Workshop Titles and Abstracts for Session I

TIME: 11 AM - 12:30 PM

1) After Celebrating Differences: Moving to a Model for Transformative Change

Location: Council Chambers, Room 201– Rondileau Campus Center

Presenters: Barbara E. Bond, Ed.D., LICSW, Assistant Professor, School of Social Work and Faculty Associate, Office of Institutional Diversity, Bridgewater State University; and Judith S. Willison, PhD., LICSW, Assistant Professor, School of Social Work, and Faculty Associate, Institute for Social Justice, Bridgewater State University

Moderator: Diane Bell, Director, Office of Internship Programs, Bridgewater State University

This workshop explores how concepts of power and privilege and Harro’s cycles of socialization and liberation may be used in higher education. The cycle of socialization emphasizes the cultural forces creating and sustaining inequities; the cycle of liberation focuses on the process for transforming our patterns and creating personal and social change.

In the workshop we will discuss classroom practice, co-curricular activities, and employee/faculty activities which can either support or challenge systems of oppression. Approaches to surfacing and interrupting invisible systemic oppression will be demonstrated through activities which raise awareness, expand knowledge and enhance skills for change. The cycle of liberation will serve as a guide to designing and implementing diversity-focused initiatives for students and employees.

2) Effectively Working with Students Living with Disabilities

Location: Meeting Room 202– Rondileau Campus Center

Presenters: Dr. Delayne Connor, Associate Professor, Special Education and Communication Disorders, Bridgewater State University; and Dr. Jennifer Manak, Assistant Professor, Elementary and Early Childhood Education and Faculty Associate, Office of Institutional Diversity, Bridgewater State University

Moderator: Richardson Pierre-Louis, JD, Resident Director, Residence Life and Housing, Bridgewater State University

This interactive workshop will share practical ideas for developing an academic and workplace environment that supports the success of students living with disabilities. Together, we will share how we support diverse learners in our curricular and co-curricular settings and address our challenges and successes. We will examine case studies and discuss strategies that we can implement in our classrooms and our workplaces to support students living with disabilities. This session will focus on three essential aspects of serving individuals with disabilities: disability etiquette and accommodations; designing inclusive instruction and environments; and the self-awareness work necessary to address issues of disabilities.

3) Listening to Diversity & Difficulty: Pathways and Pitfalls of Controversy in the Classroom (or Committee)

Location: Classroom 204– Maxwell Library

Presenter: Laura Boutwell, PhD, MSW, Assistant Professor, Social Work, Bridgewater State University

Moderator: Raksmey Pen, Assistant Director of Upward Bound, Access and Transition, Bristol Community College

When we experience diverse points of view or styles of engagement, we often get understandably anxious about misunderstandings or mixed agendas. We tend to either listen or challenge, but rarely learn how to ask open honest questions, or to disagree productively while minding our biases. This interactive session uses a group empathy activity to engage “live” differences regarding controversial diversity issues participants provide as examples. For faculty or administrators dealing with difficult moments—in classroom, committee or conversation—the session actually models discussion, and then walks through steps and resources for facilitating challenging conversations or workshops for students, faculty or staff.

TIME: 11 AM -12:30 PM

4) Our Unique Stories in Our Voices: International Educators Speak!
Location: Crimson & White Room 209– Rondileau Campus Center

Presenters: Janie Bess, Director International Student Services, Lesley University; Maria Conley, Executive Director of International Administration, International Students & Scholars Office, University of Massachusetts Lowell; Patricia Demaras, Assistant Dean of International and Multicultural Affairs, Middlesex Community College; and Roopa Rawjee, Director, International Student and Scholar Services, Bridgewater State University

Moderator: Rodney Clark, Dean of Attleboro & Taunton, Academic Affairs, Bristol Community College

Four international educators will share stories about their individual experiences as women and professionals in international education. They will each discuss: Their personal and professional journey, challenges and barriers encountered, the process of self-awareness and growth, case studies of institutional culture and its influence on working with international students and diversity issues, support networks, etc. They will present examples of successes in diversity and international education. Presenters will engage the audience in small and large group discussions to explore their own journeys and begin the process of identifying opportunities and tools for individual and collective growth. This session is highly interactive.

