President Tinsley's vision...

by Kimberly DeCaro Williams

College Mission Statement

For over a century and a half Bridgewater State College has proudly and with distinction played a unique and leading role in the educational life of southeastern Massachusetts and in the Commonwealth as a whole. As a public regional institution of higher education, it responds creatively to the needs of a diverse population by generating and replenishing resources essential to the intellectual, economic, cultural, and civic well-being of the areas which it serves. Through strong undergraduate and graduate programs in the arts, sciences and professions, Bridgewater State College liberally educates its students to think critically, communicate effectively, and act responsibly within a context of personal and professional ethics. Essential to this mission is the College's emphasis on teaching and life-long learning and a campus life that nurtures individual development and encourages cultural diversity in a rapidly changing state, nation, and world.

Where the College has been, what's going on at this moment, and where the College is headed in the future was President Adrian Tinsley's topic in her address at the Bridgewater Alumni Association and Foundation Leadership Retreat. Her impressive three-year record was highlighted by the acceptance of the Phase I Strategic Plan with its vision for Bridgewater's future. Optimistic new financial reports and announcements of physical plant enlargement were enthusiastically received by an audience of nearly 60 alumni and foundation leaders.

Phase I of the Strategic Plan is the culmination of eighteen months of work by people across the campus and manifests itself in a new vision for the College. This vision is grounded in undergraduate and master's-level education and the College's teaching mission and is squarely focused on educational, cultural, and economic service to the region. "The vision is clear, appropriate to the College's history, and ambitious," says President Tinsley. "It calls on the College and on each and every one of us to be and become our best selves."

The vision is expressed in Phase I of the Strategic Plan, which was adopted by the Board of Trustees in June. It includes the mission statement and institutional value statement (see sidebars), and also a list of goals. The goals statement reads as follows:

Consistent with its mission and values, Bridgewater State College will endeavor to: (1) become one of the leading undergraduate regional teaching institutions in the United States; (2) develop a broad array of high quality graduate programs appropriate to the needs of the people of southeastern Massachusetts; (3) increase the representation of racial and ethnic minorities among students, faculty and staff; (4) strengthen the institution's position as a national leader in the field of teacher education and become a leader in the development, application and dissemination of technologies related to teaching; (5) promote and support professional growth and renewal of faculty, administrators and staff; (6) broaden sources of revenue to support the institution's mission; (7) continue to maintain and enhance a campus community life that promotes the cognitive and affective developments of each individual; and (8) develop and enhance the institution's role as an intellectual and academic bridge between the region and the global community.

"These goals," says President Tinsley, "could serve this institution well for a long time to come."

The President cited the College's reorganization as an important step in beginning to achieve these goals. Three area vice presidents - academic affairs, student affairs, and administration and finance - coordinate each of their respective areas in carrying out the plan. Recently, the College's academic departments were divided between a school of arts and sciences and a school of education, with a dean at the helm of each. While the President has an eye toward developing a school of business and school of communication down the road, she reports that the organizational work is done for now.

During the past few years, Bridgewater has continued to move ahead despite the budget crisis in Massachusetts. This year, however, President Tinsley reports that for the first time since her arrival at Bridgewater new money has been appropriated by the legislature toward the College's operating budget. This state allocation is nearly 10 percent higher than last year. "This is a first for me as a college president; all I've ever had is money taken away, although I've read in the How to be President book that this is the way it's normally supposed to happen," she quips.

To illustrate the economic impact of state funding, the College's total operating budget is $41 million, of that, $18.4 million or 44 percent comes from the Commonwealth. When President Tinsley arrived at Bridgewater, 76 percent of the operating budget was provided by the Commonwealth. This new money is earmarked for several projects including maintenance, repair, and safety and structural improvements; purchase of desperately needed equipment; and the addition of 30 new faculty positions during the next three to four years.

Progress already has included enhancement of the College's physical facilities this summer. All residence halls were painted in addition to Boyden, Harrington, the Maxwell Library, Burnell, the Kelly Gymnasium, Tillinghast Hall, the Rondileau Campus Center and the Science Building. The Flynn Dining Common was completely renovated, the aviation classroom was updated, and new blackboards were purchased for 86 classrooms. This year, $630,000 is set aside for maintenance, repairs, and safety. This is in addition to $840,000 from the Division of Capital Planning and Operations to replace the roofs on the Conant Science Building and Kelly Gymnasium.

The future holds many changes for the physical plant at Bridgewater with much growth planned for what is now known as the East Campus. Several new projects are set to begin within the next 18 months. The Groundbreaking Ceremony for the J. Joseph Moakley Center for Technological Applications was in November. Plans are well underway to begin construction for the M.B.T.A. train station in the railroad track area. A 240 person residence hall (contiguous to Miles and DiNardo Hall) in addition to a 700-person dining facility is planned. Possibilities for a parking garage are being explored. And a new baseball and softball complex is slated through the support of a 2-year Foundation Capital Campaign. Also, during the summer, the Foundation purchased an additional 30 acres of land for future development on East Campus.

President Tinsley shared success for these many developments with the faculty and staff at the College and commended them for their dedication. She voiced her concern for employee salaries at the College saying, "It is on my mind on a daily basis that the faculty and staff at this College, who are making these things happen and are doing such an outstanding job, are going into their fifth year without raises - and this is really outrageous." She stressed her hopefulness, however, that the economy is stabilizing, new revenues are coming into the state, collections are running ahead of government projections, and new money is finally being provided for higher education.

Institutional Values

The primary focus of this institution is on undergraduate education with an accessible teaching faculty which fosters exemplary academic standards. We affirm the importance of graduate education that supports the primary mission and focus of the College and meets the needs of the region we serve. We value scholarship and teaching within an environment of collegiality, integrity and professional ethics. We promote individual potential and scholastic achievement by means of a broad spectrum of learning experiences.

We value the uniqueness, worth and dignity of each person. While we recognize that students have responsibility for their own lives, we also believe that a supportive and friendly community life helps students learn and encourages their interaction with faculty and staff. We value a continuing association with our alumni.

