has come. It’s so right,” said Aida Bruns, professor emerita of social work and chairperson of the department from 1986 to 1989 and again until her retirement in 1992. “We needed a program where a low-income person could aspire to a graduate degree without having to worry about childcare.”

One of the first tasks for Professor Bruns, as department chairperson in the late-1980s, was to explore the possibility of creating a joint Master of Social Work (MSW) program with Salem State College. Following a discussion of the merits and disadvantages of a joint program, as well as the distance between the two colleges, the matter was dropped.

A decade later, though, the timing was right.

“Our students will be ready to be employed upon graduation at a wide array of social welfare organizations because they will have had supervised experience working with clients.”

- Dr. Rebecca Leavitt

The MSW program at Bridgewater State College was in such high demand that a combination of advertising and word-of-mouth publicity generated more than 500 inquiries and about 90 applications for 30 program slots.

Local service providers had been saying that there weren’t enough local training opportunities for their staff, said Dr. Lucinda King-Frode, chairperson of the department. The need for graduate education exists both for professional and practical reasons, she said, because reimbursements from the state and private insurers encourage providers to use licensed workers with master’s level training.

Graduates of the MSW program will be eligible to sit for the licensing examination that leads to the Licensed Clinical Social Worker certificate once the program receives candidacy status from the Council on Social Work Education, which should occur later this year. The 62-credit program can be completed in two years on a full-time basis or in four years part time.

Tom Dunse, director of the Old Colony YMCA’s Diagnostic Assessment Center in Fall River, said agencies like his will benefit from the new program at BSC. “On the business side, master’s training is important for licensing and reimbursement,” he said. “But with graduate training, you also get a more experienced and well-rounded social worker.”

Mr. Dunse said that his employees have asked about the MSW program at BSC and several have applied. His agency performs clinical assessments of adolescents and develops stabilization programs for clients in short-term residency there.

BSC’s program will also address the changing nature of social work. The curriculum is strengths-based, which means students will be taught to involve their clients and empower them to contribute to solutions. Field experience will also be a significant part of the program.

Fieldwork will be enhanced by the social work department’s legacy of strong relations with local service providers, Dr. Leavitt said. “Our students will be ready to be employed upon graduation at a wide array of social welfare organizations because they will have had supervised experience working with clients,” she said.

Professor Bruns said the department’s comfortable size will allow students and faculty to develop relationships that continue beyond the classroom as graduates become social work practitioners. This makes the program rewarding for both groups, she said.

“People are redefining what’s important, and we work with what’s really important — the care of family and the healing of the sick,” Professor Bruns said. “The rewards are more than tangible. It’s about creativity and belief in people.”
Geography’s All in the Family for These Graduates

After graduation in May, both Cristin Burke of Eastham and Lauren Greenlaw of Lakeville were able to go home and hang their BSC geography degrees on the wall — right next to the geography degrees earned years ago by their parents.

Both students emphatically deny their parents pushed them toward geography or toward Bridgewater State College. But somehow, after trying other subjects and even other colleges, both ended up in the same BSC department — and, in some cases, the exact same classes — as their parents.

“We had always discussed this stuff at home around the dinner table, but he didn’t push it. I think it was a relief when I settled on geography. Dad was trying not to say, ‘I told you so,’” Cristin said of her father, Hank Burke, who received a master’s in geography from BSC in 1991.

“I remember my mom in college, drawing maps and coloring them in,” Lauren said of her mother, Catherine Sarafinas, who graduated from BSC with a bachelor’s degree in geography in 1998. “I have intellectual discussions with Mom. That’s one of the greatest things that has come out of this.”

For Lauren, sitting in geography classrooms listening to lectures by geography professors seemed a little like déjà vu. After all, she had been there before. As a single mother both working and attending college, Catherine had sometimes found herself without a babysitter and had to bring young Lauren to class.

Sharing a major with your mother has unexpected benefits. Sometimes, when stuck on a question, Lauren would call her mom at work. Catherine, who also received a master’s in community planning from the University of Rhode Island, uses her physical geography knowledge every day in the drinking water program at the Department of Environmental Protection. She’d help her daughter with information, written resources or at least a push in the right direction.

