Recognized as one of Verdi's supreme achievements, La Traviata scandalized audiences at its premiere in 1853. An opera of almost chamber-like intimacy. Its lyrical lines are at once vivacious, graceful and gently sorrowful. It's Verdi at his most dramatically realistic in what is often called the perfect romantic opera.

Bridgewater is published quarterly for the information and reading pleasure of Bridgewater State College alumni, faculty, students, staff, parents and other friends of the college.
Dear Alumni and Friends,

The college's 155th academic year has commenced with a most auspicious beginning: on September 1, 1995, the John Joseph Moakley Center for Technological Applications officially opened its doors, ushering in a new and exciting era for Bridgewater and for public higher education in the Commonwealth.

With construction funded by a $10 million federal grant, and significant additional support from the Massachusetts Legislature, the Moakley Center is stocked with the latest computing equipment and is a very impressive electronic learning facility.

There is a fitting sense of justice that Bridgewater should again be a pioneer in the effort to improve education in America. As those familiar with our history know, Bridgewater was founded in 1840 specifically to provide formal training for teachers — a concept never before tried in this country. Now, through the Moakley Center, we embark on an equally ambitious effort, which is to harness the growing power of technology to improve how we teach and how we learn. I have every confidence that Bridgewater will again distinguish itself by being a leader and role model in this critically important process.

There are other highlights I would like to share with you:

Admissions Update

The college received 4,938 applications for admission to the class of 1999, which had just over 1,100 openings. This was an increase of 2.5% over last year. I am pleased to report also that — consistent with the college's goal to have at least 10 percent minority representation in the freshman class — the actual percentage of students of color in that class is 11.2 percent.

1,521 transfer students applied for admission this fall and we enrolled 725 new transfer students. Of the enrolling students, 46% come to us from community colleges in Massachusetts.

Construction and Plant Improvements On Campus

In terms of construction projects, this has been one of the busiest periods in the college's history.

Besides the building of the Moakley Center, a total of thirty deferred maintenance projects and plant improvements have been completed or are in progress. I hope you will visit the campus soon and see how much work has been accomplished.

MBTA Project

We continue to work closely with officials from the MBTA and the town of Bridgewater in coordinating the many phases of construction related to the MBTA commuter rail project. Initial work on building the MBTA station platform on the campus has commenced and so far everything is on schedule for a December, 1996, resumption of commuter rail service.

Land Acquisition

In June the Board authorized the college to seek to acquire five (5) parcels of land contiguous to the campus for expansion needs. As of this writing, I am pleased to report we are completing purchase agreements on all five parcels.

These purchases will assure that the college has buildable land available to meet its needs well into the next century. In total, we will acquire approximately 45 new acres, bringing our total campus land area to 240 acres.

The three largest parcels of land are adjacent to and behind the water tower in the area of the Shea and Durgin residence halls.

As I begin my seventh year as president of Bridgewater, I am exceedingly grateful to all who give so much to make this such an outstanding institution. It is the combined efforts of each of our constituencies — the faculty who teach here, the administrators and staff who serve our students, the students themselves, and the alumni, parents and friends who lend their interest and support — which enable this college to be outstanding. To all of you, my sincere appreciation.

Sincerely,

Adrian Tinsley

Michelle Pardo, '92: Renewing Bridgewater's Long-Time Connection to the People of Japan

By David Wilson, '71

In the fall of 1991, Michelle Pardo was an English major in her senior year at Bridgewater uncertain about what she would do after graduation.

Then one day she visited the Career Planning and Placement Office at the college and came across a brochure seeking applicants for a special program sponsored by the government of Japan.

By that summer she was on her way to Japan for a year of teaching English which she says “was one of the most wonderful experiences of my life.”

Upon her return, Michelle was invited to apply for a position at the Consulate General of Japan in Boston, where today she is the assistant for economic, political and cultural affairs to Mr. Hitoshi Hasegawa, consul for economic affairs.

In sum, that’s what happened to her.

But if the above sounds simple or matter-of-fact, the real experiences were far from either.

Michelle’s story is one of unusual pluck and determination. She is the first BSC student ever chosen to participate in the highly competitive JET (Japan Exchange and Teaching) program — of every 10 applicants each year, only one is selected.

And in the process of spending a year in Japan, and then finding employment with the Japanese government, Michelle was reestablishing a link between her alma mater and Japan that dates back more than a century, to a time when a young man from that nation attended the college (graduating in the class of 1872) and returned to his homeland to found the country’s first public education system.

It was the visit to the Career Planning and Placement Office that would change Michelle’s life.

“It was in the fall of 1991. I was graduating that spring with a degree in English, but wasn’t getting certified to teach and hadn’t decided what I wanted to do,” she recalls.
“So I went to the Career Planning and Placement Office as a lot of harried, nervous seniors did that year. I was looking through the materials when I came across one lone brochure advertising the JET program. I looked through it and read that JET was an exchange and teaching program providing a year’s stay in Japan as an assistant teacher of English at a Japanese high school or junior high school.

“The requirements were that you either had to have a Japanese language background — which I didn’t — or be willing to learn.”

Subsequently, Michelle learned how extremely competitive the program was so she didn’t get her hopes up. But she decided to apply. She was pleasantly surprised to learn a few months later that she had passed the initial review and would be invited to a first-round interview at the Japanese Consulate in Boston.

“Immediately I contacted Naoe Suzuki, a Japanese student at Bridgewater, who was also a senior. I went to her and explained that I was applying. I told her I was nervous because I didn’t have a Japanese language background. By then I knew that more than 50 percent of applicants to the JET program did speak Japanese, so I thought my odds were pretty slim,” she remembers.

“Naoe offered to teach me some Japanese phrases and how to behave when I went to the interview in Boston. She was an enormous help,” Michelle says. “She sat down with me and we even got out a tape recorder so I could record her voice and practice by myself.”

The interview in Boston went well, Michelle recalls, but she had no idea when she left the Consulate whether or not she had a chance of being selected.