We foster a liberal education for all students leading to lifelong personal and professional growth and strongly believe in academic responsibility and freedom, including the freedom to doubt and inquire. We place major emphasis on developing critical thinking and modeling effective citizenship. Consequently, discrimination, harassment and intimidation are unacceptable.

We value cultural diversity and strive to provide access to students of all ages, backgrounds, and financial means. We believe that our institution should be an important resource for the entire region and provide a global perspective within a local context.
Bridgewater State College, in collaboration with the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution, will participate in the award-winning program that brings scientific exploration live to students throughout North America — the JASON Project.

In March 1993, Bridgewater State College will broadcast a two-week expedition to Baja California Sur led by Dr. Robert Ballard, the oceanographer and explorer who discovered the RMS Titanic and the German battleship Bismarck. Through advanced satellite technology and two-way audio broadcasts, the expedition will come to the students as it happens, allowing them to question the expedition scientists about what they are seeing as they are seeing it.

During the broadcast, through the eyes of the remotely operated vehicle (ROV) JASON, students will be face to face with gray whales and their calves. They'll stand on the ocean floor, learning more about the geology, biology, and chemistry of the hydrothermal vent system.

This new age of scientific learning turns students into first-hand scientific explorers. It is inspiring a new enthusiasm in the fields that need it most -- science and technology. It comes at a time when Bridgewater State College is poised to have significant impact on teaching and learning through the J. Joseph Moakley Center for Technological Applications (scheduled to open in the spring of 1994).

The College is now contacting local schools systems and inviting teachers from grades 4 through 10 to participate in the program. A sea series of workshops for all of the JASON network teachers will take place in January.

Along with Bridgewater State College, 500,000 students at 24 other Primary Interactive Network Sites (PINS) in the U.S., Canada and -- for the first time -- England, will take part in the JASON Project. Before attending the live broadcast at Bridgewater, students will study a special expedition curriculum prepared by the National Science Teachers Association. Most of the lessons feature hands-on activities dealing with one or more of the JASON expedition subjects: technology, geology, physics, geography, history, and social studies.

"We are delighted to be a part of this outstanding program that combines the best in exploration with the best in education," said President Adrian Tinsley.
“JASON’s mission is to motivate students to enter careers in science by bringing the thrills and excitement of scientific discovery to them as it is happening. And the expedition to Baja will be the most fascinating yet.”

This is the fourth JASON expedition. The first, in 1989, explored the bottom of the Mediterranean Sea, where Ballard’s team documented the first active hydrothermal vents there and explored the deepest known ancient shipwreck site. The second, in 1990, took place on Lake Ontario, as two sunken, perfectly preserved War of 1812 battleships were mapped by computer for the first time. The third, in December 1991, followed the footsteps of Charles Darwin in the remote Galapagos Islands.

The JASON Project is sponsored by the JASON Foundation for Education, a unique partnership of scientific research facilities, private industry, museums and educational institutions. National sponsors of the JASON Project include EDS, the National Geographic Society, Cray Research Inc., the U.S. Navy’s Office of the Chief of Naval Research and Chief of Naval Operations and the Toyota USA Foundation.

The non-profit JASON Foundation for Education is headquartered in Waltham, Massachusetts; its executive director is Timothy W. Armour.

Teachers interested in finding out more information about the JASON Project may contact Ms. Liz Sironen at (508) 697-1347. Also, some viewings will be available to the campus community and general public and anyone interested may also contact Ms. Sironen at the above number for more information.
Positioning Bridgewater for the 21st Century is the goal of the 1992-1993 Bridgewater Annual Fund. The momentum of the College's long history, its current strength, and the promise for its future are the combining elements for the success of this campaign. A $610,000 goal from alumni, faculty and staff, corporations, parents, students and friends of the College, has been announced by campaign chairperson Dr. Isabelle King.

"The Annual Fund is really the basis of all that we are, and each person has a role to play," says Dr. King, '51 & '54, former faculty member, Alumni Association officer, and trustee of the Bridgewater State College Foundation. The 1991-1992 campaign, which surpassed its goal by 23%, represented considerable growth in the Annual Fund effort, and Dr. King is optimistic that this year's campaign will be even more successful. Emphasizing the importance of each and every person to the campaign, she encourages everyone to participate at whatever level possible.

The momentum currently overtaking Bridgewater is far reaching. Not only are the students enthusiastic, but Bridgewater's leaders, under the capable guidance of Dr. Adrian Tinsley, are reshaping the face of campus. Ground has been broken for the John Joseph Moakley Center for Technological Applications, slated for completion in spring of 1994. Additional physical expansion includes the building of a new residence hall and dining hall for upper campus, construction of the Old Colony Railroad Line station, and new and renovated athletic fields and facilities at Swenson Field.

Each person can play a vital role in the continued growth and success of the college. Supporting the Annual Fund assures maintenance of Bridgewater's margin of excellence. Planned giving options build endowment for the future by Ralph J. Fletcher, '53, Director of Planned Giving

Planned giving options build endowment for the future. This trend continues, and we have every reason to believe it will, we must provide security for our future with other endowed funds.

One source of this type of endowment come from ‘planned gifts’ from our alumni and friends. The most popular of these gifts is a bequest in a will. Surprisingly, most of the great college endowments in America have been built by alumni and friends who made provisions in their wills or other estate plans for the college’s future.

Recently, Bridgewater began emphasizing these planned gifts in order to build a permanent endowment - and the results have been encouraging. I invite you to join this group of alumni and friends who want to extend their support of Bridgewater into the future.

A booklet explaining various types of planned gifts which you may choose to consider is available by writing or calling me at the Davis Alumni Center.

What makes a college great? That question deserves our deepest thought because we who love Bridgewater want nothing less than greatness for our college.

History shows that five ingredients usually combine to create an outstanding college: a superior faculty, expert leadership, high quality students, traditions that shape the college’s character and ideals, and an endowment sufficient to assure its fiscal strength year after year.

We rightly take pride in Bridgewater’s teaching, leaders, students, and traditions. But the fifth ingredient - endowment - is equally crucial.

