Celebrate a lifelong connection to your alma mater with the Gift of a Lifetime

Buy a Brick
and Give the Gift that Lasts a Lifetime

The Bridgewater State College Alumni Association invites you to celebrate your lifelong connection to your alma mater by purchasing a personalized engraved brick that will be placed in the Alumni Courtyard in front of Horace Mann Auditorium. Your tax-deductible gift of $100 entitles you to a 4 x 8 inch personalized brick that will become a lasting part of Bridgewater State College’s history. An 8 x 8 inch brick paver is available for a tax-deductible gift of $250. Every time you come to campus, you will be able to stroll the courtyard, see your engraved brick or paver and be reminded of your commitment to and support of Bridgewater State College and its students.

You may choose to purchase a brick to honor or memorialize a special BSC graduate. A gift card will be sent to that person or to the family of the graduate you are memorializing. All proceeds will benefit BSC students through enhanced scholarship funds.

Place your order today, and become a part of Bridgewater State College’s legacy. You may use the order form inserted in front of this magazine to place your order. Mail it to: Buy a Brick Campaign, Bridgewater State College, Office of Alumni Relations, Davis Alumni Center, P.O. Box 13, Bridgewater, MA 02324, or fax your order to the Office of Alumni Relations at 508.531.1722, attention Candace Maguire.
Bridgewater aims to keep alumni, faculty, students and their families, staff and friends of Bridgewater State College informed about the college community and its impact on the region. The tri-annual college magazine is written, designed and edited with the needs of its varied audiences at heart and in mind.

On the cover: Bridgewater State College takes its wireless computing capabilities to the next level by requiring all incoming freshmen to have a notebook computer to enhance learning and access the campus’s growing mobility and connectivity. See story pages 3-5.

Dear friends,

I had the chance to spend the college’s annual move-in day with incoming first-year students and their families. It’s something I look forward to each year as it’s a great time to connect personally with members of the incoming class and to learn more about the hopes and dreams they hold for the years they’re about to spend at Bridgewater State College.

It also serves as a reminder of the permanence of our institution and the timelessness of our mission. Though I’ve been participating in the move-in ritual for a number of years, these hopes and dreams seem to remain very much the same from one autumn to the next — as do the anxieties, worries and trepidations. Bridgewater State College may look and feel like a very different place than it was 10, 20 or 50 years ago, but the very fact that members of this year’s class — a class that is larger and more diverse than any in our history — echoed the feelings of all those who came before them is a sign of our good health.

To put it another way, Bridgewater State College has ably kept pace with the demands of our changing world.

As you’ll read about in the pages that follow, the recent opening of the academic year marked the latest moment in time in which BSC chose to be proactive in keeping up with this dynamic and evolving environment. By requiring all incoming students to have notebook computers, we have placed ourselves among a very select group of forward-thinking institutions; only 7 percent of colleges and universities nationwide have taken such action. Some may describe us as being bold, but we saw our decision as a straightforward one. Regardless of their discipline or intended career path, every graduating student must be prepared with the appropriate tools to enter our knowledge-based and information-driven economy.

In a similar vein, each of our students should depart Bridgewater State College having had the benefit of traveling and studying internationally. Our world may be much smaller than it used to be, but that hasn’t changed the level of misunderstanding and misperception that still exist in every corner of the globe. As we strive to educate good citizens and the next generation of leaders, expanding opportunities for our students to visit and study in other countries represents one of the wisest investments we can make. Any BSC student who wishes to travel or study abroad should have the opportunity to do so. Period. If they cannot afford the costs of travel, we need to help them find a way.

Lastly, we are taking steps to instill in our students a new ethic of public and community service. Learning opportunities are there to be found off-campus as much as they are on-campus. Giving our students the guidance and direction they need to make the great leap of faith into their world is one of our highest institutional priorities, and doing so will further expand the richness of the undergraduate experience.

In taking all of these steps, we are all helping to ensure that our students arrive at BSC knowing full-well that they’ll receive the skills and training needed to succeed in whatever direction their life’s pursuits take them. And in doing so, they may remain – even if it is only for a short while – safely grounded in the more traditional preoccupations of trying to get along with their roommates, fretting about exams, and trying to find enough time for a social life on top of it all.

Sincerely,

Dana Mohler-Faria
President
Laura Wheeler sat on the steps of Boyden Hall typing a message on her new wireless notebook computer. "I’m checking my e-mail," the freshman from Mansfield explained. But she also uses the notebook computer to manage her course work and appreciates the anytime-anywhere power of wireless computing.

"You can go to any location on campus and be connected," she said. "You don’t have to worry about waiting for a work station at the computer lab, and you can be in your dorm room, sitting on your bed, connected to the Internet. If it gets too noisy in the dorms, you can take your laptop to a quiet place."

Laura is among the more than 1,300 freshmen who arrived on campus this fall with a notebook computer configured for wireless communication. Bridgewater State College adopted a requirement that students have the machines to accommodate an increasingly mobile campus community and to prepare them for new demands of the marketplace.

The mandate will extend to subsequent classes each year until all BSC students own wireless-enabled notebook computers. First-year students at Framingham and Worcester state colleges are subject to the same requirement. Freshmen at Salem State College and Massachusetts College of Liberal Arts will need to purchase notebook computers next fall, and Westfield and Fitchburg state colleges are considering implementing the program the subsequent year.

The state college notebook initiative is collectively called “MassAdvantage” and is expected to give students a competitive edge in the workplace. The plan does not apply to community colleges or the state university system. Only 7 percent of colleges nationwide require students to have computers, according to EDUCAUSE, a nonprofit organization that promotes technology use in higher education.

"It’s really an equalizer for all students," said Dr. Patricia Plummer, deputy chancellor for policy and planning for the Massachusetts Board of Higher Education. "The digital divide is no longer there ... and students graduate with all the technical skills they need in their fields."

More than a high-tech accessory

Mr. Bill Davis, vice president and chief information officer at BSC, said the college prepared carefully for the requirement so the notebook computers would become powerful tools that serve institutional goals of education, socialization and training students for the workforce, not high-tech accessories.

"The computers enhance our culture of learning and inquiry," he said. "Not only do they improve student mastery of course content, but they help students build skills in technology literacy, analytical thinking and creative problem solving."

The foundation was built for wireless computing at BSC in 2000 when the college began installing hardware and Wi-Fi antennas across campus. Bridgewater State College was one of the first and largest higher education institutions in New England to provide uninterrupted wireless service across its buildings and property. The achievement earned the college a spot on Yahoo! Internet Life magazine’s list of “America’s Most Wired Colleges.”