One day in March, 1992, there was a letter in her mail box in DiNardo Hall.

“I went downstairs to check the mail and when I saw the letter, my hands started to shake,” she says. “I didn’t even want to open it. I ran upstairs where several of my roommates were. The envelope wasn’t a small one — it was a big, thick envelope. My roommates told me that the envelope was too large to be a rejection. I opened it up slowly and then saw the first word, which was ‘Congratulations.’ We began celebrating right there.”

After graduation that May, Michelle had a month to relax and pack and then it was off to Japan.

“There were 1,500 of us from around the world who arrived that weekend in Tokyo for the program, and I was getting nervous about my limited Japanese language skills,” she said. “I was overwhelmed and felt like every person on the plane that I was on could speak Japanese better than I could. I wondered how I would get by.”

She already had her assignment — Chiba, near Tokyo, where Naoe Suzuki’s family lives. (When Michelle was completing her application for the program, Naoe had suggested she ask for Chiba).

Three days of meetings and conferences in Tokyo followed and Michelle started to feel more relaxed. “I was determined to work on my Japanese. Thanks to Naoe, I knew enough to be polite and not to say the wrong thing. I was going to make the most of this experience.”

When her supervisor, Mr. Kobyashi, came to pick her up, she learned that she would be teaching “at a school named Togane Koko, a fairly high level academic high school with an English department of eleven instructors. I would be the first American to teach there.”

But school didn’t begin until a month later, leaving Michelle with plenty of time to explore the surrounding area. “I was driven to my apartment in Chiba which was very nice, very modern,” she says. “When Mr. Kobyashi left, he suggested I go shopping for food, since none was provided. I went to the store but didn’t recognize anything so I bought a box of cereal and some milk. I was free for most of the month.”

The first few days after her arrival in Chiba were lonely, she remembers. “I couldn’t really communicate enough to ask my way around but soon I had memorized phrases such as, ‘where is the post office?’ Gradually, by stopping people on the street, I could get from one point to another. I found the Japanese people to be extremely friendly and anxious to help foreigners.”

Then came a telephone call from another JET participant who happened to be living nearby. “Karina Evans is from Australia, and when she first called me, I asked hopefully, ‘Do you speak any Japanese?’ Well, she didn’t either so the two of us set out together and began exploring the region while learning Japanese. It was great fun.”

Her first day at Togane Koko was a memorable one for Michelle.

“I had been told by my supervisor to prepare a little speech in Japanese for an assembly. With Karina’s help I put together a few remarks. I wasn’t prepared for what actually would occur,” she says.

“I went into the gymnasium where the assembly was to be held, and I stood on the stage at the podium. Then, in filed 950 young people, all looking so well behaved with beautiful, crisp navy uniforms. There were no chairs for them and I wondered where they would sit.

“But they didn’t sit. Standing perfectly straight, they formed neat rows all the way from the stage to the back of the room, and they...
Michelle wears a yukata as she prepares to participate in a Yassa festival shortly after her arrival in Japan. To apply for an opening at the Consulate General of Japan in Boston.

"The Consulate invited all of the JET participants from the area who had returned home to complete an application, so I was one of 50 trying for the position," she says. "I was really thrilled when I was offered the job."

Michelle has been there for two years and speaks enthusiastically about her work. "It's been wonderful to continue my affiliation with Japan and I love what I do here," which includes tracking economic developments and cultural activities throughout New England. "I've made so many good friends at the Consulate and everyone treats each other with great respect."

Michelle has had a longtime relationship with a fellow BSC graduate, Scott McKay, '92, who visited her in Japan while she was teaching there. And her long-range goal is to earn a master’s degree in English as a Second Language.

"Once I have the degree, I may well return to Japan. I have many fond memories and a strong sense of attachment to the Japanese people," she says.

Michelle is well aware that Bridgewater State College and Japan also share an attachment.

"When I first applied to the JET program in the fall of my senior year, I mentioned that an 1872 graduate of the college — Shuje Isawa — is considered the father of public education in Japan. After he returned to his native land from Bridgewater, he established the first public schools there. I'm proud that I could have some part in acknowledging the Bridgewater-Japan connection and grateful that I had some part in renewing that relationship," she says.

BSC - Japan Ties Remain Strong

As Ms. Pardo mentions in the story of her year-long stay in Japan, the college's connections to that country go back more than a century.

That relationship continues today, as there are students from Japan studying at Bridgewater and American students at BSC learning the Japanese language.

Recently the Japanese Foundation Language Center, through its Materials Donation Program, has given the college's foreign language department a complete set of video cassettes for use in the college's elementary and intermediate Japanese language classes, taught by Visiting Lecturer Li-Hua Zhang (above).

Dr. Stanley Hamilton, chairperson of the foreign language department, wrote the grant proposal and will direct the grant. Ms. Bonnie Troupe of the Office of Sponsored Projects coordinated the writing of the proposal.
Memories and Mementos Wanted

For the Year 2000 — A Pictorial History of the College

The year 2000, now about four years away, presents a perfect opportunity for us to reflect on Bridgewater State College's distinguished history.

As the century turns, the college will observe its 160th birthday, and to commemorate these two milestones, an historical book is being planned, a book filled with photographs, memories of alumni, and a narrative detailing the college's many achievements.

This is where your assistance is needed — we are seeking to collect photographs and memorabilia associated with the college (hats, buttons, pins, rings, etc.) which can be featured in the book.

And we are also seeking to collect memories. In future editions of the magazine there will be forms for this purpose, but in the meantime, if you have a special memory please jot it down and send it to us.

Photographs (please identify as much as possible who is in the picture and when and where it was taken), memorabilia, and written recollections can be sent directly to:

The last published history of the college appeared in 1976 in conjunction with the nation's bicentennial. The edition quickly sold out and is now a collector's item.

We anticipate similar demand, but as publication of the book nears, alumni and friends will be given ample time to order their copy of the new book.