More importantly, parent and child click on a new level. “We actually get to have environmental discussions and talk concepts and issues,” Lauren said. “It’s great being able to pick each other’s brain. It’s wonderful to be able to do that with your child when they’ve grown.”

For Two BSC Juniors, a Yearlong Canadian Adventure Begins

When BSC juniors Leigh Croteau and Haley Staples first received word that they had been named Killam Fellows and awarded a $10,000 scholarship for study and travel in Canada, both were understandably excited. After the initial euphoria wore off, however, each had a very different reaction to the upcoming academic year to be spent north of the border.

For Leigh Croteau, a Worcester native and physical education major, the opportunity to spend two semesters on exchange at Acadia University in Wolfville, Nova Scotia brought with it some immediate challenges. “I have a huge list of things I have to take care of before I leave,” said Leigh. “And while I’ve been fortunate to have traveled quite a bit in my life, this is very different. I’m getting ready to transplant my entire life to another country for a whole year.”

Leigh was also comfortable in admitting that one of the items on her to-do list was locating Wolfville on a map.

Haley Staples, an exercise science major and resident of nearby Mansfield, will be studying at the University of Toronto and is anxious for a different reason. “I’m really just a small town girl, and this is a really big step for me,” said Haley. “Toronto is a really big and cosmopolitan city, but it’s also very clean, safe and friendly. I’ll be a long way from home, but never really that far away.”

This is precisely the type of learning experience in which Dr. Dana Mohler-Faria hopes to see more BSC students take part. “International study is an invaluable part of the overall learning process at Bridgewater,” said President Mohler-Faria. “I have no doubt that these students will return next fall with new wisdom, fresh perspectives and a greater appreciation of the world around us. They are certainly about to embark on an exciting — and eye-opening — adventure.”

Funded by the American Killam Trusts and administered by the Foundation for Educational Exchange Between Canada and the United States, the undergraduate fellowship program is the first of its kind operating between the two countries and is a major component of the trusts’ multifaceted efforts to foster cross-border scholarly exchange.

“We were obviously very happy when Bridgewater was selected to participate in this very unique opportunity,” said Anthony Cicerone, economics professor and the director of the college’s interdisciplinary Canadian Studies Program. “We were already in very select company, but having two of our students chosen says a lot about the kind of reputations the college and our program enjoy across the United States and Canada.”

Indeed, Bridgewater State College was one of only two public institutions in the nation invited by fellowship organizers to participate. Other New England schools include Brown, Dartmouth, Harvard, MIT, Smith, Tufts, Wellesley and Yale. Bridgewater State College’s inclusion in the program is indicative of the American Killam Trusts’ continued support for the college; BSC is in the midst of receiving a five-year, $500,000 gift from the organization.

Both students have praised the dedication of their faculty sponsor, Professor John Kilbourne of the department of movement arts, health promotion and leisure studies. “Professor Kilbourne has been a terrific professor and dance instructor,” said Haley. “I’m very grateful to him for helping us tap into this amazing opportunity.”

Dr. Anthony Cicerone (from left), director, Canadian Studies Program; Haley Staples; Leigh Croteau; and Dr. Dana Mohler-Faria, president of Bridgewater State College

Professor Kilbourne, certainly not a stranger to Canada himself having recently completed an extended sabbatical in the Canadian Arctic, was overjoyed with the news. “The Killam Fellowships will change these students’ lives. This is a one-of-a-kind opportunity, and as a faculty member, it reminds me of why we are all here: to encourage and challenge our students to go that extra step, to take that extra risk, and to live a full and inspired life.”

Both Leigh and Haley have every intention of making the most of their time in Canada. Haley is already making plans to try out for the University of Toronto’s dance team (she was a member of Professor Kilbourne’s dance company and its dance ensemble, The Blau Rhino), while Leigh is aiming to take in as much of the “natural paradise” of the Canadian Maritimes as she can.

“May this be the only time in my life that I can do something like this,” said Leigh. “I’m going to get everything I can out of this because it will be over in the blink of an eye.”
CART Recognizes Faculty Achievement

A number of faculty members and librarians at Bridgewater State College received grants administered through CART, the Center for the Advancement of Research and Teaching, during the 2002-2003 academic year.