Administrators recognize it will take time for students, faculty and staff to find the appropriate role of wireless notebook technology in their activities, but they see the initiative as yielding long-term value.

"It took a major investment of time, resources and energy to put the necessary infrastructure in place for this initiative," said Dr. Dana Mohler-Faria, president of BSC. "I am happy to say that we are ready to join the select group of institutions across the nation that have taken this important pedagogical step forward."
Wireless networks rely on a series of hardware configurations, cables and transmitters that allow users within a short radius to have Internet connectivity. This allows them to browse Web sites, send e-mails and share files without having their computers physically attached to a phone line or cable.

That means instructors have more freedom in structuring learning activities both inside and outside of class. And it means any spot on campus can instantly serve as a learning space or electronic meeting place for members of the online community.

Faculty began piloting wireless notebook technology in several classes three years ago. At the same time, BSC’s information technology staff began offering seminars and workshops to help faculty integrate the computing tools in their classes. Since then, the number of courses that employ significant use of the Web has grown to about 400 each semester.

Faculty embrace technology

"Initially, we were afraid that this was just a bell-and-whistle," said Dr. Lee Torda, assistant professor of English at BSC. "We thought that bringing wireless technology to the classroom was a noble aim, but we didn’t want it to overshadow the teaching."

Dr. Torda said she quickly learned that students could produce more text, more quickly on the notebooks and then post their work for collaborative editing. Wireless means that students can join online discussion groups and share research both in and outside of class, she said.

Other faculty said the notebook computers encourage critical thinking and student participation. In Dr. Lynne Yeamans’ Introduction to Teaching class, students were asked to define excellence and equity in education. Instead of raising their hands or taking pen to paper, they started typing on their wireless notebooks. Dr. Yeamans projected the responses on a screen and a vigorous discussion followed.

Dr. Cynthia Ricciardi, ’81, BSC visiting lecturer in English, said using the notebook computers increased the confidence of students who were reticent in class. "Some who never said a word were almost extroverts in online discussions," she said. "These same students acquired a new comfort level, and they began to participate more frequently in verbal class discussions."

The technology has allowed Dr. Thomas Kling, assistant professor of physics, to conduct a "paperless" class where students retrieve information from a Blackboard class management Web site and post their work to the same site for grading. Students in one of Dr. Kling’s introductory courses will participate in an online town meeting debating the merits of a manned mission to Mars.

Integrating technology and the curriculum

To ensure the notebook computers reinforce instructional goals, BSC is providing two “Technology Fellows” to help professors handle challenges and exploit opportunities presented by the growth of wireless computing on campus.

Dr. Anne Hird, assistant professor and coordinator of the college’s instructional technology program, and Dr. Ken Dobush, associate professor of special education and communication disorders, will spend half their time this year supporting faculty in their use of notebook computers. Both instructors were early adopters of wireless technology in their classrooms.

"Some faculty members expressed concerns with students’ high expectations for laptop use in class," Dr. Dobush said. "Overall, it’s a change that may require adjustments. A lot of what we’re going to do is to stand behind faculty and help them see this through and get over the hump."

Dr. Hird said she received a call from a professor looking for a creative way to use wireless computers in a course section designed to ground social and scientific theory in real-world applications. Dr. Hird helped the instructor develop an online role-playing and simulation exercise. This is the type of individualized support that the Technology Fellows will continue to provide to faculty, Dr. Hird said.

Both professors said the technology enables change in teaching and requires students to develop new learning skills. They have to become more comfortable applying knowledge to case studies, more discriminating in selecting information sources, more responsible in managing their academic performance and more comfortable with ambiguity, Dr. Dobush said.

"With online access to library databases, I can have my students read articles that present two, three and sometimes even four different perspectives on an issue – versus a homogenized textbook treatment," Dr. Hird said. "Students discover that there may not be one right answer. Instead, they have to show they can support their own conclusions."
Essential tool outside of class

Notebook computers are expected to become essential tools outside of class, allowing students and faculty to communicate through class management software and conduct Internet and library research. Students can register for classes, select housing and pay bills from any location on campus.

This new social dynamic created by mobile technology has raised concerns related to security, academic integrity and whether the notebook computers will distract from learning. Bridgewater State College’s Teaching and Technology Center (TTC) in the Division of Information Technology is addressing these issues in training sessions and forums focused on the pedagogical and social implications of wireless computing.

“The biggest faculty concern we’ve heard so far is the fear that notebook computers are going to be a distraction to students,” said Mr. Eric LePage, technical support specialist in the TTC. “One way we’ve addressed that was to purchase software that allows instructors at any time to temporarily restrict students from accessing e-mail and instant messaging, to limit students to particular Web sites, or to prevent Web access altogether.”

Dr. Ricciardi said the technology requires new classroom management skills. “When it’s lecture time, I make sure all the notebook lids go down,” she said. “That way you have control over whether students are instant messaging, going to ESPN.com or reading e-mail.”

Freshmen generally supported the requirement. Some said it was too early to determine how often they would use the notebook computers in class, while a few said the cost was a significant hurdle. Most said they recognized wireless communication would enhance their education and prepare them for a technology-based economy.

Participating state colleges of Massachusetts negotiated a deal with Dell to offer students a hardware package and preloaded software that met each college’s requirements at a greatly reduced price. Assistance in paying for the notebook computers is available through financial aid and financing through Dell.

During the first weeks of classes, students brought their new notebook computers to technical support centers at the Maxwell Library and the Moakley Center. Students’ computers were tested to ensure they were configured properly and contained the proper anti-virus and security software.

Henok Worku, a junior majoring in computer science, sat at a table on the balcony of the Moakley Center completing an assignment on his notebook computer. When he had a question, he e-mailed his instructor and continued working. “It’s nice to be able to use the Internet anywhere on campus without having to wait in line for a computer,” he said.

Sophomore Rosibel Reyes had her computer checked and approved by campus technology staff and then sat down to compose an essay she would post wirelessly to a class discussion on microeconomics.

“This definitely makes things more convenient,” she said. “(The notebook requirement) is really worth it. Sure it was a little expensive, but I think it would be more expensive to be ignorant,” she said.
Susan Szachowicz, '75, Principal, Brockton High School: “Another Glass Ceiling Shattered”

When the superintendent of the Brockton public schools announced last April that the new principal of Brockton High School would be Dr. Susan Szachowicz, no one had to offer her a tour of the sprawling facility.