You can be part of the book right now.

Search through those old scrapbooks, in closets, and in the attic. When you find a picture or an item of interest, send it along (we will return them if you wish once the project is finished or you can donate the photograph/item to the college archives for permanent protection).

And please be sure to send in your favorite memory of the college from your own student days.

Watch, too, for announcements about the book in future issues of Bridgewater.

The Moakley Center: "A Milestone in This College's Evolution," Says President Tinsley

The John Joseph Moakley Center for Technological Applications at Bridgewater State College opened its doors on schedule on September 1 and ushered in a new era where education and technology will be united to a degree achieved by only a few other American colleges and universities.

"This is one of the happiest and most historic days in the life of this old New England college," said President Adrian Tinsley at a luncheon held on Saturday, September 9, prior to an afternoon ceremony where the ribbon was cut officially opening the new facility.

"Today we arrive at a milestone in this college's evolution. Henceforth, our role as an educational institution will be different than it has been in the past," she said.

State Senate President William Bulger, who had participated in the groundbreaking for the Moakley Center in 1992, and who was the keynote speaker at the September luncheon, which was attended by more than 300 faculty, alumni, students, and special friends of the college, in his remarks said, "I grew up with Joe Moakley in South Boston. Our families lived only a few streets apart from each other. So I've known Joe Moakley virtually all of my life and have always admired his great sense of humanity and his personal and professional commitment to public service.

Therefore, it is a great thrill for me today to be able to come back to Bridgewater and to participate in the opening of an educational technology center here at Bridgewater which will be a permanent recognition of Joe Moakley's dedication to creating opportunities for people to learn, grow and improve their lives.

At approximately 2:30 that afternoon, in the auditorium of the Moakley Center, Mr. Fred Clark, '83, vice chairman of the college's Board of Trustees, who is Congressman Moakley's long-time legal counsel, stepped forward to cut the ribbon.

Joining him and helping to hold the ribbon were Congressman Barney Frank; State Senator Marc Pacheco; Mr. Eugene Durgin, chairman of the Board of Trustees; President Tinsley; and Dr. John Bardo, former provost and academic vice president who is now chancellor at Western Carolina University in North Carolina. Dr. Bardo wrote the original plan for the technology center and had a key role in every phase of its construction.

President Tinsley read aloud a letter of congratulations from the Vice President of the United States, Al Gore, who wrote, "I want to offer my best wishes to all those who have invested in the effort to enhance technological training and education in southeastern Massachusetts. In particular, I commend officials at Bridgewater State College and my good friend, Joe Moakley, for their tireless and productive leadership in this area."

Congressman Moakley himself could not be present as he was recuperating in Virginia from his recent liver transplant operation, but he asked his colleague, Congressman Frank, to read the following letter for him:

"I wish I could be with you today, but my doctors have asked me to stay put for a couple of weeks before I resume my schedule.

"However, I want you all to know that I am very proud of this new technology center and deeply honored that it will be called the John Joseph Moakley Center . . .

"Years from now, when some student at Bridgewater State College is writing a thesis on the economic revitalization of southeastern Massachusetts, I am confident this center will be featured prominently."

The luncheon and ribbon-cutting ceremony were the centerpiece events of a week-long series of activities held in conjunction with the opening of the Moakley Center.

Beginning last spring and continuing into the summer, a committee headed by Mrs. Pamela Parsons, assistant to the president, worked to plan events and programs during the week of September 5 through September 13.

A highlight of the week was a keynote address by Dr. James Appleberry, president of the American Association of State Colleges and Universities (AASCU).

Dr. Appleberry’s speech, delivered at a luncheon on Friday, September 8, which had been designated “Higher Education Day,” discussed “The Impact of Technology on the Re-Engineering of Higher Education.”

In his speech, Dr. Appleberry said, “The Moakley Center places this campus on the ‘cutting edge’ of the future before us in the delivery of education. It has the potential for placing this institution and your campus as a model for others.”

Mr. Gene Durgin, chairman, Board of Trustees:

“I learned something in the process of watching the Moakley Center develop from a concept to a building under construction and now to this wonderful facility. I learned something about technology, I learned a lot about education, and I learned a lot about our curriculum. But mostly what I learned about was the enormous amount of talent and dedication of the people we have here who could make this happen.”
Dr. Appleberry spoke of a "tectonic shift" in higher education today, fueled by "the rapid expansion of information in almost every field" and "the increased technological capability for storing, retrieving, and transmitting information."

No institution will remain unchanged, he said, and colleges and universities are dealing with "new learning environments, greater expectations in performance, and the fact that schools are losing their monopoly on information."

In the future, Dr. Appleberry said, "we will see the establishment of the 'virtual university,' with 'just in time' instruction provided on the call of the student-client and responding to his or her needs at that time."

Because of the Moakley Center, he said, Bridgewater State College is well-positioned to take advantage of these shifts. "Just think of what this will mean for the Moakley Center and your potential for leadership."

Dr. Stanley Koplik, chancellor, Higher Education Coordinating Council:

"This building will help launch us in the transformation of the higher education culture to new methods of teaching and learning that have a strong technology base. Personally I find it very exciting to think about the opportunities that will be here not only for Bridgewater students but for the community in southeastern Massachusetts and throughout the state, and soon throughout the world."

Among other significant events of the week:
- Neighbors of the college in the town of Bridgewater were invited to "Community Day" on Sunday, September 10, and hundreds of them were on hand for a barbecue and tours of the Moakley Center;
- A teleconference with special educators in Moscow was one of the events of "K-12 Day" on Monday, September 11, which drew elementary and secondary educators from throughout the region to see the Moakley Center. Tours and demonstrations were held throughout the day for (Continued next page) teachers, principals, and superintendents.

That evening a special lecture was held featuring Ms. Deirdre Downs, director of the Downs Media Center in New Mexico, who spoke on the subject of “Media Literacy”;

- “BSC Student Day” was held on Tuesday, September 12, with a variety of activities for BSC students. Exhibits, lectures and demonstrations were offered throughout the day.