All tenured and tenure-track faculty and librarians are eligible to submit proposals of up to $8,000 for Faculty-Librarian Research Grants, which have been funded by the Bridgewater State College Foundation since 1999.

Grant proposals are reviewed by the CART Faculty Librarian Research Grant Committee and recommendations are made to the vice president of academic affairs. Three awards were made during the fall 2002 round of proposal submissions, and 13 awards were made in the spring, totaling $108,767 for the year.

Faculty-Librarian Research Grants awarded in the fall included:

- Dr. Deborah Nemko, music, Recording of Preludes and Tocatinas for Piano.
- Donald Padgett, biology, Field Guide Illustrations and Maps.
- Dr. Julia Stakheinich, foreign languages, Adult Language Strategies and Tasks in the Immersion Setting.

Faculty-Librarian Research Grants awarded in the spring included:

- Gaylord George Candler, political science, Travel Research in Brazil: The Redemption of Alberto Guerreiro Ramos, Nonprofit Accountability in Public Policy.
- Dr. Thomas Curley, English, National Culture Wars: Johnson and Shaw’s Enquiry into Ossian.
- Dr. Edward Devaney, physics, Precision Spectroscopic Measurements of Atomic Rubidium and Diatomic Iodine.
- Dr. Richard Enright, earth sciences, Terraine Boundary Validation in the Sierra Madre, Guerrero, Mexico.
- Dr. Diana Fox, anthropology, Aids, Gender, and Economic Inequality: Voices of Women and Youth of Rural Jamaica.
- Dr. Ivana George, art, An Artist Residency to Produce a Body of Art Work.
- Dr. Andrew Harris, history, Labor and Liberty in the Eighteenth Century Atlantic World.
- Professor Joan Hausrath, art, A Study of the Creative Use of Acrylic Grounds, Salt, Etching Solutions in the Making of Fine Art Prints.
- Dr. James Hayes-Bohanan, earth sciences and geography, Latin America: Realms of Change (textbook).
- Dr. Leora Lev, foreign languages, Carmen’s Pleasure Vessel, Devil’s Backbone.
- Dr. Torben Lorenzen and Dr. Hang-Ling Chang, mathematics and computer science, Master Mind: A Predictor of Computer Programming Aptitude.
- Dr. Amos Nwosu, movement arts, health promotion and leisure studies, Exploration to Sub Sahara Africa for HIV/Aids Research.
- Prof. Dorothy Pulifer, art, Research and Study in Japan.

CART also recognized the following grant recipients and faculty who published books and articles in 2002-2003.

Small Grants

CART Small Grants are awarded for activities such as developing manuscripts for scholarly publications, research, curriculum preparation (beyond normal course preparation) and professional development opportunities, such as intensive workshops or specialized training sessions. CART awards these grants on a competitive basis. Nine small grants totaling $15,832 were awarded during 2002-2003.

Dr. Ruth Hannon, psychology, Working Families in Northern Ireland: Negotiating Unsafe Communities.
Professor Joan Hausrath, art, Investigation of Non-toxic Intalgio Printmaking.
Dr. Curtis Hoffman, anthropology, Astra 3 Site Data Recovery Program.
Dr. John Kilbourne, movement arts, health promotion and leisure studies, Building Bridges Through Dance Education and Performances.
Professor Rob Lorenson, art, Shipment of Artwork to California Show.
Dr. Margaret Lowe, history, Looking Good: Body Image Among College Women 1875-1930.
Dr. Salil Sachdev, music, The Percussion Music of Spain and Morocco.

International Aviation Fraternity Reunion

Forty-three alumni, spouses, friends and families gathered at the North Attleboro Hockomock YMCA grounds on July 26 for a picnic and reunion. There were plenty of activities for everyone, including aviation piñatas. The festivities continued at the Mansfield airport where more food was grilled and more reminiscing about BSC took place. There was talk about making this an annual event.

Alumni Weekend 2003

Reunion committees involved in planning the various reunions that took place on June 6 and 7 worked with great diligence to ensure that everyone would have a great time.

The weather was damp, but spirits certainly were not.