Where do endowment funds come from? Historically our college’s endowment was guaranteed by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. In fact, when I was a student here in the 50s, more than 85% of the college’s total budget was provided by the ‘endowment’ of state funds.

Unfortunately, today this percentage has dropped to about 44%. If

The Class of ’87 joins The Bridgewater Society

Classmates from 1987 reminisce as they celebrate their 5-year reunion during Homecoming weekend. The event was held at Chadwick Park in Boston.

by Kimberly DeCaro Williams

In the tradition of class giving at Bridgewater State College, the Class of 1987 is joining the Bridgewater Society, a program to build endowment at Bridgewater State College. In honor of its founding in 1840 and in appreciation of the value of a Bridgewater education, the Class is building a $10,000 endowment to the College.

“Our recent five-year reunion found many of us working in the fields for which we prepared at Bridgewater. It was an overwhelming consensus that we were each well prepared—through our studies, social experiences, and extra-curricular involvement—to work in our chosen professions,” says Kevin Kindregan, president of the Class of 1987. “In light of the cutbacks in state funding at Bridgewater, we wanted to do whatever we could to help ensure that the same Bridgewater experience we had would be available to Bridgewater students of tomorrow.” It was the interest of a group of ’87 alums which led to their participation in the Endowment Plus Program, enabling them to build a $10,000 endowment. “This is the perfect way for our Class to become involved,” he says, “and the perfect way to give back to Bridgewater.”

Alumni and friends play a key role in sustaining the heritage and excellence of a Bridgewater education, particularly as state assistance to schools and students declines. Attaining various educational and operational goals, such as funding scholarships, upgrading equipment and expanding facilities, is an important outcome of joining the Bridgewater Society. Additionally, membership in the Bridgewater Society offers a unique way of supporting the College while helping to guarantee its strong future and helping to provide for its excellent educational programs.

The program works by enabling you to make a substantial gift to Bridgewater State College on the installment plan — and your actual out-of-pocket costs will be considerably less than the value of the final gift. You may do this by selecting your level of pledge and making either five annual payments or a one-time contribution to the plan. An added benefit of the program is a portion of your gift will be available immediately to the College to meet educational and operational goals. This endowment plan, designed specifically for not-for-profit organizations such as Bridgewater, is a form of life insurance. Unlike standard life insurance plans, however, it does not require any financial disclosure or medical information.

The Class of 1987 is setting a strong example of class giving at Bridgewater. Its leadership will ensure a legacy for the future. “It is our hope,” says Kindregan, “that our participation will inspire other classes to become involved by joining the Bridgewater Society — the perfect opportunity to give something back to Bridgewater.”

If you would like more information on joining the Bridgewater Society’s Endowment Plus Program, contact Mr. Philip A. Conroy, Jr., ’72, director of Development, at (508) 697-1287.
A New Generation of Bridgewater Majors
Two students share their experiences in music & economics

by Kimberly DeCaro Williams

Hectic schedules, heavy workloads, and important decisions to make about their futures are shared experiences by classmates Jim LaFlame and Makiko Kobayashi. They share in common, too, graduation this May with degrees in two of the College’s newest majors - Jim in music and Makiko in economics.

Music was introduced as a major into Bridgewater’s curriculum in 1990, and economics was approved in the fall of 1992.

Efforts to secure a music major were spearheaded by Professor Ian Johnstone, then, chairman of the Department of Music. Emphasizing a strong foundation in music history, theory, and performance within a liberal arts context, the music major at Bridgewater prepares students to pursue a variety of academic and professional interests including performing, teaching (in collaboration with the elementary education major), and further graduate study. Implementation of the major responded to both the faculty’s desire to better serve the student population and a growing interest by the students.

The faculty enthusiastically encourages the 35 music majors studying at Bridgewater - and the students are appreciative. “The entire staff of the music department is great,” says Jim, as he talks about professors Asselin, Garcia, Johnstone, Kreiling, Liberles, and Santos. “They are a talented, creative, and very supportive group to work with.”

As a double major at Bridgewater, Jim has studied music and speech communication. His background as an accomplished musician, both instrumental and vocal, round out his communication studies, where he has strengthened his skills as an instructor for the Primary Leadership Development Course at the Massachusetts Military Academy. A non-traditional student who came to Bridgewater after earning an associate’s degree from Bristol Community College and serving in the National Guard, Jim has taken full advantage of the opportunities at Bridgewater.

Academically, within the music major, he has studied music theory and history, class piano, sight-singing and ear training, form and analysis, and composing among others. The 35 students currently enrolled in Bridgewater’s music major represent string, wind, vocal, and brass performers, some of whom also have a double major qualifying them for certification with emphasis on music in elementary education, music in early childhood education, or music in special education. According to Dr. Maxine Asselin, current chairperson of the Department of Music, a new faculty position will be added to the department in the field of music education. “We are hoping to expand the combined music/elementary education major to include certification in music as well,” she says.

Studying music history was an academic highlight for Jim. He adds, however, that it was the well-roundedness of activities which he has enjoyed most. “A valuable element of the Bridgewater experience, in addition to the knowledge, is participation in extra-curricular activities,” says Jim, adding that there are not enough hours in the day to accomplish all he would like to do. Jim is actively involved with the Chamber Singers, the Chorale, the Dance Company, and formerly the theatre department. This is in addition to the rigorous academic coursework of two majors, on-campus employment, and activities with the 215th National Guard Unit.

The decision to attend graduate school or enter the working world faces Jim as he contemplates his future. For now, however, he looks forward to completing his coursework and traveling to Russia with the Chamber Singers this spring.

For Jim’s classmate, Makiko Kobayashi, the approval of the economics major this fall came just in time for her to sign on to be one of its first graduates this spring. Already having taken numerous economics classes under the tutelage of Dr. Margaret Landman, she was convinced that she wanted to focus her future in this field.

Department chairman Anthony Cicerone worked with professors Stanley Antoniotti, Ranjit Vohra, and principal proposal author Margaret Landman, to coordinate approval of the major, which is designed to provide students with a comprehensive, analytical education in economics utilizing both theoretical and empirical problem-solving methods. Aiding this effort is a new, full-time economics faculty member slated to begin this fall.