As part of “BSC Student Day,” a workshop called “Journalism in the Electronic Classroom” was sponsored by the U.S. Congressman Barney Frank:

“This excellent facility is an example of the kind of projects government should be doing. If we’re going to go forward economically, it will be achieved in this manner. Some seek to argue that the private sector and the public sector are somehow enemies — if you’re doing more in the public sector you’re doing less in the private sector. But in situations such as this, particularly where we’re dealing with technological advances that enrich people’s lives, the Moakley Center is a great example of how a facility built with public funds will help spur economic development that will also benefit the private sector.”
Mr. Fred Clark, vice chairman of the college's Board of Trustees and long-time legal counsel to Congressman Moakley, cuts the ribbon officially opening the center on Saturday, September 9.

President Tinsley, speaking at the end of the week’s activities, said, “A great many people devoted months of intense planning and preparation to make sure that the opening of the Moakley Center was observed properly and I’m grateful to all of them. Now we begin in earnest the important work we have all anticipated this facility is capable of. To Congressman Moakley goes our most enthusiastic gratitude for having faith in us and supporting the building of the center at Bridgewater. We intend to see the building lives up to its full potential.”
Mr. Fred Clark, '83, vice chairman, College Board of Trustees, and legal counsel to Congressman Moakley:

"Over the past few months Joe Moakley has had a lot of time to reflect on his life. He appreciates the fact that he’s been able to devote his life to improving higher education, to creating better jobs for people, and to providing better health care for every member of our society. Joe appreciates what these mean because he is the son of a working class family who rose from serving as a Navy Seabee and sheet-metal worker to state employee, lawyer, to state representative, state senator, city councilor, and to congressman.

"Joe made that climb, but he always remembered where he came from. That’s why it is so appropriate that Bridgewater State College and Joe Moakley be linked forever through this center on this campus. Joe Moakley knows opportunity when he sees it, and he knows that Bridgewater will use this ‘on-ramp to the information highway’ to create opportunities to make people’s lives better."

"Community Day" was held on Sunday, September 10, and hundreds of the college's neighbors from the town of Bridgewater were on hand for a barbecue and tours of the Moakley Center. Here children watch a trick by magician Steve Brenner.

Taunton educators Henri Levesque, Jill Levesque, and Carol Schene explore the World Wide Web during "K-12 Day," which took place on Monday, September 11.
In the 180-seat amphitheater of the Moakley Center, the audience participates in a national teleconference which was held as part of “Economic Development Day” on Wednesday, September 13.

John Hoey, left, '83, who is the State House reporter for the region’s largest daily newspaper, The Enterprise, is the founder and president of the “Southeastern Massachusetts Journalists Association” (SEMJA), an organization of professional journalists which is headquartered on campus. As part of the Moakley Opening Week activities, SEMJA offered journalists from newspapers throughout the region a workshop on how to use the Internet to research news stories. Dr. William Singleton, acting director of academic computing, offered the session. A similar SEMJA workshop was also held last June.

Mary Fuller became a member of the Bridgewater family on September 1 as the new director of the John Joseph Moakley Center for Technological Applications.

Ms. Fuller brings 15 years of experience in the educational technology field to the position. Prior to accepting the director’s job at Bridgewater, she has been, for the past two years, director of the Northeast Texas Educational Partnership at East Texas State University, where she was responsible for distance learning, instructional television services, and the design and implementation of school and university partnerships.

She also has extensive experience in instructional television programming from the LeCroy Center for Telecommunications in Dallas, where she served as the coordinator of instructional television services for 13 years.

“I’m excited about the opportunity to work with the faculty, staff and the community at Bridgewater State College and I’m looking forward to the challenges of developing the full potential of the Moakley Center,” Ms. Fuller said.
Dear Friends,

Last year, more than 4,800 alumni contributed to Bridgewater State College. Total gifts from alumni reached over half a million dollars with the average gift being $124. Altogether, gifts from alumni represented better than 82 percent of total contributions received.

Why are these gifts so important to us, and why does Bridgewater utilize a foundation to focus our fund-raising efforts?

The answer to the first question lies within the total issue of financing higher education in the United States. Recent trends have seen governments at all levels pulling back from their commitments to higher education and a dramatically increasing burden on the individual to borrow the funds required to finance their own education.

As a state college, Bridgewater once received better than 70 percent of its operating budget from the Commonwealth. That figure today is closer to 40 percent. In spite of the fact that we continue to provide a valuable service to this region and to the Commonwealth (we are the largest producer of teachers in Massachusetts today), state support is dwindling. As recently as last spring, Governor Weld proposed cutting the budget of the state colleges and universities another $10 million which we would then have been responsible for raising on our own through contributions.

Private colleges in the United States have a much longer history and tradition of private gift support. Today, the distinction between public and private colleges is shrinking rapidly. Two recent national reports help to make the point.

The graph below is taken from a survey of national trends in higher education in 1994. Note that the percentage of students needing aid at public comprehensive institutions like Bridgewater is strikingly similar to the percentage at independent institutions.

Last month, an article appeared in The New York Times ("Student Loans Show Sharp Rise, Report Says," September 22, 1995) expressing concern about the rising levels of student debt. The report provides estimates of the average size of the student debt in 1992-1993 at $3,076 for graduates of public institutions and $3,798 for graduates of private colleges and universities. Thus, the difference in the size of the per student debt is very small between the two sectors. Increased private support is truly vital to public colleges.

The excellent record of support achieved last year by Bridgewater State College was accomplished with only 15 percent of our alumni participating. With an alumni body of more than 28,000, we can do even better. Every gift, of whatever size, is important to the college. Your contribution represents your vote of confidence in the future of this excellent institution.