“You might say that I have some experience in nearly everything here,” admitted the 30-year veteran of BHS, whose first job in education was as a classroom teacher at the school as (she later moved up to department head for social studies and eventually to associate principal for curriculum and instruction before her selection as principal).

“I'm a product of the Brockton public schools (Class of 1971), and I'm extremely proud of that,” she said. “The city has been good to me, and I want to be good to the city.”

Moreover, she’s made history in her hometown: Dr. Szachowicz is the first woman to become principal at the largest public high school in New England — with more than 4,400 students, BHS is one of the largest high schools in the United States.

“When the local newspaper announced my appointment as acting principal in December of 2003, the headline read, ‘Another glass ceiling shattered in Brockton!’”

Born, raised and educated in the Campello section of Brockton, Dr. Szachowicz was the oldest of three children whose parents still live in the city.

The desire to be a teacher was what brought Dr. Szachowicz to Bridgewater State College, first to earn a bachelor’s and later a master’s degree. She later earned her doctorate at the University of Massachusetts - Amherst.

“My father was a public school teacher, and he’d done master's degree work at Bridgewater State College. My brother, sister and I were imbued with the notion that ‘nothing is more important than education.’ From an early age, our parents taught us to appreciate the value of learning,” explained Dr. Szachowicz.

She said she found a welcoming atmosphere at the college. “I majored in history and in sociology because I really loved those subjects, and I had outstanding faculty. People such as Tom Turner and John Myers in history, Bill Levin in sociology, and also Barbara Apstein and Tom Curley in English, helped shape my career and my destiny. I’m very grateful to BSC for a lot of reasons.”

As her years as a professional educator passed, she found that — more and more — she enjoyed Brockton High School and never felt a desire to move on.

“The sheer size of Brockton High School provides ample opportunities to interact with many different types of students. Linguistically, there are about 40 different languages spoken here. It's like living in a small country with a variety of people from other places.”

To be sure, there are challenges in her job.

“We have many students in difficult family situations who every day confront situations that no one, especially no young person, should ever be forced to confront. But that's life, and we can help them face those challenges,” she said.

But the issue that is foremost on her agenda most days is MCAS, which she said “has changed the educational landscape in Massachusetts.”

The Massachusetts Comprehensive Assessment System – is how students are tested to determine their fitness for advancement in the state's public schools and eventually graduation.

“I want a Brockton High School diploma to demonstrate to employers and college admissions officers that the student who holds it has earned it,” she said.

“The Department of Education knows I’m one of MCAS's biggest proponents, but I've let the people there know that I am still unhappy with certain elements of the test. I want to see a test that's fair to all students. I believe that the MCAS test should measure the knowledge and skills that successful, rational adults use in their lives. In my opinion, it still needs some refinement.”

She said the school’s "proudest day" occurred two years ago when the Commissioner of Education, David Driscoll, came to Brockton High School to announce the MCAS scores “because we had made such an improvement. Ninety-seven percent of our students passed MCAS and earned a diploma. That's terrific.”

For those students who fail MCAS, the principal and her staff offer a variety of tools to help them improve.

Last year, the Brockton High School yearbook chose Dr. Szachowicz as the person who is “Most dedicated to Brockton High School.” Looking back on that, she said, “I get goose bumps when I think about those words.”

Summing up her career so far in Brockton, she offers this assessment: “My job is to use all of my knowledge, talent and energy to keep good things going and bad things from happening, and to encourage everyone else to do the same.”

When asked how things are going so far, she answers quickly, “I go to work every day feeling happy.”

Gary Grodecki, '94: A Career Dream Comes True

Between Aug. 1 and Jan. 1 each year, Gary Grodecki considers himself fortunate if he manages one day off from work.

But despite the nearly nonstop pace of his job, Mr. Grodecki has chosen a career that makes him the envy of family, friends and the most casual of acquaintances: Mr. Grodecki, Class of 1994, is the director of entertainment and broadcast production for the Super Bowl champion New England Patriots.

“It's certainly a great way to earn a living,” admitted the Melrose native who earned his degree at Bridgewater State College in communication studies with a concentration in radio and television.

In his position, Mr. Grodecki has responsibility for all in-stadium marketing elements for both the New England Patriots and for the New England Revolution soccer team, both owned by Robert Kraft.

Mr. Grodecki is responsible for the large-scale, in-game entertainment productions enjoyed by the 68,000 fans who pack Gillette Stadium for every home contest, including the highlight videos, anthem singers, military jet fly-bys, fireworks and music that plays during games.

And there's more: he is also in charge of special events for both teams, such as golf tournaments, and during the season he produces an Internet radio broadcast that features all live programming and airs from noon to midnight, five days a week.

For a young man who grew up as a fan of the Patriots, this is a heady experience.

When I'm on the field during a Patriots game, I'm honestly too busy to stand around asking myself, 'Am I really here?' Those thoughts come before the game and after it's over. I consider myself exceedingly fortunate."

How did Mr. Grodecki make this happen?

“First, I enrolled at Bridgewater State College as a physical education major, but changed to communication studies as I refined my plans about what I wanted to do. Then, I really have to give a lot of credit to Tom Lee, who was a professor at BSC when I was a student. He encouraged me to sign up for internships that would give me practical experience, and I did two — one at the radio station KISS 108 and the second at Channel 5. Both were unique educational opportunities for me,” he said.

When Mr. Grodecki graduated from the college, he was hired as an engineer at WEEI, a radio station in Boston. “I was both a producer and engineer for Red Sox baseball games and Celtics basketball games. Later I became the producer for the station’s ‘Big Show.’”

The contacts he made at WEEI were critical. When the station’s director of marketing left for a similar position with the Patriots, he invited Mr. Grodecki to go along with him.

“That happened seven years ago, and it was, of course, an incredible opportunity. I was more than willing to commit myself to the demands of the job,” he said.

Not only did Mr. Grodecki win the position, but he joined the Patriots as they were about to embark on an extraordinary journey.

“I've been part of two Super Bowl experiences so far, and it's hard to describe what that's like. To be sure, Super Bowl weeks involve 20-hour days because the scope of work required is immense. But every minute is worth it.”

And very little downtime follows the end of football season. "Once we finish up in February, we get ready immediately for the start of the soccer season in March, which goes into November, overlapping with football. It still means 15-hour days. However, I am not complaining. It's what I want to do."

An added bonus is that Mr. Grodecki travels with the Patriots to away games.

“It's helpful to me to see what other teams do in terms of marketing and entertainment,” he said.