The Class of 1953 began its 50th reunion on Friday evening with a cocktail reception and dinner at the new East Campus Commons dining facility. Many were reunited for the first time in 50 years. They all received a special memory booklet that contained photographs and a biographical update of what classmates have been doing since graduation. On Saturday morning, some chose to attend a videotaping session where they shared fond memories of their days at Bridgewater Teachers College.

The Annual Meeting of the Bridgewater State College Alumni Association was held in the Horace Mann Auditorium with BAA President, F. Scott Longo, ’89, presiding. Dr. Dana Mohler-Faria, president of BSC, accepted gifts for the college from the Class of 1953 in the amount of $58,000 and $11,000 from the Class of 1943. The funds will be used to enhance scholarship opportunities for current students.

The following slate of officers were approved for the 2003-2004 academic year:
F. Scott Longo, ’89, president
John P. Hackett, ’55, president-elect
Carolyn Van Buskirk Turchon, ’62, vice president
Kathleen Moore Flaherty, ’91, secretary
Ronald Rezzani, ’83, treasurer
Robert P. Ryan, ’55, assistant treasurer

Two new directors were appointed to the board for terms of three years each:
Barbara Aguiar, ’62
Carol Wilusz Kryzanek, ’69

The StoneForge Tavern was once again the setting for the all alumni dinner. Everyone enjoyed the fine fare. Gary Getchell, ’57, provided entertainment with a comedy routine that everyone truly enjoyed.

The Class of 1993 held its 10th reunion in Flynn Dining Commons with approximately 60 people attending. The original plan of having a barbecue under the tent on the quadrangle was hampered by impending thunderstorms. However, when President Mohler-Faria stopped by to welcome the attendees, people were having a great time in spite of the weather.

Major Awards

The Bridgewater State College Alumni Association presented awards to the following outstanding alumni, faculty and staff at the annual awards dinner:

Bridgewater State College Alumni Association Award for Outstanding Service
Ms. Carolyn Van Buskirk Turchon, ’62

Dr. Murphy’s dedication to physical education has extended into scholarly presentations to The National Wellness Institute, the National Community College Wellness Conference, the Mid-South National Fitness Conference, the Alabama College Association, and The Association for the Study of Play. She was named Outstanding Faculty Member of the Year in 1992 at Shelton State Community College in Tuscaloosa and received the college’s Dr. and Mrs. John Todd Award for Exceptional Achievement in Teaching in 2001.

Nicholas P. Tillinghast Award for Outstanding Leadership and Professional Achievement in the Field of Public Education
Mr. Nicola Micozzi Jr., ’71

For the past 23 years, Mr. Micozzi has served as the K-12 science coordinator for the Plymouth Public Schools. In addition, he taught earth science for nine years at Brockton High School, held a position on the Executive Board of Directors for the commonwealth’s State Systemic Initiative Project for five years, was co-chair of the Massachusetts State School Board’s Mathematics, Science and Technology (Continued on page 15)
(From page 14) Advisory Council, and is an 11-year member of the Commonwealth’s Assessment Committee. He has served as president of the Southeast Massachusetts Association of Science Supervisors and the Massachusetts Association of Science Supervisors (MASS), of which he was an executive board member for eight years. He is president of the National Science Education Leadership Association (NSELA) and a member of the National Science Teachers Association (NSTA) Governing Council.

Just as Mr. Micozzi’s professional successes distinguish him as an outstanding leader in the field of public education, so do his professional recognitions. He has been inducted into the Massachusetts Science Educators Hall of Fame, named Outstanding Science Educator by the Massachusetts Association of Science Supervisors and the Massachusetts Association of Science Teachers, and received an Outstanding Service and Leadership Award from NSELA. The Massachusetts Association of Science Educators named Mr. Micozzi as the 2002 Most Outstanding Science Educator in Massachusetts.

Martha D. Jones Award for Exceptional Dedication to Students Dr. Janice Harris
Dr. Harris serves as BSC’s faculty athletic representative to the National Collegiate Athletic Association, where she functions as a member of the Department of Athletics Compliance Committee and adviser to the Student Athletic Advisory Committee. She has served as a peer and department chair evaluator and has chaired and served on numerous campus committees, including the MAHPLS Curriculum, Undergraduate Curriculum, New Course, and Who’s Who in American Colleges and Universities Selection Committees. Her most recent endeavors include a leadership role in retirement orientation sessions for BSC employees and an acclaimed education session that she and five BSC recreation students presented at the Massachusetts Recreation and Park Association’s State Annual Convention.