5) P.E.A.C.E. (Practicing Empathy and Cultural Expertise): A Training Module
Location: Heritage Room 103– Maxwell Library

Presenters: Lee Forest, M.Ed., NCC, Director, LGBT Pride Center, Bridgewater State University; and Sydné M. Marrow, M.Ed., Director, Center for Multicultural Affairs, Bridgewater State University

Moderator: Melissa Santos, Administrative Assistant, Central Receiving and Inventory Management, Bridgewater State University

This “train the trainer” session uses an intercultural model to share promising practices for increasing awareness of and sensitivity to racial, sexual, and gender diversity among student leaders. The presenters will provide an overview of their training program that addresses race and GLBT issues. Participants will be given a training manual that includes activities and modules on terminology, microaggressions, communication styles and concrete action steps students can take to foster social justice.

6) Poetic Justice: Recognizing, Understanding, Acknowledging, and Welcoming Culturally Diverse Ways of Writing  This workshop is no longer available as the presenter could not join us today.

7) The Changing Lens of Student Conduct, Looking Beyond “Responsible”
Location: Classroom 205– Maxwell Library

Presenter: Beth Devonshire, Esq., Director, Student Conduct, Bridgewater State University

Moderator: Steven Camara, Assistant Director, Community Relations, Office of Fall River Community Media, Television Services, Bristol Community College

Too often, the words “student conduct” are associated with the negative, rather than educational and developmental. While certain roadblocks may exist to “charging” a student, nothing prohibits educational conversations which challenge the use of certain behaviors and language. These conversations help educate students on topics of privilege, inclusion and equity.

Additionally, the establishment of pro-social bystander initiatives help educate and instill in the students the ability to confront those who may expressing certain biases. While most bystander programs focus on issues of sexual misconduct, simple tweaks to the program can help utilize the same skillset in addressing instances of bias.

TIME: 1:30-3:00 PM

8) Assessing Diversity and Inclusion Across an Entire University: Sharing Opportunities, Challenges and the Way Ahead

Location: Heritage Room 103– Maxwell Library

Presenters: Adriana Zavala, PhD, Associate Professor of Art and Art History and Director of the Latino Studies Program, Tufts University; and Sabrina Williams, Director, Human Resources, Health Science campuses, Tufts University. All presenters involved in working groups for the Tufts Diversity Council.

Moderator: Mike Somers, Director, Library Administration, Bridgewater State University

Over 18 months, Tufts University undertook a university-wide self-assessment regarding diversity and inclusion. This review culminated in a report with 13 major recommendations, which were approved by the university Trustees in November 2013. In this session, we will share the structure and process of this self-assessment, including stakeholder engagement, the strengths and challenges of the approach, and the work ahead as we begin implementation and recruit a Chief Diversity Officer. We invite participants’ input on some of our anticipated implementation challenges and will encourage participants to share their own experiences with institutional self-assessment, and promising practices for implementation strategies.

9) Creating and Implementing a One Hour Inclusive Excellence Training for Faculty and Instructors

Location: Council Chambers Room 201– Rondileau Campus Center

Presenters: Amy Fuller, MSN, RNC-OB, WHNP, Clinical Instructor at the MGH Institute of Health Professions (MGH IHP) and Faculty for the Maternal/Child Health course for pre-licensure Nurse Practitioner students; Angela MacDonald, DNP-PHNL, RN, medical-surgical clinical coordinator, and teaching faculty for the accelerated Bachelor of Science in nursing program, MGH IHP, and teaches in the nursing program at Roxbury Community College; and Antonia Makosky, MS, MPH, ANP-BC, Adult Nurse Practitioner and Clinical Assistant Professor of Nursing, MGH IHP.