In 1983, the Bridgewater State College Foundation was created to conduct fund-raising for the college. The supporting foundation model, used today by practically every public college in the country (there are more than 1,700 such foundations), permits us to guarantee anonymity to our donors who wish it and allows us to assure donors that their funds will be spent as they direct, now and in the future. It permits your gift to impact Bridgewater State just as would a donation to any charitable organization. With a separate board of trustees (more than half of whom are graduates of the college), the foundation serves the college by engaging in fund-raising and endowment management on behalf of the college.

The foundation works closely with the Alumni Association of the college to encourage charitable gift support. Our success to date demonstrates the strength and effectiveness of this model. Last year the foundation raised $628,000 for Bridgewater State College. In the campaign we just kicked off for 1995-1996 (ending June 30, 1996) we hope to extend that record to $800,000. Doing so will require enthusiastic support from all of our alums. Please support your alma mater in 1995-1996. Help us to meet the challenges facing higher education.

Sincerely,

Alumni donors, as well as corporate, staff, parents, and friends, contributed to the college through either the Bridgewater State College Foundation or the Bridgewater Alumni Association under the umbrella of the Annual Fund. Class fund donations, scholarships, donations to the Hall of Black Achievement, and all additional restricted and specific donations are listed in this report as annual gifts to the college for the purpose of acknowledgement.

Gertrude Cronk Laurin of Salem, New Hampshire, writes in with her daughter Elise Laurin that things are well.

1930

Rita (McCarthy) Sullivan passed away on December 3, 1994. Rita, who was the widow of Arthur Sullivan, had a long career in teaching and in the field of guidance. She was a master's degree recipient from Boston University and a member of Delta Kappa Gamma. After her retirement she was active in the Massachusetts Retired Teachers Association and the Bridgewater Alumni Association.

Janice Brennan Sprogell, 41 Linwood Drive, West Hartford, CT 06107

Those who attended the 50th reunion celebration in May enjoyed catching up on each other's current activities. Class president Martin Killory convened a brief meeting after the Saturday luncheon and we decided that rather than waiting for our fund to grow large enough to establish the Jordan Fiore Chair for Social Justice, we would instead use the monies amassed for a future lecture series in Jordan's honor. Our sincere condolences to classmates Barbara Dobbin Egan and Eleanor Murphy McIntyre, both of whom lost their husbands this past year.

Ida George Meikle and her husband, Dave, visit relatives and friends throughout the country touring in their van which tows a trailer and canoe. Since our 50th reunion, they've seen Janice Kimball Anderson in southern California, Florence Bradshaw Reed in New Hampshire and Florida, and Claire Curran Donovan in Arlington, Virginia. Winifred Laughlin remains well-traveled; she visited Israel last year for the second time and Ireland for the fifth. Her most recent adventure was this past June as a passenger on the Royal Majesty which ran aground near Nantucket while returning from Bermuda. Back at home in Taunton, Winnie is a volunteer at Morton Hospital and on the board of a gift shop that helps support Bristol County ComCare.

Three of Eleanor Mullin Sheehan's ten children live in Hawaii, and she enjoyed a recent visit with one daughter and her family who visited Eleanor in Wrentham. Barbara Prince Meade of Palm Desert, California, never runs out of energy! She spent last Christmas at Mammoth Mountain, where she went skiing at an 8,000 foot altitude. In June, she went on a week-long camping trip with her young granddaughter.

Louise B. Forsyth, 75 Monroe Road, Quincy, MA 02169

Wini Taylor Gibson Hodges, Ruth Small Cooke, Nancy Hatch Sampson, and Ruth Nutter Race and their husbands enjoyed a reunion at the Hodges home in Sun City Center, Florida, in March. It was reported that they never stopped talking from arrival to departure. The Sampsons live in Stuart, Florida, and Oneota, New York, the Cooks live in Bradenton, Florida, and Saco, Maine, and the Races live in Bonita Springs, Florida, and Roanoke, Virginia. In photo below, from left, are Ruth Small Cooke, Nancy Hatch Sampson, Wini Taylor Gibson Hodges, and Ruth Nutter Race.

Plans are being made for our 50th class reunion this spring! It is time to renew old acquaintances and reminisce about our Bridgewater days! Watch your mail for more information within the next few months. Thank you to those that sent pictures and biographies for the reunion book. If you have not sent yours in yet, please do so quickly—you can also fax your questionnaire to (508) 697-1722.

A special thank you to those that have given to our campaign for the 50th reunion class gift. If you haven't given yet, we ask that you please consider contributing. We are grateful for any and all gifts received, no matter the size. Please make checks payable to Class of 1946 Fund and send to the Davis Alumni Center, P.O. Box 13, Bridgewater, MA 02324.

There happens to be a very strong connection between two Bridgewater State College professors from seemingly divergent areas of academic disciplines.

Dr. Wayne Phillips, professor of education, and William Kendall, professor of art, have met on common ground.

Dr. Phillips, '62, and his wife Linda, M.Ed., '74, have, over the past five years, developed a serious interest in the area of fine art. As collectors, this passion has led them on an extensive search — traveling both here and abroad to follow the latest developments in the world of contemporary painting.

The Phillips' have culminated their search for the 'cutting edge' not in New York City — as perhaps one would expect — but right here, in the heart of Bridgewater State College.

"Some of the best work I've seen happens to be on this college campus," says Dr. Phillips. "We have many talented people at Bridgewater and Bill Kendall is certainly among them. Linda and I found that Bill Kendall's paintings not only can compete with the best of what we've seen in the world's art centers, but are far up the scale when it comes to abstract expressionism."

"I feel it is important for us at the college to recognize our assets," Dr. Phillips continued. "It is our responsibility to not only support our fellow professors but to help in sharing the many talents that our faculty possess."

Professor Kendall had an exhibit of his paintings on display throughout the month of October in the Wallace L. Anderson Art Gallery.

Professor Kendall has been a member of the art faculty at BSC for the past 25 years. He holds a bachelor's degree from the University of Minnesota and M.S. and M.F.A. degrees from the University of Wisconsin-Madison. •

Alumni Park Dedication Held October 14

A new baseball and softball complex funded by private gifts was officially opened at Bridgewater State College on Saturday, October 14, as part of the college’s annual Homecoming festivities.