Does Mr. Grodecki have any advice for those who aspire to careers such as his?

“Number one, be prepared to work a lot and to sacrifice,” he replied.

“I was an orientation leader when I was a student at BSC, and when I spoke with parents I remember telling them, 'Don't force your children to choose a particular major. At this point in their lives, they need to do what they enjoy doing.'"

“I changed my major from physical education to communication studies, and that decision ultimately led me from Bridgewater State College to the New England Patriots. As a result, I'm in a field that I love.

“So I would tell students who asked me that question to find out what you really like doing and devote your time and energies to making that happen for you.”

Studying in Cairo

“We stayed in Egypt for two years, in Cairo under the auspices of the Presbyterian Church.”

I taught English-as-a-second-language and then I went to Egypt where I worked as a director of Christian Education for a year in a church on Long Island and said that if I liked Egypt, we would get married and live there. I worked for four years, and, meanwhile, I started teaching at the American University in Cairo, where I was assigned to the English Language Institute, teaching, again, English as a foreign language,” she explained. However, things turned out differently.

“When I enrolled there, I met a man named Albert Isteero, who is from Port Said, Egypt. He was a Presbyterian minister, and he was there teaching Arabic and studying.” she explained.

“Albert invited me to his homeland and said that if I liked Egypt, we would get married and live there. I worked for a year in a church on Long Island as a director of Christian Education and then I went to Egypt where I taught English-as-a-second-language in Cairo under the auspices of the Presbyterian Church.”

Jean and Albert married in 1964. “We stayed in Egypt for two years, then we left to go to Beirut, Lebanon, where Albert worked with the Near East Council of Churches, and we remained there for 12 years.”

The gentle rhythm of their lives was about to be disrupted, however. “When we first arrived in Lebanon, it was a beautiful and tranquil place to be. But then came a civil war in the early 1970s, and by 1977, we decided it was time to leave.”

As a consequence, the Isteeros returned to the United States and settled in Baltimore, where Mr. Isteero completed his PhD studies at Johns Hopkins University. For the next nine years they remained in Baltimore.

In 1985, Mr. Isteero was asked to return to Cairo to become president of the Presbyterian Church’s Coptic Evangelical Seminary.

“Albert remained at the seminary for four years, and, meanwhile, I started teaching at the American University in Cairo, where I was assigned to the English Language Institute, teaching, again, English as a foreign language,” said Ms. Isteero. “Today we maintain homes both in Baltimore and in the heart of Cairo.”

Ms. Isteero serves as the Arabic editor of The Upper Room, a devotional booklet published in 44 languages by the Methodist Church in Nashville. He needs to stay in Egypt, she said, and I wanted to keep in contact with the American University, so now I’m a volunteer representative of the American University in Cairo.”

Now for the Bridgewater connection...

“What is very interesting is that when I received my alumni magazine from Bridgewater State College, I was impressed and I remember thinking, ‘Bridgewater has really changed.’” More specifically, when I read about the college’s study abroad program, I noticed that Egypt was not among the countries listed where students were studying, so I wrote via e-mail to Robin Melavalin.

“I told Robin about my experiences in Cairo and asked her, ‘Did you ever consider sending students to Cairo?’ Robin answered immediately and told me, ‘We have two students there right now.’

“I looked them up and found that Aimee comes from Belfast, ME, where my parents live. Ms. Isteero contacted the BSC students and they met.

Ms. Isteero offered her experience and knowledge to Aimee Farrar and Phillip Graham, who were more than happy to have her assistance.

Jean Woodbury Isteero, '60: Offering Friendship and Support to BSC Students Studying in Cairo

Because I’d lived in the city so long, my advantage was that I could take Aimee and Phillip to places where most foreigners don’t usually go.”

In addition to making friends with Aimee and Phillip, Ms. Isteero said there are other benefits to the renewing of her ties to her alma mater.

“It has been a privilege and a pleasure for me to reconnect with Bridgewater through meeting and talking with contemporary Bridgewater State College students.

“Because of my life in two separate parts of the world,” she said, “I naturally feel a kinship and loyalty to each, but I’ll always be grateful for the many wonderful experiences I had at Bridgewater State College.

“Therefore I’ll always be willing and eager to share as much as possible with BSC students who visit and study in Egypt.”

Timothy Millerick, '82: "Part of Bridgewater is With Me Every Day"

Tim Millerick broke into senior-level management in higher education administration at a relatively young age — he was only 32 when he was appointed interim vice president for student affairs at Austin College, in Sherman, TX.

But the BSC graduate (now vice president for student affairs and athletics at Austin) said his Bridgewater State College years “were absolutely pivotal” in preparing him for that position, and he credits his success in large part to his years here.

“Thanks to a lot of good people at Bridgewater State College, I was exposed to a wealth of good and valuable experiences, both inside the classroom and outside as well, and I’ll always be grateful for the opportunities I had to learn and grow,” he said.

Today, the Winthrop native and his wife Carol, ’82, ("we met at Bridgewater and were married in the college chapel by Father Joe McNamara") live on the Austin campus with their daughter Ashley, 18, a senior at Sherman High School, and son Gregory, 15, a freshman at the same school.

“Having grown up here, it’s understandable that our children regard themselves as Texans, even though both were born in Massachusetts,” he explained.

"Yet in every sense this is ‘home’ to Ashley and Gregory, and to Carol and me as well. Naturally, it gets a little warm in the summertime — we’re located in the Dallas-Forth Worth area metroplex — but with air-conditioning in all of the buildings, homes and automobiles, we get along fine. And although I personally miss the changing of the seasons in New England, I wouldn’t trade the life we’re fortunate to enjoy at Austin. This is a truly outstanding college.”

Looking back across two decades to his graduation from BSC, Mr. Millerick said that in those days, a career in college administration wasn’t in his plans.

“I graduated from Bridgewater State College with a bachelor’s degree in elementary education, and in 1983 — just before Carol and I were married — I was hired as a middle school teacher at St. Mary’s School in New Bedford. I also was appointed as a graduate assistant in housing at BSC, so I balanced both.”

He also had another job, which he started in the fall of 1982: Peter Mazzaferrro, head football coach at Bridgewater State College, hired Mr. Millerick as his defensive line coach.

“I had played football for Coach Mazzaferrro for four years, and I’m appreciative of the chance he gave me to coach for him for five additional years when I graduated. A decade later, when I was appointed a vice president at Austin and athletics was among my areas of responsibility, I used my Bears experiences to good advantage.”