"Training in economic theory and methodology will enable Bridgewater graduates to serve in several fast-growing, economics-related professions including business, finance, banking, insurance, and government," says Professor Cicerone. This training is especially valuable in southeastern Massachusetts with its strong emphasis on economic development. The program also provides a firm foundation for those desiring further academic training in economics, business, or law.

Makiko’s studies have included micro and macroeconomics as well as quantitative analysis and other related coursework. She combines her interest in economics with a strong aptitude in mathematics and will graduate in May with a double major in economics and mathematics. She cites the strength of faculty in both fields, saying Dr. Margaret Landman and Professor Philip Scalisi are especially supportive.

"I really like her teaching style and I have learned a great deal from her. She has encouraged me with everything I have done," says Makiko of her mentor, Dr. Landman. Not only has she taken classes with Dr. Landman, but she also worked with her on a Shea Scholar project entitled “Financial Market Growth in Japan and its Effect on the American Economy” which was presented during Alumni Weekend last spring.

Makiko also recognizes the contribution of her math teacher. "Professor Scalisi’s thorough knowledge of the math material makes understanding it easy," she says. As a student employee in the math department, Makiko also developed a friendship with Professor Scalisi - a relationship, she says, which would be impossible to have in her homeland of Japan.

Like Jim LaFlame and his varied involvements, Makiko’s activities are not limited to academics. She is involved with the International Club, MASSPIRG, the Karate Club, Pi Mu Epsilon (the national honors math society), and also works as a tutor in economics and math. She shares special times with her host family, Craig and Irene Cowles, and has traveled with them to New Jersey, Nebraska, and Colorado. She has returned to her home in Yokohama, Japan, only twice during her four years at Bridgewater, and looks forward to returning there again this winter.

As for the future, Makiko is applying to PhD programs at NYU, Penn State, Brown, and the University of Nebraska. "I want to be like Dr. Landman," she says. "I want to teach." Through her tutoring, Makiko has experienced what she would like to become her life’s work - teaching. As a tutor to four economics students and three math students, she has a good sense of what the field is about. "I just love to teach," she says convincingly. "I’m having so much fun, I wish I could take my PhD program immediately and begin teaching freshmen right now."

The commitment of the students and dedication of the staffs within the music and economics departments, as well as the support and advocacy of Bridgewater president Dr. Adrian Tinsley and vice president of Academic Affairs, Dr. John Bardo, facilitated the approval of these two new majors. It is their continued dedication and support which perpetuates excellence within these and all academic programs at Bridgewater.

At the invitation of Congressman Joe Moakley, the BSC Symphonic Wind Ensemble performed in Washington, D.C., this fall.
Project PALMS: Partnerships Advancing Learning of Mathematics & Science

by Bonnie Troupe, Office of Sponsored Projects

Last spring, the Massachusetts Department of Education was awarded a $10 million grant from the National Science Foundation. NSF approved the Department of Education’s math/science systemic change initiative, Projects PALMS (Partnerships Advancing Learning of Mathematics and Science). Massachusetts was one of thirty-two states and one territory that applied for the grant this past year and one of the eleven projects that were selected for funding.

Massachusetts will receive the $10 million award over the next five years to improve the teaching of mathematics and science in public schools and adult learning centers across the Commonwealth, and the preparation of new teachers of science and math. The project, which emphasizes project-based learning to address real-life problems, will create the first-ever statewide mathematics and science education curriculum framework policy for all Massachusetts schools. It will expand professional development opportunities for teachers and will link the resources of schools, colleges, private industry and cultural institutions to help students learn math and science principles.

How does Project PALMS involve Bridgewater State College? In response to addressing the goal of developing the statewide curriculum, the project’s first step began this fall in the form of a three-month PALMS institute. Institute participants, who will draft preliminary recommendations, include project staff, PALMS Mathematics and Science Specialists (selected from public school teachers), higher education faculty and representatives from informal science institutions. Bridgewater State College was asked to join the Higher Education Partners and to provide two participants for the Institute.

Dr. John Marvelle of the Elementary and Early Childhood Department and Professor Gail Price of the Math and Computer Science Department have been attending the sessions that began this September, bringing them to Worcester three days a week for full-day sessions. Bridgewater’s decision to provide a team of two faculty members is unique to the Institute and reflects the College’s approach to educational reform which involves pairing arts and sciences faculty with education faculty. Thus, Bridgewater State College’s increased involvement allows the college faculty to be paired with teachers from more than one Demonstration/Dissemination Site. A Southeast Collaborative has recently been formed between the College and the New Bedford schools as well as the public schools in Falmouth, Attleboro, North Attleboro, and Milton (homes of Noyce Fellows, teachers funded by the Noyce Foundation in addition to the cadre supported by NSF).

The hands-on, project-based learning experimentation at the Institute is assisting Dr. Marvelle and Professor Price to draft recommendations with their partners. The Institute is being conducted in preparation for next year which will involve continued work in the schools themselves. Additional sites will be selected over the next four years of the project, with the ultimate intention being that all school districts in the Commonwealth be offered the opportunity to link with Project PALMS by the end of year five.

Doris Ekstrom Gilman sends us news from her home in Peterborough, NH. Her husband, Kenneth, passed away in 1987. They were married 53 years. Doris has one son living with his family in Wellington, New Zealand and a daughter and family in West Springfield, MA. She keeps busy traveling and was recently rewarded for her years of effort on behalf of the Washington National Cathedral when she attended the dedication and consecration of the cathedral in 1990.

Despite some physical limitations, Rita Cassidy Wheeler has attended two memorable gatherings in 1992. The first was the Wheeler Family Reunion -- 250 member strong. The second was her 60th high school reunion for which she traveled from Lansing, Michigan, to Cambridge, Massachusetts. Rita writes that she hopes to celebrate the next 60th at Bridgewater in 1996. During the past school year Peggy Gilliatt Raymond and husband Bob volunteered their teaching skills weekly at the new National Science Museum in Ocala, Florida, where they taught fourth graders about Florida's environment, past and present. The program was an enrichment of the school system's social studies curriculum. Although she retired in 1990 as executive director of the Royer-Greaves School for the Blind in Paoli, Pennsylvania, Anna McKee Perry has returned to the school in the capacity of acting executive director.