Moderator: Joseph Yasaian, Director, Campus Services/Attleboro, Academics, Bristol Community College

At the MGH Institute of Health Professions we designed a one-hour program for clinical nursing instructors to increase knowledge of challenges faced by diverse students, to foster open-minded attitudes, and to present teaching strategies to maximize student success. We believe principles from this training can be customized to any setting. Participants will role play using vignettes taken from student experiences. Our clinical faculty found our vignettes realistic and the teaching strategies helpful. In this workshop, participants will work in groups to create training programs for faculty colleagues.

10) Enhancing an Inclusive Environment: Employee Resource Groups – Best Practices

Location: Classroom 206– Maxwell Library

Presenters: Judith Stein, Organization Development Consultant, MIT’s Human Resources Department, MIT; Alyce Johnson, Manager of Staff Diversity and Inclusion, MIT; and Bill Kindred, Manager, Diversity and Inclusion, MIT; and Anna Wilbanks, Diversity and Inclusion Generalist, Human Resources, MIT Lincoln Laboratory, Massachusetts Institute of Technology

Moderator: Keri Powers, Associate Vice President, Human Resources, Bridgewater State University

Best practices research suggests that Employee Resource Groups (ERGs) are an effective vehicle for enhancing inclusion within organizations. MIT has just completed its pilot year with four newly formed ERGs. Come hear about our journey and, at the same time, assess your own organizations’ readiness for ERGs or other inclusive practices.
Workshop Titles and Abstracts for Session II

TIME: 1:30-3:00 PM

11) Filling in the Gaps: Providing Intersectional Support and Intercultural Engagement at a Liberal Arts College

Location: Meeting Room 202– Rondileau Campus Center

Moderator: Joyce Rain Anderson, PhD., Associate Professor, English and Faculty Associate, Office of Institutional Diversity, Bridgewater State University

This workshop will share best practices for creating a campus climate that authentically and strategically engages in intersectional competency and support as well as the promotion of intercultural engagement at a small liberal arts college. We will highlight aspects of first generation programming, alliance building between Centers, cultural competency trainings, and inclusive pedagogy initiatives for faculty that contribute to inching closer to social justice and equity. We will conclude the workshop with a conversation about assessing these practices.

12) From Data to Faculty Development: Locate, Understand, and Use Data for Effective Institutional Change

Location: Classroom 205– Maxwell Library

Presenters: Dr. Thomas Kling, Professor and Chairperson, Physics, PI, NSF funded STREAMS grant and lead co-I of a VISION project Gateway’s grant, Bridgewater State University; and Dr. Ann Brunjes, Assistant Professor, English, former Director, Office of Teaching and Learning, Project Compass member and lead co-I of a VISION project Gateway’s grant, Bridgewater State University

Moderator: Roopa Rawjee, Director, International Student and Scholar Services, Bridgewater State University

In this session, participants will consider how to obtain and use data to create a rich variety of faculty professional development activities supporting the success of students from all backgrounds. Bridgewater State University’s work in this area will be offered as a case study. Participants will then examine their institutional faculty development efforts and create action plans focused on utilizing existing campus data and other resources to support the success of all students.

13) Leveraging a Cross-Functional Team for Critical Professional Development: The Work after the Leading for Change 2013 Conference

Location: Crimson & White Room 209– Rondileau Campus Center

Presenters: Darcy Orellana, Affirmative Action Officer and Assistant Director of Human Resources, Middlesex Community College; Paula Pitcher, PhD, Vice President Enrollment Management, Research and Planning, Middlesex Community College; Phil Sisson, Provost and Vice President of Academic and Student Affairs, Middlesex Community College; and Peter Shea, MEd, Director, Office of Professional Development, Middlesex Community College

Moderator: Karen Jason, Associate Vice President, Facilities, Management and Planning, Bridgewater State University