Mr. Millerick had not only played football at Bridgewater State College, the record shows that he was outstanding as a defensive back, twice earning All-New England Conference honors and serving as captain of the team in his senior year. “I have some very good memories of that time and of the friends I made,” he said.

His work as a graduate assistant in housing at Bridgewater State College provided a small apartment in Pope Hall for Mr. and Mrs. Millerick and, more importantly, the job gave him a new career option.

“It was my first real day-to-day contact with college administration, and I enjoyed it so much that I decided to pursue a master’s degree in counseling,” he said.

After earning his second degree from BSC, and shortly before Gregory was born, Mr. Millerick was offered a position as director of residence life at North Carolina Wesleyan University, so the Millericks packed up their two small children and headed south.

A year in North Carolina was followed by an invitation to head southwest to Austin College where he held, briefly, a similar position before he was appointed director of student life.

Following a year in that job, he was appointed to the interim vice presidency, and that, in turn, led to his present assignment at the 1,300 student school.

Asked to describe his duties, he responded: “I’m basically the executive of the college responsible for all non-academic activities and services.

“Specifically,” he continued, “I’m responsible for student life, which means student activities; student organizations; housing and discipline; student services, including the academic skills center, career services, counseling and health services; and religious life, which includes chapel and church relations; campus police and public safety; food service; and intercollegiate athletics, intramurals and recreational sports.”

And life at Austin, he said, is good.

“T’m fortunate enough to be at a college where everyone — including all of the faculty and staff — are willing to do whatever’s necessary to help our students succeed,” he explained.

“In that regard, I’m able to draw upon the knowledge that when I was at their stage of life, people did the same for me — people like Maureen FitzGerald, who was director of housing at BSC when I was a student, and Ed Meaney, who was director of personnel and later executive vice president, and David Deep, vice president of student services. And, of course, Father Joe McNamara, who impacted so profoundly the lives of BSC students of my generation,” he said.

“Bridgewater was, and remains, important in my life. Part of the college is with me every day.”
President Urges Union Members to Keep Up the Good Fight

The president of Bridgewater State College called his first all-employee meeting just two weeks into the new academic year to discuss the status of contract funding and collective bargaining for the college’s three unions.

The Massachusetts State College Association (MSCA), which represents state college faculty, is working its second year without a new contract, while membership of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME), and the Association of Professional Administrators (APA) have years of unpaid retroactive pay hanging in the political balance.

Through it all, Dr. Dana Mohler-Faria thanked the campus community for its patience and continued commitment to providing high levels of professional service to students and the college. He underscored the importance of participating in the collective bargaining process and urged college employees not to give up hope.

“We don’t know where this will end up, but let’s not give up,” President Mohler-Faria told several hundred college employees who attended the town meeting-style session in Horace Mann Auditorium.

The president described the status of negotiations with the MSCA, which involve the executive branch, the Massachusetts Board of Higher Education and the Massachusetts State College Council of Presidents. “Faculty negotiations are in a very difficult situation,” President Mohler-Faria said. “The money on the table is not appropriate.”

The president, who this year is chairing the Council of Presidents (COP), said the COP has made the MSCA contract the only issue it will tackle throughout the year.

“My sense is that to make this come to resolution, we have to give it all of our attention and that’s unfortunate, but it’s necessary,” he said. “The unfortunate side is there are so many positive things we can focus on and this shouldn’t be an issue.”

The president said the COP is addressing a serious equity issue concerning faculty salary. A study of Massachusetts state college faculty pay rates conducted by the COP shows state college faculty are underpaid an average of 15 to 18 percent in comparison to their national peers.

The COP study used the same methodology as did the state community colleges to inform the BHE vote that approved an adjustment to its faculty salaries, the president said. University of Massachusetts and state community college faculty are paid on a par with their national peers.
Bridgewater State College Receives U.S. News & World Report Recognition

For the second consecutive year, Bridgewater State College has been ranked among master's degree granting institutions in the North for graduating students with the least amount of debt, according to U.S. News & World Report's annual college rankings.

The college’s growing cadre of master's programs also resulted in Bridgewater State College earning an inaugural spot on the magazine’s regional list of best master's programs.

“We are delighted that Bridgewater State College is being publicly recognized for the outstanding efforts of our faculty and academic staff,” said Dr. Dana Mohler-Faria, president of the college. “Together, we have created and consistently delivered high-quality programs at a reasonable cost that truly meet the educational needs of Southeastern Massachusetts.”

Bridgewater State College ranked second among northern institutions in the least debt category, with 41 percent of BSC graduate students who graduated in 2003 taking on an average amount of debt of $8,180.

The average debt load, according to U.S. News & World Report, represents the average amount borrowed by students who incurred debt and does not represent the average for all students. The numbers also imply that 59 percent of graduate students who graduated from Bridgewater State College in 2003 did so debt free.

Mercy College of New York topped the list of least debt load with 81 percent of its students graduating with an average debt of $8,176. A sister Massachusetts state college, Fitchburg, also appeared on the list, in third position, with 30 percent of its graduate students completing their programs of study with an average debt of $8,500.

It was also the first time Bridgewater State College has appeared on U.S. News & World Report's regional “Best Universities – Master's” list, which includes institutions that provide a full range of undergraduate and master's degree programs with few, if any, doctoral programs. BSC was among 572 institutions ranked in the category within four geographic areas, North, South, Midwest and West.

Bridgewater State College was listed in the fourth tier among institutions ranked 126 through a tie at 164. Over the past seven years, Bridgewater State College has expanded its master's program offerings based upon the growing needs for professional education in the region.

In addition to its traditional core of master's programs in education as well as the liberal arts, Bridgewater State College offers a Master of Public Administration, Master of Science in Computer Science, Master of Science in Management, Master of Science in Criminal Justice and Master of Social Work.

Also joining Bridgewater State College on the list were sister state colleges Fitchburg, Framingham, Salem, Westfield and Worcester.

“Quality, access and affordability have been the hallmarks of education at the state colleges of Massachusetts,” and said President Mohler-Faria, who also serves as chairman of the Massachusetts State College Council of Presidents. “Speaking on behalf of my colleagues, I am proud to play a leadership role in a system that provides top-notch educational programs.”

New Vice President Finds Students Keep 'You Young and Current'

Dr. D. David Ostroth has been working with and learning from students for most of his career in higher education and looks forward to the challenges ahead as he begins his tenure as the college’s new vice president for student affairs.

From the gleam in his eye when he talks about students in general, anyone can tell that he enjoys what he does.