Anyone wondering whether or not to sign up for an Elderhostel tour might check with either Eunie Perkins Witherehl or Alice Carr Pedretti, both of whom are enthusiastic about their Elderhostel experiences. No doubt other classmates have attended Elderhostel seminars. Why not write and share your thoughts for future Class Notes?

Class of 1940

Rose Lans Laliberty, 211 Rocky Hill Rd., Plymouth, MA 02360

Betty Smith Wildes and her husband, Horace, celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary in July. Marge Boundary Skulley and Bill Skulley were married 49 years on October 9. In August, Bill and Marge attended their eldest grandson's wedding in Colorado. Congratulations to them all, and, time does march on.

However, Alba Martinelli Thompson is among those who attest to the fact that, if blessed with reasonable health, we don't need to sit idly by and watch time march on. Choosing not to run again after serving six years, Alba retired in May as the first woman selectman in Plymouth, Mass. Using the Boston Globe as her text, she teaches developmental reading, English, civics, history, etc. to the inmates of the Plymouth County Jail. She says she has graduated some 800 in her seven years of volunteer teaching. (Watch for an article telling of her successful program in a subsequent edition of Bridgewater.) Also, Alba continues her interest in the Far East and returns about every other year. This coming spring she will go to Japan where she has been invited to attend the dedication of the replica of Plymouth's Harlow Old Fort House (1677), built on the shores of Shichigahama, Plymouth's sister city. The name of this city, located 150 miles north of Tokyo in northeastern Japan, translates to "seven Beaches." Thus the sister cities share beaches and the fishing industry.

Jean Whiting Patenaude reports meeting Gertrude Woodward Estabrook at a Plymouth County Teachers meeting and tells that, though officially retired, Trudy and her husband are involved in the Estabrook Family Restaurant on Route 28 in West Bridgewater.

Louise B. Forsyth, 75 Monroe Road, Quincy, MA 02169

On June 13, 1992, Paul T. Clifford, son of Doris Burrell Clifford and Thomas E. Clifford, was ordained to the Priesthood of Jesus Christ at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross, Boston, Massachusetts, his Eminence Bernard Cardinal Law presiding. A Solemn Mass of Thanksgiving was celebrated on June 29th at St. Catherine of Siena Church, Norwood. The family was pleased that so many Bridgewater friends attended the ceremonies and reception.

Betty Milne Edgar and William J. Edgar travelled from Greenwich, CT, to visit daughter Anne and family at Mercer Island, Washington, and spent time in central Oregon. They also visited daughter Beth and family in Miami, Florida. In Tucson, Arizona, Bill and Betty greatly enjoyed participating in their first Elderhostel. Betty still volunteers at the church thrift shop which she managed for several years. Ina May Moshier Marland, retired after many years of teaching and being a school librarian in East Bridgewater, lives in Sarasota, Florida. Her husband died five years ago; they had a son and a daughter. She teaches piano and is organist in a large church in Sarasota. She volunteers in nursing homes and plays piano at their events. Last summer she travelled with her daughter to Montana, Yellowstone National Park, and other western states and enjoyed white water rafting. This year she is taking courses at the Bible Institute.

Edna Brown Mills drives often from her New Jersey home to Irvona, PA, to visit her son, the Reverend Lawrence Mills and his family, and to Beverly, MA, to visit her daughter, Katherine Mills.

Six members of the class who have maintained friendship since college days enjoyed a summer reunion at a lakeside restaurant in Norton. Each one is enjoying retirement and had much information to share. Present were Mae Haues Otaska, Doris Burrell Clifford, Edna Brown Mills, Mary Kute, Jean M. Kay, and Louise B. Forsyth. Elizabeth Wood Smith continues regular involvement with Elderhostel program throughout the USA and abroad and also travels to visit son in the northwest. In her "free time" Elizabeth owns and manages a Christmas tree farm in Plaistow, NH, and keeps busy planting, shaping, and selling trees. Margaret Tynan lives in Cape Coral, Florida. She worked as a reading specialist in the Boston schools and loved helping children who had reading problems. Recipient of the 1992 Massachusetts Association for Counseling and Development's "Award for Distinguished Service to the Counseling Profession" was Louise B. Forsyth. She participated as a panel member at the MACD annual conference held at Harvard's Graduate School of Education for the fifth time since 1982, Louise B. Forsyth was invited to be a member of a visiting team to study accreditation of the counselor education program of a major university. The team, which included two professors from Illinois and Ohio universities, spent an intensive four days of work to determine if the program met the standards of the Council for the Accreditation of Counseling. What activities have other members of the Class of 1941 been enjoying? The Summer 1992 edition of Bridgewater contained a great pull-out self-mailer to be used to communicate news about alumni but not one member of the Class of 1941 returned it. Communicate, please!

Well, once again I have agreed to serve as class secretary for our class. As you may have noticed, news from our class has been nearly non-existent in this magazine. I hope that we can begin the process of reconnecting old friends and updating each other on what is happening in our lives. No news is insignificant. Let us know about a new grandchild, an exciting vacation or travel experience, or volunteer work that you may be doing. Our class gift is slowly, but surely, coming together. Thus far four people have pledged to the campaign. We hope that you will join the effort to give back to Bridgewater. Many of our classmates spend time in Florida during the winter months. If you are one of them, you may wish to notify the Alumni Office that you would like information on the alumni gatherings that are scheduled in March.

I look forward to hearing from you in the near future.