Dr. Harris has dedicated her life to her love of teaching. The successes of her students have resulted in the placement of recreation students in more than 200 internship sites and the establishment of a nationwide alumni network of leisure service professionals who provide invaluable access to guest speakers and future employers. It is this combination of dedication, wisdom, enthusiasm and productivity that makes Dr. Janice Harris this year’s recipient of the Martha D. Jones Exceptional Dedication to Students Award.

Dr. V. James DiNardo Award for Excellence in Teaching Dr. Suzanne M. Ramczyk
During her 18 years as professor of theatre arts at Bridgewater State College, Suzanne Ramczyk has had a profound impact on BSC students and faculty alike, helping to forge a comprehensive theatre arts program at the college and bring the artistic culture of stage performance to the BSC community. During her tenure, Dr. Ramczyk has taught 18 different courses in the theatre program, eight of which were created by her; been a major contributor to two program revisions; mentored more than 25 students in directed studies, advanced individual projects and honors work; and established teaching assistantships for senior-level theatre arts majors. In each of the productions she managed, Dr. Ramczyk endeavored to create significant staff positions for students, giving them exposure to positions not normally filled by student theatre workers. She arranged to bring in a panel of BSC theatre alumni to perform for and speak to theatre arts students about their lives since graduating from BSC.

Much of Dr. Ramczyk’s out-of-class time has been spent coaching students for important auditions and competitions. She spearheaded the department’s involvement in the American College Theatre Festival; arranged for guest artists and numerous BSC theatre alumni in her classes to perform design, and make presentations to theatre majors; established the department’s Script Library; and served on several departmental and all-college committees. Throughout her career, she has made more than 25 conference presentations, functioned as a consultant to schools and theatres throughout New England, directed several productions off campus — all of which have featured BSC theatre alumni — and worked with two major regional theatres: the American Repertory Theatre and the Trinity Repertory Theatre.

Dr. Adrian Rondileau Award for Professional Achievement and Community Service Ms. Suzanne K. Condon, ’79
During her tenure as assistant commissioner of environmental health at the Massachusetts Department of Public Health (MDPH), Suzanne Condon has overseen several nationally recognized studies, including a report linking the prenatal exposure of children to drinking water contaminants to the development of childhood leukemia — a report that became (Continued on page 16)
the subject of a major motion picture, A Civil Action, released in 2000. Ms. Condon’s pioneering leadership continues to garner beneficial discoveries in the field of environmental health, most notably with her research concerning the prevalence of lupus in African-American and other women of color and investigating the role of environmental factors in the escalating rates of pediatric asthma.

Ms. Condon’s work has earned her state and national recognition, including the U.S. Agency for Toxic Substances and Disease Registry Special Services Award, a number of outstanding service awards from the MDPH, and the Governor’s Award for Pride in Performance. She is a recipient of the Massachusetts Environmental Health Association’s Dr. Joseph S. Goldfarb Award for Exemplary Service in the Professional Practice of Environmental Public Health in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. Additionally, Emmanuel College named Ms. Condon its Outstanding Graduate Management Student for the program’s 25-year history, and also has been presented with the Curtis Hilliard Award for Dedicated Service and Outstanding Achievement in Public Health.

Dr. Adrian Tinsley Award for Achievement in the Arts

Mr. Steve T. Mills, ’82

Since his graduation from Bridgewater State College with a Bachelor of Arts degree, Steve Mills has achieved international renown for his explorations in applying photo-realistic techniques to oil painting. Each of his works is painstakingly detailed, evoking the sense of looking at a photograph, and yet the medium is comprised of linen and oils combined in vivid and precise artistry to create the realistic illusion of his landscape and still-life subjects.

A year-round resident of Martha’s Vineyard throughout his childhood and part- to full-time resident of the Vineyard for the past 40 years, Mr. Mills has incorporated his keen awareness of and sensitivity to the island’s surroundings as a central theme in his explorations. The interplay of light and shadow create images that at times appear to move beyond the two dimensions of his paintings, creating what critics have described as the “shock of recognition” power that these works possess.