"Alumni Park" was constructed with funds raised by the Bridgewater State College Foundation from alumni and friends of the college.

President Adrian Tinsley addressed the several hundred alumni, students, and friends of the college attending the ceremony and said, "This is truly an historic day for Bridgewater because building this complex is the single largest capital outlay project ever completed by a state college in Massachusetts with funds raised by alumni and friends."

Presiding at the ceremony was Mr. Louis Ricciardi of Taunton, a member of the college’s Board of Trustees and the Bridgewater State College Foundation, as well as a graduate of BSC’s class of 1981. He had originally proposed the idea of building the complex and was a leader, along with David Messaline, ’65, chairman of the Bridgewater Foundation, in the three-year campaign to raise $275,000 to fund it.

"As a graduate of the college myself, and as a trustee of the institution, I am very proud that so many individuals and organizations worked to make this campaign a success," Mr. Ricciardi said.

Also speaking was Mr. Messaline, who said, "From the outset, the members of the Foundation embraced this idea and worked diligently to assure we would meet our goal. Because of the excellent response we got for the first ‘Chairmen’s Dinner’ in April, 1994, and the ‘10K Intentional Walk for a Better Bridgewater’ in May of that year — the first two major programs we held to raise money for the project — we had confidence we would meet the objective."

Mr. Ricciardi, turning toward the softball and baseball teams who attended the ceremony, said, "It is the students of the college, particularly the women of the softball team and the men of the baseball team, and all of the students who attend the games here, who will benefit most from having such a first-class facility, and that makes me particularly happy."

Among those who were instrumental in the campaign for Alumni Park — a name which Mr. Ricciardi himself proposed to the Board of Trustees in June of 1994 — both he and Mr. Messaline cited President Tinsley; John Harper, director of athletics at the college; and all the members of the Bridgewater State College Foundation, which is the fund raising organization for the college.

"As we cut the ribbon to open this complex, we celebrate the partnership of college, alumni, students, faculty and staff, and friends who all deserve credit for bringing this project from concept to reality," Mr. Ricciardi said.

Dr. Richard Cost, vice president for institutional advancement at BSC, said the fund raising campaign will continue. "Phase One of the project is now complete and the results are first-class playing fields for our baseball and softball teams," Dr. Cost said. "In the next phase of the campaign, we will be seeking funds to obtain permanent bleachers and other equipment for spectators. Our alumni and friends are committed to completing the facility. The college is fortunate to have such strong support from our graduates."

Alumni Park is located on Plymouth Street adjacent to Swenson Athletic Field. A large, cedarwood sign, engraved "Alumni Park" in gold letters, was designed by Mr. Ricciardi and Dr. Wayne Phillips of the Campus Beautification Committee and paid for by the Bridgewater Alumni Association. •

SSC Wins Smith Cup for Athletic Excellence

Congratulations to BSC's Athletics teams — winners of the prestigious Howard C. Smith Cup for having the best overall athletic program among the Massachusetts State Colleges for 1994-1995. In photo below, Mr. John Harper, director of athletics, and President Tinsley are pictured with the Smith Cup. Bridgewater won the season-long race by a single point. "This is a great accomplishment for Bridgewater State College and our intercollegiate athletics program," said John Harper. "The Smith Cup is always a goal we as a department strive for every year because it's a good barometer to judge an athletics program not just in one or two sports but across the board. Bridgewater State has been runnerup many years in this competition so it's a good feeling to be the best in 1994-95."

Thomas Sparkes, class of 1941, earned a total of 10 letters at BSC, including four each in baseball and basketball and two each in soccer. He was also president of the Men's Athletic Association. Now a retired teacher, Tom lives in Florida and in Chatham on Cape Cod.

JoAnn Runge, class of 1988, was a star of the women's basketball team and helped the Lady Bears reach the NCAAs for three seasons. JoAnn holds the school record in assists (615), steals (326) and is fourth on the scoring list (1,023 points). As a first-year player JoAnn was ECAC Rookie of the Year and was also selected for the All-ECAC Team for three seasons. She is now pursuing a career as a professional golfer in Florida.
Marie C. Murphy, '86, appointed director of public affairs

Marie C. Murphy, '86, has been appointed director of public affairs at Bridgewater State College. Mrs. Murphy, who had been assistant director of public affairs since 1989, and acting director for the 1994-1995 academic year, was chosen after an extensive national search.

She officially assumed her new duties this past June.

Dr. Richard Cost, vice president for institutional advancement, said of Mrs. Murphy’s selection, “Both President Tinsley and I are delighted with this appointment. Mrs. Murphy is a talented and dedicated professional with proven ability to work effectively with our many external constituencies, including media, and the campus community as a whole. As we strive to make the strengths of the college more visible regionally and nationally, we need a person of her experience and skill in that critical position.”

A veteran of 23 years in the college’s public affairs office, Mrs. Murphy majored in history at Bridgewater.

Her husband, John, M.Ed. '88, is a psychologist who received his doctorate from the Massachusetts School of Professional Psychology.

From 1979 to 1993, he was president, then chief executive officer and chairman of Shaw’s Supermarkets, Inc., prior to becoming a director of J. Sainsbury International.

Before coming to Shaw’s Supermarkets, he was president of the George O. Jenkins Company. He is a veteran of the U.S. Navy and a graduate of Wesleyan University and Harvard Business School.

He has been listed in “Who’s Who in Religion” since the first edition.
Campus Beautification is a Top Priority

Sample of flowers planted around campus as part of beautification

One of Bridgewater's great attributes has always been the beauty of its campus, and over the past eighteen months significant work has been done and continues to go forward to maintain and enhance the college's physical appearance.

Much of that effort emanates from the "Campus Beautification Committee," which was established by President Tinsley two years ago to help develop plans to preserve the attractiveness of the grounds while adapting where necessary for the college's growth.