Rhoda "Nicky" Linehan a teacher at St. Catherine's elementary school in Norwood recalls her year in the "big league." In 1946 she played with the All-American Girls Baseball League which was depicted in the recent box office hit, "A League of Their Own." She played second base for the Fort Wayne Daisies in the summer following her graduation from high school in Somerset at a starting salary of $55 per week. Nicky turned down the opportunity to try out for a part in the movie but did attend the reunion in Cooperstown, NY when the AAGBL was enshrined at the Baseball Hall of Fame. Nicky and husband, Edmund, reside in Norwood and have two grown children. She is still an active athlete and recently teamed up with her daughter to win a couple of mother-daughter golf tournaments.
Pamela Coutavas Panagopoulos retired this past June after 42 years of teaching science in Haverhill. She tells us, "The education and experience received at BSC were excellent and I agree with Ralph Fletcher, '53 that a Bridgewater degree combined with the willingness to work is a ticket to success in life." Pauline's inspiration at Bridgewater was her former teacher, Miss Hulsman. Rita Laughton Scudder has left her native Watertown schools for retirement after 42 years of teaching. Reflecting on her career, Rita sums up the differences in her students over the years this way. "Children are always children-they give love and want love in return." She is now looking forward to spending time with friends and family.

After 40 years in the Norwell School System, Shirley Deknes has joined the ranks of the retired. To show their appreciation for the many years of dedication Shirley has given their children, the people of Norwell honored her with a public reception. A very interesting article in the Gainesville (FL) Sun features Ursula Gamble. Ursula is a substitute teacher at the local high school, but her first love is teaching conditioning and aerobic exercises to women over 60 through county community education to help them lead happier, healthy lives. Ursula says she in better shape now than she was at 25, but I can't believe that.

Our 40th reunion was very nice. Some of us were up from Florida, Maryland, and New York. Everyone enjoyed the good feelings of being together again, just talking about the last 15 years and for many of us, retirement. We agreed to raising money for a gift for our 50th anniversary and we also agreed to meet again for a 45th reunion to get together and to update ourselves as to the progress we are making on our gift at that time.

I will have more on this in a separate mailing I hope to have out before the new year. In five years when our next reunion is scheduled, please make an effort to attend, especially if you live in the Boston-Bridgewater area. It really is nice seeing our friends and classmates. Doug Barrows, our senior class president, was seriously injured in an accident some time ago. I'm sure he would appreciate hearing from us. His address is: 870 Patricia Ave., Dunedin, FL 34698.

Phyllis McCaigle Hosker has suffered two bereavements recently. Both her husband, Frank and her son, Charles passed away in 1991 and we extend her our deepest sympathy. She is trying to keep a positive attitude and is cheered by her daughter, Cathy, and her two grandchildren - two-year-old Daniel and six-month-old Christina. Phyllis is still teaching in Lynn, Mass., and has recently moved to an 'elegant condo' in Swampscott where she intends to enjoy her retirement commencing June, 1993.

Ann K. Noyes has taught in the public schools in Massachusetts for 39 years - kindergarten in Greenfield and Quincy and 30 years teaching 1st grade in Duxbury, Mass. She retired in June 1992, and plans now to spend her time volunteering with the Duxbury Chandler Elementary School and pursuing courses in the arts and crafts area.

John Zoino, although retired from the superintendent in Randolph, Mass., has taken a temporary position as superintendent of schools in Lunenburg, Mass. Can't keep a good man down!

Finally, classmates, our 40th anniversary takes place next spring. I am going to get a committee together to plan our reunion and begin to plan our class gift for our 50th. Please contact me if you would like to serve on our class committee. RJF

Hazel Luke Varella, 121 Center St., N. Easton, MA 02356

Congratulations to Theodore J. and Ellen Calhoun who retired this year from the New Bedford School Department. Theodore received his M.Ed. from Bridgewater in 1954 and began teaching in New Bedford a year later, serving as chairperson of the science department, principal of the evening school, assistant principal of the high school and, beginning in 1974, headmaster. During his tenure as headmaster, the high school received national recognition by receiving the Excellence in Education Award.

Jean Corey Ford left in July to serve in the Peace Corp. for two years on the island of St. Lucia in the East Caribbean. A widow, mother, and grandmother (who recently learned to ski and has enjoyed hiking the Appalachian Trail and the Swiss Alps,) Jean will be using her expertise as a kindergarten and first grade teacher in her new assignment. Her duties will involve teaching and developing educational programs and media packages. Her address: PCV, Peace Corps, P.O. Box 123, Castries, St. Lucia, West Indies. Drop her a line!

Edward Arcikowski, M.Ed., has retired from teaching most recently as principal of the South Middle School in Braintree. He has devoted the past 30 years to the education of the children of Braintree. In the spring of 1992, he was surprised by a standing ovation from 330 students of the South Middle School. The student council presented him, with a collage of some of his favorite people, and they presented him with the Edward Arcikowski School Pride Banner which will be bestowed on the classroom with the most school pride each year in his honor. (See related article about Edward's teaching career in the summer issue of Bridgewater.)

John Kent, M.Ed., writes that he has retired from the education field. He taught full or part time at Bridgewater from 1967 to 1982. He then continued as coordinator of Senior Volunteers in Burnell School until 1991. He and his wife Jean (Oberlander, '53), have three children and four grandchildren.

Since 1981, John and Jean have visited schools and universities in most of the "iron" curtain countries. They also spent a summer and winter in Australia and New Zealand and a summer in China in 1988. John served 6 years as selectman in Easton, and he served as Governor's Special Advisor for Chapter 188. He is presently on the State Board of Directors for Finance Committees and a director of the Superintendents' Center at Stonehill.

John is looking forward to our 40th reunion in 1995.

Timothy R. Tomlinson has been associate director of the Morris Arboretum of the University of Pennsylvania, the official arboretum of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, since 1979. He is the general chair of the Organizing Committee for an international symposium of the utilization of medicinal plants, sponsored by the Morris Arboretum and the World Health Organization, that will be held in Philadelphia in April, 1993.

Class of 1956

Gene Kennedy, 5 Kabeyun Road, Converse Point, Marion, MA 02738

Mary Cote Foster writes from Franklin that her husband, Alan, was recently given early retirement. They are very proud of their five granddaughters and two grandsons.

A mini-reunion of sorts was held in August at the home of Gene Kennedy, with several classmates in attendance.
Among those enjoying homemade clam chowder and cool ocean breezes were the following: Mary Lou Hill Winslow, Laura Batista Crocco, Mary Regan, Ann Marie Mason Walsh, Mary O'Brien Souza, and Priscilla Tripp Gilchrest, who brought along her daughter, Lucy, and 3 grandchildren. Also attending were Gil Souza and Larry Walsh.