“I like students. Interacting with students keeps you young and current. They are stimulating, positive and simply likeable,” said Dr. Ostroth.

He comes to BSC from Virginia Tech, where he gathered more than 27 years of experience in student affairs from several positions with increasing responsibilities. He was the associate vice president for student affairs before leaving for BSC.

Dr. Ostroth oversees the out-of-class life for students and coordinates policies, programs and services that support students as they earn their degrees. In addition to supervising 11 departments in the division, the vice president works closely with the other divisions in the college to establish and continuously improve the campus environment for students.

“I hope we will be able to increase community service and service learning and also to assess and meet the changing needs of our commuter students,” said Dr. Ostroth. “It is important to gather information and ideas to set a vision for strategic planning. I look forward to beginning those discussions.”

Dr. Ostroth holds a bachelor's degree in English literature from Allegheny College, a master's degree in counseling from Arizona State University and a doctorate in higher education administration from Michigan State University.
Students attending Bridgewater State College’s Senior Convocation celebrated arriving at the home stretch of their college career and left with a challenge from alumnus Mr. Mark England, ’90, to sprint to the finish line — but relish their freedom.

“Chances are you’ll never have a time like this again, so savor the ride,” said Mr. England, regional vice president for Enterprise Rent-A-Car in Southeastern Massachusetts.

The annual event began with a procession of faculty and administrators to the Rondileau Campus Center Auditorium, led by Dr. Janice Harris, college marshal. In addition to honoring seniors, this year’s convocation highlighted contributions of BSC faculty. Dr. Dana Mohler-Faria, president of the college, and Mr. England both spoke of BSC faculty’s critical role in shaping and supporting student development.

“You were not alone as you made this journey,” President Mohler-Faria told seniors. “You had a very special group of people around you to hone your talents, sharpen your skills and broaden your perspective... The people of whom I speak, of course, are the incredible men and women who make up Bridgewater’s faculty.”

President Mohler-Faria praised the faculty’s commitment to excellence in a fiscal climate that he said undervalues their work. He promised that administrators would continue working to ensure faculty, entering their second year without a contract, receive compensation that reflects the value of their work.

Mr. England described his career path and shared lessons learned as he rose through the ranks at Enterprise Rent-A-Car. He began at the company as a management trainee two weeks after he completed his last final exam at BSC and said his time at BSC prepared him well for the challenges of management.

“I have worked with hundreds, if not thousands, of fellow employees in five states over the past 15 years — all college graduates from schools all over the country including many big-name schools,” he said. “In all that time, I have never felt at even a slight disadvantage when it came to my educational background or my ability to perform at an equal or greater level than any of my peers.”

He said 20 BSC graduates work for Enterprise Rent-A-Car and have earned a reputation for excellence. In addition, he reported that this summer’s BSC interns earned two of the top four spots in a scholarship competition among 18 college students from across the state.

Mr. England’s advice to seniors focused on five keys to achievement: competitive drive, strong work ethic, sense of family and roots, investment in education and positive attitude.
Horace Mann did not think education should be limited to individuals from privileged backgrounds, Shannon said. “There is much we can learn from him... Think differently about familiar things and see the world from fresh eyes every day.” She concluded by inviting seniors to challenge the status quo, see opportunity where none exists and take small steps that leave a legacy.

Convocation is an academic tradition dating back to the founding of the first universities in Europe. It creates an opportunity for faculty, students and staff to celebrate and usher in the new academic year. At BSC, convocation provides soon-to-be graduates the opportunity to pause and reflect on their experiences and highlights the service of the college’s longtime employees.

Convocation also featured the presentation of 25-year service medals to Professor Samuel Baumgarten, associate professor of movement arts, health promotion and leisure studies; Dr. Ruth Hannon, professor of psychology; Dr. Hardy Moore, professor and chairperson of biological sciences; and Mr. James Munise, staff associate in the Department of Physics and Department of Earth Sciences and Geography.

BSC senior Shannon Moriarty delivered the message to her class and focused on lessons learned from Horace Mann, the father of American public education and founder of the Bridgewater Normal School, which grew to become Bridgewater State College.
President Mohler-Faria Shares Vision for Excellence at Opening Day Breakfast

Dr. Dana Mohler-Faria, president of Bridgewater State College, told faculty and staff at the Opening Day Breakfast that the institution has emerged from statewide fiscal challenges stronger and poised to achieve unprecedented levels of excellence.

President Mohler-Faria said energy spent last year defending public higher education from funding cuts and attacks against its operating model can be directed toward building BSC's margin of distinction — one that continues to be affirmed by state and regional leaders.

"When it comes to teacher preparation, continuing education, economic development and building cross-institutional partnerships, they are increasingly pointing to us as the model to emulate," President Mohler-Faria told more than 500 members of the campus community in Tillinghast Hall.

The opening day event marked his 14th year at the college and third as president. President Mohler-Faria described the moment as "the end of the beginning" of his tenure, and one that continues to be affirmed by state and regional leaders.

President Mohler-Faria set the tone for his vision with a summary of the state of the college. He said this year's incoming class — in excess of 2,100 students — will once again be the largest, most diverse and most academically prepared in BSC history.

He also commended the college for strengthening its commitment to quality and affordability, confirmed by its national ranking in U.S. News & World Report for graduating students with low debt levels.

Also noted were the college's new notebook computer program for incoming freshmen and an overhaul of BSC's general education requirements for the first time in 18 years.

Other cited achievements were the college's introduction of the first Presidential Fellowship and an increase in the CART budget to support faculty research.

President Mohler-Faria said these milestones were noteworthy in light of fiscal constraints that affected BSC and its peer institutions for the last two years. During this tumultuous period, he said, Bridgewater State College was one of only two state colleges to experience rising enrollments and the only public institution in the commonwealth to increase its number of faculty.