To date, among the significant projects already undertaken include: design and installation of 50 new signs for each campus building (the signs are made of redwood with letters sandblasted in gold); more than 20 new benches, made of hardwood and cast iron frames, have been placed along campus walkways (thanks to the generous donation of the Student Government Association); and new concrete walkways have been built to facilitate pedestrian traffic in strategic locations.

In addition, newly landscaped areas have been created and flower beds and shrubs have been planted all over the campus.

"After students graduate from the college, they remember how beautiful our campus is," says Dr. Wayne Phillips, '62, chair of the committee.

"Prospective students and their families also remark on how impressive the campus looks. Our aim is to help the college make sure that present and future generations feel the same sense of pride in the college's appearance."

The committee next plans to turn its attention to the area surrounding the Moakley Center and is also involved in reviving the campus pond, which once was a campus landmark near where today the Adrian Rondileau Campus Center stands.

Committee members besides Dr. Phillips include Dr. Dana Mohler-Faria, vice president for administration and finance; Dr. Lynn Willett, vice president for student affairs; Dr. William Smith, professor of English; Professor William Kendall, department of art; Ms. Mary Tieman, director of alumni relations; and Mr. Keith MacDonald, grounds manager.

New campus benches are well-used
Dear Alumni and Friends,

I would like to thank each of you who contributed to our Annual Fund for 1994-1995, which was the most successful ever.

I am looking forward to your assistance again this year as we launch the 1995-1996 campaign. Your generous support to the Bridgewater State College Annual Fund will allow the Foundation to assist the college in a wide range of important activities, including scholarship aid to deserving students and support for the teaching and learning resources so vital to sustaining the college’s educational mission.

All who are affiliated with Bridgewater can be proud of the dramatic accomplishments which have occurred here, particularly in the last several years. The construction of the Moakley Center, the completion of phase one of Alumni Park (the baseball/softball field project) and the continued strengthening of academics across the curriculum are among the many achievements we have witnessed.

Even more than in the past, the college depends on us to be its “margin for excellence.” In this, my third year as Chairman of the Annual Fund, I ask you to join me in taking responsibility for helping to shape Bridgewater’s future by your contribution to the Annual Fund.

Sincerely,

Charles Stockbridge, ’76
Annual Fund Chairman

Cart Grants Enhance Faculty Research Opportunities

The Center for the Advancement of Research and Teaching (CART) at BSC — established in 1992 — has become a major resource in support of faculty development.

According to a report prepared by CART's coordinators (Dr. Barbara Bautz, elementary education; Dr. Uma Shama, mathematics and computer science; and Dr. William Smith, English), in the 1994-1995 academic year a total of $26,400 was distributed in the form of grants to college faculty.

The purpose of CART is "to enhance the teaching, research, and scholarly activities of Bridgewater State College faculty, librarians and administrators through the availability of peer group and institutional support."

Faculty and others are invited to submit proposals to CART for travel grants, small grants and summer grants. This past fiscal year, a total of 86 applications for these various programs were received and 75 were funded.

In addition, CART sponsored 11 "brown bag seminars" to discuss academic issues, and the center has a host of resources available — including computers and research materials in many disciplines — for use in its offices, which this fall moved to the new John Joseph Moakley Center for Technological Applications.

"I am extremely proud of the work CART does to support scholarship at Bridgewater," says President Adrian Tinsley. "I commend all who are involved with helping CART make such a great resource for our campus."

Piano Institute Held at BSC

Professor Henry Santos of the Department of Music held a three-week Piano Institute for junior and senior high school students at Bridgewater State College this past July.

The Institute was designed for students to study piano and to become better acquainted with the written tradition of African-American composers. Bridgewater alumnae Gloria Stanton, '74, and Jeanne Foster, '90 and '94, were very helpful in informing the black community in Brockton of the program, says Professor Santos.

Twenty-five students from Brockton, Bridgewater, and Norwell participated in the program.

An Interview With
Anthony L. Sarno Jr., ’64,
Superintendent of Schools in Stoughton, Massachusetts

by David Wilson, ’71

Mr. Anthony Sarno is in his first full year as superintendent of schools in Stoughton, Massachusetts, a system with more than 4,000 students, 300-plus teachers, and six elementary schools, a middle school and high school.

Stoughton is a community and school system Mr. Sarno knows well: his entire career has been spent in the Stoughton schools, now 30 years and counting. As a Bridgewater State College undergraduate, he even did his student teaching in Stoughton. Both he and his wife, Nancy, are members of the BSC class of 1964.

In the following interview he talks about his long affiliation with Stoughton and his own professional development in the system:

Q. You’ve spent 30 years working in the Stoughton Public Schools. What are the advantages of spending one’s career in the same school system?
A. “It has been rewarding for me to advance professionally in the same school system because I’ve had the chance to meet and get to know so many different people in the schools and in the town. In addition, as a result of the years I’ve spent here, I think I’ve developed a good sense of the town’s expectations and the strengths and weaknesses of the school system. I feel very much at home here.”

Q. What kind of career path did you follow that led to the superintendency?
A. “I was hired as a science teacher right out of college and spent the next sixteen years as a classroom teacher, a job I loved very much. For the last two of those years I served as an administrative intern at the high school, working with the principal and two assistant principals and with the guidance staff. It was a very valuable learning experience for me and encouraged me to think more seriously about a career in school administration.

“Subsequently, I was appointed assistant principal at the high school. That role involved many disciplinary responsibilities, so it had more negative connotations than I prefer. Still, the satisfaction I experienced from holding that position was when a student whom I had disciplined would return later to say, ‘Thank you ... I didn’t realize it at the time but I learned from the experience.’ I tried to give everyone a fair hearing.

“In 1982 I was appointed principal of Stoughton High School and remained in that position until the fall of 1994, when I became acting superintendent of schools. In April, 1995, I was appointed superintendent.”