In recent years, Mr. Mills’ subject matter has shifted to still-life treatments, exploring the transformation of oils into the illusion of glass and the dramatic interplay between glass and light. His accomplishments with this subject matter have earned him status as one of the foremost photo-realistic painters of glass today and continue to attract avid collectors of his work. A particularly prolific artist, Mr. Mills has not only produced, but has sold nearly all of his 465 oils over the last 20 years, with his work appearing in many fine art collections throughout the world.

CareerNet

Information, Advice, Networking and Support

What is CareerNet?

CareerNet is BSC’s alumni career advisory network designed to assist current students and alumni with their career planning. CareerNet consists of a group of alumni volunteers who would like to share their experiences with students and other alumni. The NEW CareerNet program is Web based.

Who should join?

We are looking for alumni in all career fields, including business, education, health care, human services, nonprofit organizations, government and those that are self-employed.

How can CareerNet alumni assist BSC students?

Alumni can provide advice by phone, e-mail or in person. You can participate through:

- On-campus networking events
- Informational interviews
- Career panel guest speaking
- Mentoring to students of color or GLBT students

What topics do BSC students want to explore?

Students’ inquiries may cover a wide range of topics regarding your career field including:

- Skills necessary to enter your field of work
- Career path and upward mobility
- Current trends and job market outlook
- Tips for job hunting and networking
- Advice for a successful transition from college into the workplace

How do I get started?

Go to http://www.monstertrak.com. You will need to select Career Contact and Alumni Network on the menu. Once in the system, you will select REGISTER and follow the step-by-step instructions.
One of Bridgewater State College's most generous donors has become the college's most significant benefactor to date — leaving $1 million for the development of science programs at her alma mater.

Edith (Glick) Shoolman, 98, of Newton, a member of the Class of 1925, died at her Newton home on April 4. The college's Office of Development was notified by the attorney handling the Shoolman estate of the $1 million bequest in June, said Ms. Jane Bradford, '72, G'76, assistant vice president.

Ms. Shoolman had contributed $50,000 a year to the college to purchase science equipment since 1991. The $600,000 earmarked for science equipment across the years has enabled the college "to have teaching capabilities we would not have imagined," said Dr. Hardy Moore, professor and chairman of the Department of Biological Sciences.

"There are so many opportunities we give our students with this equipment," said the 24-year member of the BSC faculty. "This has just been a fantastic thing for us.

"The students have vastly more opportunities than they would have had otherwise," Dr. Moore said. "It lets them do cell cultures themselves — it's not just a demonstration or a movie. They do it; they learn it. It gives the students the experience, and that helps their employment opportunities," he said, adding that such hands-on experience "can be fairly rare at an institution such as ours."

The science fund has allowed the Tinsley Undergraduate Research Program as well as faculty research and teaching in the classroom to grow and flourish, said Dr. Frank Gorga, associate professor and chairman of the Department of Chemical Sciences.

Equipment purchases have allowed the college's new science faculty to continue their research, expanding knowledge in their respective fields. Equipment purchased with the Shoolman funds includes a glove box, where experiments are conducted in an inert atmosphere; a cell culture facility used for sterile manipulation of cell cultures; an ion chromatograph used in the Watershed Access Laboratory; and binocular microscopes for the biology department's introductory teaching laboratories.

In addition to the science equipment fund, Mrs. Shoolman endowed the Edith G. Shoolman English Award, given annually to a senior who has shown creative excellence in the study of English. She and her husband in 1990 endowed the Eliot B. and Edith G. Shoolman Scholarship, which is based on academic performance, college activities, and potential as a productive and giving member of society.

Ms. Bradford said it will take approximately a year for the bequest, made through Shoolman Charitable Trust, in the name of Edith and her husband, who predeceased her in 1990, to go through probate.

Edith Glick Shoolman

Edith Goldie Glick was born in Gardner, ME, and grew up in Bridgewater. The 1925 Normal Offering yearbook noted that she came to the school "firmly resolved to be a teacher. She will leave us in June to pursue the thorny path of an orator."

She married Mr. Shoolman in 1960, a number of years after the death of her first husband, Dr. David Weise. Her obituary noted "she was a woman of fierce determination." She was a poet, an avid gardener and a football fan.