Vision and goals

President Mohler-Faria completed his remarks with an outline of goals for the remainder of his tenure. "I’ve learned a great deal from you," he told administrators, faculty and staff, "and much of what I’m about to say comes directly from the hopes and aspirations you’ve been kind enough to share with me." These goals include:

- continuing work to create a more diverse learning environment on campus, driven by a new Diversity and Affirmative Action Plan aligned with the college’s mission;
- taking steps to increase BSC’s resident student population to 50 percent of the total;
- allowing the size of the student population to increase by 10 to 15 percent while ensuring a balance between raising academic standards and remaining accessible to potential students who could benefit from a BSC education;
- increasing the size of the faculty to more than 300 to accommodate growth of the student body;
- establishing BSC’s fourth school — the School of Fine, Visual and Performing Arts — to meet the cultural, artistic and creative demands of the college and region;
- positioning the School of Education and Allied Studies as the finest teacher training program in the Northeast as BSC continues to be the largest single producer of new teachers in the commonwealth;
- building new residence halls, faculty housing, a modernized science building and a center for the performing arts;
- assembling the resources required for a campus-wide community outreach and service learning initiative;
- introducing new graduate and continuing education programs based on regional economic needs;
- expanding student opportunities for international travel and exchange so they gain experience as members of a global society;
- growing the size of the endowment from $11 million to at least $35 million to give the college access to more private resources.

All of this will unleash the excellence that exists at Bridgewater State College, President Mohler-Faria said. "Excellence is all around us just waiting for the opportunities and resources to make it come alive," he said.

The president concluded by commending the student literary magazine, The Bridge, as a model of excellence. The publication recently received a Gold Medal rating in a national critique of student-run college magazines sponsored by the Columbia Scholastic Press Association.

"That is one powerful model of excellence," he said, and the college community must rally around a commitment to convert untapped excellence into other examples of distinction.
Afro-American Alumni Association

New Officers
The Afro-American Alumni Association elected a new slate of officers at their July meeting. They are: Ann Solomon Ulett, ’92, president; Jacqueline Tucker, ’90, vice president; Julie Casimir, ’02, secretary; and Michael Henry, ’92, membership officer.

Please visit the Afro-American Alumni Association’s Web page at www.bridgew.edu/AfroAmAlum/ to see how to become involved with this active alumni group.

Afro-American Alumni Association Career Mentor Program
The Afro-American Alumni Association Career Mentor Program is based upon the philosophy that career mentoring enhances self-confidence, social skills and a smooth transition from college student to working professional. If you would like to become part of the mentor program, please visit the Afro-American Alumni Association Web site at www.bridgew.edu/AfroAmAlum/ and complete a mentor commitment form. Upon receipt of the commitment form, you will be contacted by the Office of Alumni Relations to further discuss the program.

Cruising is the Way to Go...

When it comes to choosing a vacation with something for everyone, it's hard to beat a cruise. If you're among the 90 percent of Americans who have never been on a cruise, or if it's been years since you have, you owe it to yourself to take a fresh look at this delightful way to get away from it all.

There are many reasons to choose a cruise for your vacation:

- Cruising is all-inclusive. The cost includes accommodations, meals, fitness and activity programs, nightly entertainment and more. Compared with a resort vacation where you buy meals, pay cover charges for shows, and you only visit one area, this is a "no-brainer."
- There really is something for everyone ... couples, families, singles, children, seniors, business travelers, sports enthusiasts and wedding groups. With sailings from two nights to three months, and ships for both economy and luxury markets, there's a cruise for just about any budget. Activities on board include everything from age-appropriate, supervised children's activities to karaoke, art auctions, educational seminars, wine tasting, races in the pool, star-gazing, jogging, rock-climbing, casinos, shows ... and don't forget the many shore excursions available to see the local sights.

Frequently asked questions about cruising:

- Do I need fancy clothing? Only if you wish. Cruising is relaxed and casual these days. Even on so-called "dressy" nights (usually one or two per week), there are places to dine casually if you prefer not to dress up.
- Do I have to eat at the same time every night? Many ships offer a choice ... either the same table, waiter and companions throughout ... or a flexible schedule to dine when and with whom you please each evening.
- Will I get seasick? Today's modern ships are large and well stabilized, so it's unlikely this will happen. If you have a tendency to develop motion sickness, your doctor can prescribe a medication or device. And there's always a doctor on board, if need be.
- What about families? With family groups traveling together, many larger ships have family cabins (again, limited, so book early), as well as connecting rooms. Be sure to ask.

For alumni who want a sample of a great cruise, not to mention a great time with family and fellow alumni, take a look at our Feb. 20 School Vacation Alumni Cruise.

Hyannis-Bridgewater Physical Education Alumni Association Donates Hats to the Department of Movement Arts, Health Promotion and Leisure Studies

The exact time of the beginning of the tradition of passing on two old Girl Scout leadership hats to seniors majoring in physical education is unknown. It was considered an honor to be a hat custodian. The name and class year of each custodian was written on a tape and sewed to each hat before it was passed on to the next custodian. Listed below are the names of the hat custodians beginning with the year 1946. (This was excerpted from page 50 of A Noble Legacy by Catherine Comeau.)

Career Services Update

Alumni Career Resources
The college is pleased to offer extended online career and job search resources for BSC alumni. These are great tools for alumni seeking career information and advice. Resources include job search links, career exploration sites, job fair information, resume and career guides, and more. Visit www.bridgew.edu/careerservices to access the resources.

CareerNet
CareerNet is BSC’s online alumni career advisory network designed to assist current students and alumni in their career planning. CareerNet consists of a group of alumni volunteers who share their experiences with students and other alumni. It is a great way to give back to the college.

We are looking for alumni participants from all career fields, including business, education, health care, human services, nonprofit, government and those who are self-employed. Join the program and share your career experiences such as how you got started in your field and what you have learned on the job, as well as offer job search advice.

How do I get started?
CareerNet can be accessed through www.monstertrak.com. Once on the MonsterTrak site, please follow these prompts:

Select CareerNet-BSC
This will bring you to "Career Contact and Alumni Network." Select REGISTER and follow the step-by-step instructions. It’s that easy. The program allows you to update your information so that students will be able to contact you even if you move or change jobs. Please make sure to include your e-mail address when you register.

We would like to thank the 150 alumni who have already registered with CareerNet. We hope more alumni will consider joining. Your insights, expertise and experiences are key to making this program successful.

Class of 2003 Career Survey Results
Each year, the Office of Career Services surveys the graduating class six months to a year after graduation. If you would like to view a summary of the Class of 2003 Career Survey, please visit the career services Web site at www.bridgew.edu/careerservices.

Alumni Profiles
Career services is developing an alumni profile series highlighting alumni from various career fields. Profiles will be posted on the career services Web site and will be used to educate current students about different career paths. If you’re interested in completing an alumni profile sheet, please contact Colleen Oliva at 508.531.1328 or coliva@bridgew.edu.

Internships
Do you work for a great organization? Would your employer benefit from hiring BSC interns? If so, please consider encouraging your employer to recruit BSC students for internship opportunities within your organization.