Doreen Schmidt, after a quarter century of teaching American dependent children in England, has retired to Laguna Niguel, California where she is trying to adjust to the different climate and earthquakes.

Vincent Sullican has been involved in an auctioneer-appraiser business in Quincy since his retirement from teaching in 1981. His oldest daughter is a junior in the Honors Program at Boston College and another daughter is in the 8th grade at the Central Middle School.

Patricia Mandeville Sullivan is married to Attorney Thomas M. Sullivan, has 3 girls and 4 grandchildren. She has traveled around the world with the statue of Our Lady of Fatima - destinations have included Portugal, Spain, France, Rome, Greece, Pakistan, Egypt, Nepal, Hong Kong, China, Hawaii, Guadeloupe, and the Holy Land. Pat taught in Quincy for two years before receiving a full scholarship to receive her M.Ed. at the University of Florida. She briefly worked with United Airlines as well. After marriage, Pat taught children needing special care in her home working with the Randolph Schools. She also plays the organ and has sung in restaurants on the Cape and is currently participating in her church music program. Pat’s finding her teaching background helpful in the field of music, having had a music studio for 25 years and representing the Lawrey and Baldwin Music Companies.

Ann Richardson Davis of Laurel, Maryland writes that she is teaching first grade in Prince Georges County. Ann’s youngest daughter, Erica, is a recent graduate of the University of Maryland. Daughter Karen, a graduate of Cornell, has just completed her second year of law school at the University of Colorado in Boulder. Daughter Leslie, a 1986 graduate of the University of Delaware, was married in May of 1989. Ann traveled to the Southwest this passed summer with a one week stay in Santa Fe and still keeps in touch with friends Rene Kiley and Jean Ferioli Elkins with a “reunion” in Boca Raton last October.

Mary Garvey Guyett recently received a master’s degree in library and information studies from the University of Rhode Island. Mary is presently employed as library manager at Providence Hospital in Holyoke. She and husband, Douglas, reside in West Springfield and are the parents of daughters Margaret, a victims and witnesses advocate, and Katherine, a spring graduate of McGill University in Montreal.

Robert K. MacLauchlin, professor of speech communications and director of television-radio instruction begins his 24th year at Colorado State University. Robert reports that his work has been rewarding and exciting and that the educational programs that he has developed have hosted many famous speakers including former President Gerald Ford. Robert is again the Chair of the Faculty Internship Program of the National Association of Broadcasters’ Education Association Committee for 1992 and has recently been nominated for inclusion in the Whos’s Who in the West; Who’s Who in American Education and Who’s Who in Entertainment. He and his wife, Liz, recently celebrated their 28th anniversary.

Cliff Wood, c/o P.O. Box 13, Bridgewater, MA 02324

Maureen Fahley Calvi writes that her son, Mark, has been invited to spring training with the Seattle Mariners in Tempe, Arizona. The catcher/designated hitter will then go to Bellingham, WA, Seattle’s Class A team in the Northwest League. Maureen recently served as area coordinator for the Marco Island, FL alumni gathering.

John DaLucz, MA, ’60, recently retired after 36 years in teaching, more than 30 at the Dartmouth Middle School, where he was affectionately dubbed “The Map Man” for his enthusiastic and innovative teaching of geography. A colleague was quoted in the South Dartmouth Chronicle: “He is the quintessential teacher, the essence of everything a teacher should be. He loves the kids and he loves the subject matter he is teaching.”

Paul Scopa has recently been appointed Assistant National Sales Manager for Prentice Hall. He previously served as PH’s Science Product Manager and Director of Science Marketing. Paul entered publishing after twenty years in education, working at Holt, Rinehart, Winston and D.C Heath before joining Prentice Hall. His wife, Nancy, is an editor with Silver Burdett Ginn. Their daughter recently graduated from the Wharton School and is working in New York, while son Kevin has entered Delaware Valley College, PA, majoring in animal science.

Joseph C. Simas, Jr. retired in June from his principalship of Apponequet Regional High School, where he began his teaching career right after graduation from BSC. The school system, serving Freetown and Lakeville MA, obviously is grateful for Joe’s dedication and length of service, and he to the system, remarking in the New Bedford Standard Times: “If I were to begin my career all over again, I would not want to be at any other educational institution other than Apponequet.” Retirement plans include spending more time with his wife, Myrtle, their three children, Leah, a nurse, Rebecca Ann, a lawyer, and Jennifer, a pharmacist.

Albert Wagner, M ’60, retired in June after a long career in Special Neads at Norton High School. Albert, in an interview for the Norton Mirror, reflected upon his thirty-five years of service to the Norton School System and to special needs students, saying that his biggest goal was always “to get them to feel that they were worth something.” More travel and more volunteer work are in his retirement plans.

Lara Louise Belk Kline is in her second year of teaching science at the Chestnut Middle School in Springfield, Mass. She is continuing her education with courses at U Mass. This past August she visited her son, Sean, who is currently living and working in Paris, France. Lara also has a son, Eric, at Texas A & M working on a Ph.D. in aeronautical engineering and a son, Jon, who attends Cornell University and will be at the London School of Economics next year.

Peter Nord was the keynote speaker at his high school alma mater’s graduation ceremonies this past spring. Peter, a resident and teacher in the town of Scituate, received his master’s degree in English from Lesley College this past spring. He spoke to the graduates of failure and how it can strengthen if the lessons it offers are learned.

Rosemary S. Tierney, mayor of New Bedford will lead the government division of this year’s fundraising drive of the United Way of Greater New Bedford. Mayor Tierney is active in the American Business Woman’s Association, the Catholic Women’s Club, the New Bedford Board of Realtors and the Massachusetts Board of Realtors. She and her husband, John, reside in New Bedford. They have five children.

Daniel Cabral was appointed superintendent of schools in his hometown of Somerset in January of 1991. Daniel has worked in school systems in New Hampshire and Massachusetts and finds it disheartening that public education is no longer a priority for the majority of voters. However, of Somerset he says, “Quality education has been a tradition.”