Her deep concern for the education and welfare of children was demonstrated by her generosity to institutions that served that cause. The Shoolmans established the Shoolman Graduate School of Education at Hebrew College and were benefactors of the Solomon Schechter Day School in Newton as well as Bridgewater State College.

Mrs. Bradford said Bridgewater State College was unaware of Mrs. Shoolman's intention to leave such a large sum of money to her alma mater. She said Mrs. Shoolman never sought attention for her donations to the college and maintained a low profile. She received annual reports on the status of her donations from the development office and a letter of thanks from Dr. Moore, as a new chairman of the Department of Biological Sciences.

He would become one of the very few contacts she'd make on campus.

"I wrote her a letter to thank her, and one day she just called me and asked me what more she could purchase for the college," Dr. Moore said. "She was very enthusiastic about helping the college."

A telephone call and two letters were Dr. Moore's only communication with Mrs. Shoolman, although one day several years ago, she visited the Conant Science Building unannounced.

"She came by the department, she walked up and down the halls and asked where the microscopes were," Dr. Moore said. "She had a nurse or companion with her. A biology staff member in the office figured out who she was and accommodated her."

What the college will do with its single largest bequest is far from being decided. The $1 million was earmarked for development of science programs at the college. The college has been given an extraordinary range of options because of an extraordinary donation made by one of its truly philanthropic graduates.

Barbara Wolff Dawson and her husband, Jim, enjoyed a 12-day trip to Europe. They toured by boat, starting in Munich. They traveled down the Danube, stopping at different ports along the river where they would get off and tour the towns and cities such as Vienna. They spent three days in Budapest and felt that traveling by boat was very easy and the food was great. Marcia Crooks and the Class of 1955 reunion committee hosted a class luncheon at the Fireside Tavern in Middleboro. This is the second in a series of regional luncheons that the class hopes to have to help people stay connected to one another and to begin discussions pertaining to the 50th reunion, which is only two years away.

We all enjoyed our annual spring luncheon in June at the Stoneforge Tavern in Raynham. We were doing a little “dry run” because this may be the restaurant of choice for our 50th reunion. We’re pleased to report that the food, service and location were quite good, and about 30 members of the class were able to attend. Bob Bachman writes that he looks forward to calls or notes from classmates. Jacqueline Haslett, who officially retired from UMass in 2002, has been to Switzerland. She is enjoying her cottage on Lake Horace in New Hampshire. Carol Colcord Smale is spending time traveling to Maine, Oregon, Hilton Head, the Caribbean and steam boating on the Mississippi. She also enjoyed a cruise up the Hudson River two weeks after Sept. 11. Mary Golleho, who visited with her son and his family in Cincinnati and with her daughter and family in Australia, is looking forward to the 50th reunion. Beverly George is planning a trip to Switzerland to visit her daughter Ellie Sondeen Morlino is planning a trip to Switzerland to visit her daughter. Ellie Lydon Olson and Janet Lee Green are planning to head for Santa Fe, Durango and points west in the fall. Norma Goyetche Munroe and her husband, Alan, spent six weeks touring the Southwest last spring. They enjoyed Pike’s Peak, as well as many other stops. Barbara Vose Nicholson traveled to Paris and the Loire Valley last year and is looking forward to a trip to Italy in the near future. We are very happy to report that alumni, parents, friends and colleagues have helped us once again reach a new record in fund raising during fiscal year ’03 (July 1, 2002 - June 30, 2003). Despite the unstable economic times, we reached a total of: $1,573,110! Thank you so much for your continued support of Bridgewater State College.

Here’s the breakdown of gift activity during the past eight fiscal years:

One of the advantages of making a charitable gift of $10,000 to establish a gift annuity with BSC, is having a predictable income stream. Alumni often consider these gifts at major reunions or when they are nearing retirement.

In addition to receiving quarterly income for life, a partial charitable deduction is generated in the year of the gift. Lastly, if cash is used to fund the annuity some future income will be tax-free. Definitely a win-win situation.

For further information please contact Jane Rae Bradford ’72 G’76 for a confidential example to fit your situation at:

“What I like about the gift annuity I have at Bridgewater is that I know exactly what income to expect each year, despite the ups and downs of the stock market.”