There’s no single way for a campus to “act” after sending a team to the Leading for Change: Diversity Practices in Higher Education 2013 conference. At Middlesex Community College we leveraged the expertise and perspectives of our cross-functional and cognitively diverse team to establish a Closing the Achievement Gap working group to promote organizational learning about the topic. Learn how this collaborative group is telling the MCC data story and providing opportunities for the entire campus to learn, discuss and share knowledge about promoting success through inclusive practices at a college-wide professional day dedicated to closing the achievement gap.
Workshop Titles and Abstracts for Session II

TIME: 1:30–3:00 PM

14) Overpowering the Achievement Gap: A Targeted Approach to Moving the Needle

Location: Hanover/Duxbury Room 212– Rondileau Campus Center

Presenters: Judith R. Hogan, Dean, Business, Education and Public Service, Middlesex Community College; Matthew Olson, PhD, Dean, Humanities and Social Science, Middlesex Community College; and Kathleen Sweeney, PhD, Dean, Health and STEM, Middlesex Community College

Moderator: Reid Kimball, Assistant Director, Teaching and Technology Center, Bridgewater State University

Middlesex Community College has targeted the achievement gap as a key initiative. Our strategic plan calls for “focusing on research, pedagogies, and initiatives that assist in identifying and closing achievement gaps for diverse student populations and effectively support student success for all.” Join the three academic deans from MCC as they discuss a variety of initiatives from across the college designed to impact the achievement gap on their campus. The discussion will include the use of Achievement Coaches, Pathways Centers, Institutional Research, Grant Funding and campus wide professional development.

15) Reimagining Inclusive Excellence Planning

Location: Lecture Hall 013– Maxwell Library

Presenters: Sylvia Spears, PhD, Vice President of Diversity and Inclusion, Emerson College; and Robert Amelio, MSW, Director of Diversity Education and Human Relations, Emerson College

Moderator: Michele Wakin, PhD, Executive Director, Institute for Social Justice, Bridgewater State University

Emerson College has developed a strategy for implementing Inclusive Excellence (IE) based on the recommendations of the AAC&U by adapting it to Emerson College’s culture and environment. A key piece of this is the Inclusive Excellence Action Planning (IEAP) process that is used in departments to analyze their strengths and challenges and set goals for inclusive excellence. A guiding principle is to have as many staff and faculty as possible involved in the analysis and action planning stages of the IEAP. Within this framework department leaders are creating various models to involve people and set goals. This presentation will highlight the IE structure at Emerson and the IE Action Planning process and document, as well as how this process might be applied to other institutional initiatives and settings.

16) The Challenge of Moving from Pockets of Excellence to Institutional Priority

Location: Classroom 204– Maxwell Library

Presenters: Alexander Nally, Undergraduate student and Student Government Association Representative to the Board of Trustees, MassArt; Chanel Thervil, Graduate student in the Master of Arts in Teaching / Art Education program, MassArt; Adriana Katzew, Associate Professor of Art Education, MassArt; Ceci Mendez, Director of the Center for Art and Community Partnerships, MassArt; and Dan Serig, Dean of Academic Programs, MassArt. All presenters are members of MassArt’s Diversity and Social Justice Task Force.

Moderator: Jeanean Davis-Street, Acting Associate Dean, Ricciardi College of Business, Bridgewater State University

Fifteen members of MassArt attended last year’s Bridgewater conference. This group felt a strong, shared purpose following the gathering, which led to a joint declaration of values of diversity and social justice. The process prompted a renewed emphasis on issues of diversity and social justice at MassArt at a time of tremendous institutional changes. This presentation highlights “pockets of excellence” at MassArt, including best practices in teaching/learning, the Center for Art and Community Partnerships, and the Adderley Lecture Series. Likewise, the presentation identifies challenges, including the development of systems to link the ‘pockets of excellence,’ leadership support and vision, and professional development.