The international education center at Framingham State College has been renamed the C. Louis Cedrone International Education Center. Lou had worked for many years with Dr. Leonard Savignano, former president of Westfield State College, in the field of international education, building a program that brought the opportunity to earn a master's degree in education to teachers overseas. Lou brought the program to Framingham State College in 1988, and it became the degree-granting institution. In 1993, he became executive director of the program, and at the time of his death in April 2003, the program had grown from three to 30 sites worldwide. He truly believed the quote from Henry Adams, which he often used in his graduation addresses, “A teacher effects eternity.”

An extraordinary 50th anniversary weekend was enjoyed by a large number of classmates. Fifty years had vanished, and many memories were shared throughout the weekend, particularly at the Walk Down Memory Lane session held on Saturday morning. The highlight of the weekend was the presentation by Reunion Chairman Joe Pauley to President Mohler-Faria the Class of 1954 gift of $84,000 to endow a Class of 1954 Scholarship for Undergraduate Research. Due to the success of this celebration, plans are already being made for the 55th reunion in 2009.

Class members met again under clear blue skies at the White Cliffs Country Club for the annual luncheon reunion. About 40 classmates were present. Carlene Dodd Brown gave an update of the fund-raising efforts for the 50th reunion gift. We hope to hear from more classmates and receive more donations as the big reunion is fast approaching. In the course of phone contacts, we were saddened to learn of the passing of the following classmates: Edward Amaral, Ann Cantfill Doyle, Norman McGowan, Mary Regan, Dorothy Lewis and Doris Primeau Bisaillon. They were honored by a donation of a book to the library in their memory, given by the class. Beverly George traveled to Spain and Portugal and is planning a cruise to Italy, Greece and Turkey. Barbara Vose Nicholson was on a long road trip at the time of the luncheon and will be heading to Provence in early fall. Jackie Haslett writes that she will be enjoying her summer home in New Hampshire for the season. Carol Colcord Smale promises to join us next year. She will be building a log cabin in Maine, and it will be a better commute than Florida. Wilma Baker Schultz went on an Alaskan cruise and is planning to go to Ireland with Pat Moore Handren in October. Peter Lane enjoys volunteering at his local senior center. Patricia Walters Olson.

does some substitute teaching and travels to Michigan and Florida to visit her children. Mary O’Brien Souza is awaiting the arrival of her fourth grandchild in December. This gives her a busy and fun-filled life. Norma Goyetch Munroe has finally reached the official “empty nest” state. Her daughter, Lisa, was married in May. The Sullivan clan is busy. Vin and Jane’s daughter, Jennifer, is in the process of completing her PhD thesis while planning her wedding, and Maureen is a social worker at Children’s Hospital of Philadelphia. Vin and Jane are still doing occasional auctions. Hal and Marian LeBlanc have just welcomed their seventh grandson. Laura Batista Crocco will be going to Italy for about a month. She plans to visit Florence, Venice, Cinque Terra and Milan and is taking Italian lessons to prepare. Andy and Suzanne Miller will be celebrating their 48th anniversary soon. We want to thank Andy for working with Carlene on securing our spot for the luncheon at White Cliffs. He and Suzanne play lots of golf as members. Bob and Rose May have welcomed a new grandson. The Fratiannis again take the “Longest Distance” prize, coming from Iowa to share our luncheon with family and friends. Gerry McVey has been working to try to save his local church in Newton from being closed by the archdiocese of Boston, a very challenging task at best. Eileen Sullivan O’Grady has returned from a trip to Rome with her youngest son. She reports that she was treated like royalty. Ellie Sondeen Morlino spent a month visiting her daughter in Switzerland where she was able to enjoy many beautiful sites throughout the country. A final special note ... Sister Terry Jardin sent a wonderful note expressing her appreciation for the years she spent with us at BSC. She has spent 31 years teaching primary through secondary math and science, and held a few other interesting and challenging positions. She was fortunate to have a sabbatical at a New Hampshire retreat center and is serving as school secretary at St. Ann’s School in Quincy. She hopes to be able to join us at our 50th reunion in 2006.

Dear Supporters of Bridgewater State College,

Over the past year, my first impressions of Bridgewater State College have grown into a deep appreciation for what we offer the students of Southeastern Massachusetts: an ideal campus, comprehensive academic and out-of-classroom opportunities, academic and professional expertise throughout the faculty and administration, and the strong and enthusiastic leadership of our president. In my first year at BSC, I have caught the excitement of a dynamic institution in a growing geographic region.

The 2004 Honor Roll of Donors that follows reflects a coming of age for both the Bridgewater State College Foundation and the Division of Institutional Advancement. Over the past 10 years, both entities have emerged from a gradually growing start-up phase. Both now stand poised to take a giant step toward maturity. Thanks to the vision, commitment and hard work of many, Bridgewater State College has a solid advancement program, an active volunteer leadership structure and an endowment fund valued at $11 million.

Our advancement programs stand upon a sound base and have tremendous potential for growth. My overall goal for the year ahead is to take steps toward achieving that potential. Our divisional objectives include increasing annual giving and thereby developing our culture of philanthropy; strengthening and expanding our staff resources so that we may reach out personally to more potential donors; taking volunteer leadership to the next level of involvement; and beginning to plan and organize for a comprehensive fund-raising campaign that will enhance the college's future financial health.

Before we embark upon the next leg of our advancement journey, let us take time to enjoy the successes of this past year. Once again overall giving increased to a total of more than $2 million. The Class of 1954 presented an extraordinary 50th Reunion gift of $84,000 to the college. The Parent Association Scholarship Fund has attracted the support of more than 2,000 parents and now stands at $90,000. Faculty and staff participation in giving continues to be exemplary among our institutional peers. And the single largest gift of the past year was the culmination of a lifetime of commitment to our institution and the largest bequest in the college's history — a $1 million gift from the estate of Edith Glick Shoolman, ’25.

Private contributions to Bridgewater State College make the difference between an ordinary education for our students and an excellent one. They ensure that funds are available to provide the highest quality of education despite fluctuations in the economy or changes in public funding priorities. Thank you for doing your part to ensure that BSC continues to serve the interests of the students of Southeastern Massachusetts. Your gifts provide not only the resources for success in the classroom, but also the foundation for professional achievement and lifetimes of community leadership. I look forward to continued growth and partnership throughout the coming year.

Sincerely,

Molly Fannon Williams
Vice President, Institutional Advancement
Executive Director, Bridgewater State College Foundation

2003-2004 Volunteer Leaders

Thank you for your time, energy and expertise