Q. Looking back, was it difficult to leave the classroom for an administrative position?
A. “I thoroughly enjoyed teaching and the daily interaction I had with students. The administrative internship I had convinced me I would like that aspect as well. Whenever possible, I have combined the two. During the years I was assistant principal and principal I taught two or three times a year just to keep in touch with the classroom. Ultimately I would like to see if I can teach while I’m superintendent because I think there is great value in keeping grounded to the reason we’re there in the first place.”
Q. Have you ever thought seriously about leaving the Stoughton public schools?
A. “I looked in earnest a few years ago when I applied for a job as a high school principal in New Hampshire. A native of the state was selected instead so I remained here and I’m happy that things have turned out for me as they did.”

Q. How has the town of Stoughton changed during your years there? And what impact has that had on the schools?
A. “The town’s strength has always been its diversity. People here seem to get along living side by side. Stoughton is still a middle-class town where education is valued. The economy has changed and many more families have both parents working. Here, as elsewhere, there has been an increase in single parent families but this in itself doesn’t hurt the child. On the contrary, in many cases single parents make more of a determined effort to spend time with their children.

“The students themselves have changed — in the ‘60s and ‘70s the kids who got into trouble usually got into mischief, as opposed to serious trouble. Today those young people need more direction in their lives, more counseling and support from all of us and from their parents.”

Q. Among all of your responsibilities as superintendent, which do you regard as the most challenging?
A. “Hiring people. Often there are five or more good candidates applying for one position and you know of course that only one person will get it. The task is particularly difficult when you know some of the candidates personally. If someone you know isn’t chosen for the job, that person may not always understand.”

Q. What are some of the major goals you’ve set for the schools in the years ahead?
A. “I have year-by-year plans for what I want to accomplish, plans that have been developed in full consultation with my school principals. Last year, for example, we focused on reading. This year it will be technology. Next year, mathematics.

“Technology is an ongoing issue. I’m proud that so much has been invested in this area in Stoughton. Walk through the high school and you’ll see a variety of computer labs and resources. We want to give our students maximum exposure and experience working with technology.”

Q. When school superintendents get together, what do they talk about?
A. “Budgets, money, night meetings, and sometimes school committees. If you’re fortunate enough to have a school committee that works with you, as mine does, that’s great. But if the school committee works against the superintendent, then it’s all over.”

Q. Down the road, do you see enough professional challenges in your job to keep you interested?
A. “There is enough challenge in a superintendent’s job to last two lifetimes! It’s a delicate balancing act because the interests of so many people are involved. On any given day I am working closely on serious issues with students, teachers, other school administrators, school committee members and officials from other town agencies. I’m usually here by 7:15 AM and stay many nights until 9:00 PM. That’s what the job demands. I am thrilled, however, that I have this opportunity, especially in a community like Stoughton which is so supportive of education.”

Q. If you had the opportunity to start all over again, would you start again in Stoughton?
A. “Absolutely. To work in this community for so long has been one of the great experiences of my life. I feel very fortunate to have spent my entire career in Stoughton. The people here have treated me very well.”

Mrs. Martha Drinkwater Jones, '64, new president of the Bridgewater State College Alumni Association

Mrs. Martha Drinkwater Jones, '64, is the new president of the Bridgewater State College Alumni Association; this is the second time she has been called upon to serve in that position. She was elected by the association in May and she succeeds Dr. Mary Lydon, '55 as alumni president.

Martha, who is associate dean of students at the college, served a two-year term as alumni president from 1981 to 1983.

Her active involvement in the alumni association as an officer of the organization extends back uninterrupted nearly thirty years, and she has had a key role in planning and implementing a number of major alumni initiatives during that time.

For example, she was an original member of the committee which conducted the association's first Phonathon in 1980 to solicit funds from alumni.

She also was the person most responsible for encouraging the college and the association to establish an annual award to honor outstanding teaching at Bridgewater. The "Dr. V. James DiNardo Award for Excellence in Teaching," presented annually since 1984, is now one of the most prestigious recognition awards the college bestows.

In addition, Martha has long chaired the scholarship committee of the association, which reviews applications for dozens of alumni scholarships and each year awards thousands of dollars in scholarships to deserving Bridgewater students.

Dr. Richard Cost, vice president for institutional advancement, said of Martha's election as alumni president, "Few alumni in the history of the college have served the institution in so many capacities and so well as has Martha Jones. Mary Tieman, alumni director, and I look forward very much to working closely with Martha and the other alumni officers as we continue to build even stronger relationships with Bridgewater's graduates."

Martha's husband, Jack, is a member of the class of 1962 and is an assistant professor of elementary and early childhood education at the college.

"I am very pleased to serve again as alumni president because this is a particularly exciting time in the life of the college," she said. "Projects such as 'Alumni Park' are achieving fruition and there are so many more opportunities for alumni to become involved in college activities.

"I especially hope to encourage more classes to become involved in planning reunions. My own class has been very active, holding reunions on a regular basis, and those help us maintain contact with the college. Among my goals will be to work closely with Alumni Director Mary Tieman on class reunion projects."

Ron majored in elementary education at BSC and worked in that department’s office while a student. After graduating, Ron began work in the college’s Office of Student Records and Registration, where he stayed for the next 14 1/2 years. He was referred to as the “person with all of the answers” because of his memory skills, and his knowledge will be missed by the campus community.

According to a tribute written by his co-workers, “Ron was a good friend not only to us but to students and faculty alike. It was important to him that students be treated with respect and understanding. Having been a student himself, he had a great deal of compassion for them. “Graduation was a special day of the year. He would say that was the day when all the hard work and aggravation paid off for both the students and himself. There were many years when Ron would work late into the night on the evening prior to commencement, tracking down evidence of the completion of degree requirements to make it possible for a student to graduate and have everything go smoothly. Ron sought perfection in his work.

“Ron has left an everlasting impression of kindness and goodness on everyone he knew and every person he helped. We miss him dearly.”