Claire-Marie Hart is currently an English teacher at Beverly High School, and an adjunct professor of English at North Shore Community College in Lynn and in Beverly. Last fall, she received the honor of becoming a finalist for the Massachusetts Teacher of the Year. Each year, Claire-Marie works closely with student teachers from Harvard, Merrimack, Gordon, and Salem State and remembers fondly and appreciatively the superb training she received at B.S.C. She says, “Dr. Chellis, Professor Greene, and Dr. DeRocco remain my professional role-models!”

Dear Classmates, In the next few weeks you will be receiving a survey form dealing with our 25th class reunion (can you believe this??). Would you be so kind as to fill it out and return it to me so that we can really begin planning for our big celebration. As I mentioned in the last newsletter, the 25th will be held during BSC’s 1993 Homecoming which is scheduled for the third week of October. Please circle those days now!

Richard Castro was recently named principal of the Parker School in Taunton. A 1964 graduate of Taunton High School, Richard earned both his bachelor’s and master’s degrees from BSC. He also holds a CAGS from Northeastern. Before returning to Taunton, Richard served as principal in several other schools including North Scituate (R) Elementary School, Beckwith Middle School in Rehoboth, and the Pole and Caswell schools in Taunton.

This past summer I received a great letter from Cheryl Faris, who is now living in Los Angeles. She writes, “I taught school in Harlem for a few years, got a master’s from NYU, moved to LA, went to law school at Loyola, currently work as corporate counsel for Pacific Bell, and occasionally teach business law.” In 1983, Cheryl married Patrick King, a filmmaker, and they have two children, Shane,6 and Catherine,2. Involved in civil rights work, Cheryl was the first librarian and teacher in Brockton this past June after 25 years in the system.

Richard was head of the social studies department. He coached football, baseball, basketball, and track at the junior high. An avid golfer, Kevin is looking forward to time on the golf course. Travelling with his wife Paula and spending time with his children and 7-year-old grandson, Mark, are also anticipated.

Lastly, I had quite a busy summer. I was one of 30 Delta Kappa Gamma women selected from an international pool of applicants to participate in the Golden Gift Leadership Management Seminar at the Graduate School of Management at University of Texas in Austin. To say the least, it was an incredible experience both intellectually and socially. In late July, I represented Massachusetts at the Delta Kappa Gamma Society’s International Convention in Louisville, Kentucky. One of the convention’s highlights was the introduction of new chapter members from reunified Germany. This jaunt was followed by a trip to England and Scotland with 53 Silver Lake students. The 16-day excursion marked the seventh exchange program between Forrester High School in Edinburgh, Scotland, and Silver Lake. Also sharing chaperoning duties were

Class of 1981

Cynthia Booth Ricciardi, P.O. Box 228, Taunton, MA 02780

(I’ve decided to try a new format for our ClassNotes ’81-mates -- let me know what you think.)

My first note is my own, because there are probably some of you who have been trying to remember who on earth I am -- or, was, from 1977-1981. I was one of the quiet, nondescript commuters who usually arrived around 8:00 and left by 2:00. A couple of semesters I worked in the computer lab in the basement of Grove Street (it’s “Harrington Hall” now for those of you who haven’t been back), but I was an English major, and I currently teach three sections of English Composition here at Bridgewater (remember the “visiting lecturers” -- the TBAs on the schedules? That’s me)! Last year I decided to complicate my life and was accepted as a first-year Ph.D. student at Brandeis University (Obviously, sanity is not hereditary). On to the news...but just remember that if you like to read about other people, it is probable that other people would like to read about you. Take a second and fill out the class notes page in this magazine -- someone you haven’t thought about in ten years might be interested in what you’re doing!

John Aholals is on the staff of the Riverview School - Project G.R.O.W. in East Sandwich, Mass., a new post-secondary program for learning disabled students. During the summer, John operates the Midpoint Motel in Hyannis. He also reports that he has enjoyed traveling to Finland and Alaska. [So, send some pictures to the magazine!]

Another teacher, Deborah Gracia Araujo, writes to say that she was married in August 1988 to Thomas Araujo, and, the two have a daughter, Katelyn, who was born in May 1991. Deborah and her family live in Plainville, and she teaches in the Norton public schools.

Donald K. Baillargeon writes that he is currently living in Cambridge and is working as customer service manager of a computer research and publication group called The Patricia Seybold Group.

This quarter we also got news from William Covostes of Medford that he is working as sales staff supervisor at IBAG Technical in Bellingham, a company that sells duffle bags to large universities, military institutions, and hospitals. The really BIG news, though, is that William announced his engagement to Ms. Dallas Hygia. They were married in August of 1992 on the SS George, on Lake George, and Chester Del Negro, ’81, was the Best Man. William closes with “Love the Bridgewater Newsletter. See you at Homecoming ’92.” [If you were there, William, you probably got soaked, as the rain was merciless. The good news is, so were the Bears. It was an excellent game!]

Carol Hansen Lambert and her husband Michael announced the birth of their son Michael Thomas on March 27, 1992. Michael has a “big” sister, Sara (3) and the family lives in Needham, Mass.

Jean Sharland Perry took the hint from two issues back and sent us the word that she is a resource specialist in the Stoneham School System. She has two children, Nicole (9) and Joshua (2), and is working on a master’s degree in counseling psychology at Anna Maria College. In addition, she says, “I have recently traveled and taught in Russia, in St. Petersburg and Moscow, as part of an exchange program. I plan to return again in February...and I would love to hear from former classmates.” [AND your classmates would probably enjoy seeing a photo of you in Russia...how about it?] We love pictures here at the magazine! That’s it through September 1992. There are great things going on here at Bridgewater. Those of you who only read the classnotes and skip the rest of the magazine are really missing out on some great news. Let me put in a plug for some alumni events - the Ski Trip in February...Alumni Cleanup Day in April...The New York City Theater Trip in June...(Call (508) 697-1287 or look elsewhere in the magazine for details...) Until next time...
