BRIDGEWATER PERFORMING ARTS FESTIVAL 1996-1997

The Boys Choir of Harlem
Saturday, December 14, 1996 • 8:00 PM

Founded in 1968 in the basement of the Ephesus Church, The Boys Choir of Harlem has become an international phenomenon. Billboard Magazine says the "classically rich...voices take Flight on a contemporary slice of pop/hip-hop." New York Newsday says they have "become one of the definitive cultural landmarks in a city top-loaded with them." The Boys Choir of Harlem has appeared on 60 Minutes, CNN, The David Letterman Show, and on the sound tracks of Spike Lee's "Jungle Fever", "Malcolm-X", and the Grammy-winning "Glory." For a night of inspiration and angelic uplifting, don't miss the "best known boys choir in the country.

Neil Sedaka
Saturday, March 22, 1997 • 8:00 PM

Few musicians have attained the commercial success awarded to Neil Sedaka. Pop hits like "Oh Carol, Calendar Girl, and Love Will Keep Us Together" have sold millions of records and have earned him an international reputation as a singer-songwriter and pop-pioneer. Now Neil returns to his classical piano roots, combining the melodies of Chopin, Rachmaninoff, and Tchaikovsky with his own originally-composed lyrics. The recently released orchestral CD "Classical!" Sedaka has embraced overwhelming support. For an evening of musical history in the making, do not miss the artist as he appears at Bridgewater State College.

LaBohème
Wednesday, February 5, 1997 • 8:00 PM

Puccini’s LaBohème is the heart-wrenching tragedy of two artist couples living in the poverty of nineteenth-century Paris. Noirish and passionate, LaBohème has been a perennial favorite since it opened in 1896.

The critically acclaimed New York City Opera National Company incorporates a unique and beginner-audience-friendly novelty: Supertitles. The projection appears above the performance interpreting opera into English. The Ann Arbor News calls it "exciting theater", and the Bangor Daily News says the audience expressed "loud approval of all that transpired on stage."

Recently I shared with the campus community some thoughts about the report from the U.S. Department of Education which noted that the 51.7 million children attending grades K-12 this fall in America broke a record set by Post-World War II "baby boomers" in 1971. The report went on to predict that by the year 2006, the number will rise to 54.6 million.

In Massachusetts, high school enrollment is expected to increase by more than 20 percent in the next decade as the result of the increase in births that began in 1990, and here in southeastern Massachusetts, among communities that traditionally send large numbers of students to Bridgewater State College, many school systems are projecting increases even higher than that.

For example: there are 117% more students in kindergarten in Brockton than there are in the 12th grade; 111% more kindergartners than 12th graders in Taunton; and 62% more kindergartners than high school seniors in New Bedford.

In fact, in a survey published by The Boston Globe on September 1, among 42 cities and towns which are most directly serviced by the college, more than half are expecting double-digit increases in student population within the next decade.

For Bridgewater, the implications are obvious. Education Secretary Richard Riley, quoted in The Washington Post, said, "This trend will ultimately put added pressure on public higher education systems to accommodate a rising demand for a college education. Access to higher education has been part of our national purpose for well over 50 years, and we cannot close this door of opportunity."

James Appleberry, president of the American Association of State Colleges and Universities, believes that "greater demand for education" is an "inevitable result of the population growth" and said "these projections will challenge our colleges and universities to ensure that all students can be accommodated."

Besides the growth in school-age population, today larger-than-ever percentages of high school graduates are continuing their educations in college. As recently as ten years ago, less than 50 percent of those who graduated from high school went on to college, while today the national average is above 62 percent. This is to be expected in a society where, according to the U.S. Department of Education, 89 percent of the jobs being created in this decade require some form of post-secondary education. Young people and their parents are well aware of the estimate by economists that workers gain between 4 to 6 percent in income for every year of college that they complete.

I share this information with you because, as alumni and friends of the college (many of you parents of college-bound children yourself), your support is needed in the continuing effort to maintain a strong public higher education system in the Commonwealth.

In every contact I have with members of the Legislature and with other public officials, I make the point that public colleges such as Bridgewater are where a large proportion of Massachusetts high school graduates go to earn their degrees.

Equally important, the majority of these students will remain here as a skilled, educated work force contributing to the long-term prosperity of the state.

The case for investing in public colleges is particularly compelling in southeastern Massachusetts, which for more than a decade has experienced the greatest population increase of any region in the Commonwealth.

In this region, among high school graduates who go on to college, a larger percentage attend public colleges (7 out of 10 in southeastern Massachusetts vs. 5 out of 10 in the rest of the state).

Clearly, the need in the future to have a Bridgewater State College that offers a high quality college experience at an affordable cost will be more acute than ever before.

Sincerely,

Adrian Tinsley
President
Lou Ricciardi, '81, and Cynthia (Booth) Ricciardi, '81, have each been active in the life of the college in one capacity or another for most of the fifteen years since they graduated from Bridgewater . . .

By David Wilson, '71

In 1986, Lou Ricciardi, '81, became a founding member of the Alumni Association’s Investment Committee and later was elected to serve as the Alumni Trustee on the college’s Board of Trustees. In 1990, he was the first Alumni Trustee to be elected chairman of the eleven-member Board of Trustees and, at age 30 at the time, the youngest person ever elected to that position at Bridgewater. He was reelected chairman three times for a total of four years, the longest anyone has ever served as chairman. In 1994, he led the effort to plan an annual Chairmen’s Dinner to be co-hosted by the chairmen of the Board of Trustees and the Bridgewater Foundation to raise money for major projects (the first Chairmen’s Dinner helped make possible the construction of the Alumni Park baseball and softball complex).

Lou was reelected Alumni Trustee in 1993, and will serve on the Board until 1999. A former treasurer of the Alumni Association and twice chairman of the Annual Fund, Lou is also a longtime member of the Bridgewater Foundation, whose officers elected him chairman in June, succeeding David Messaline, '65. Lou began his new term as chairman of the Foundation on July 1, 1996.

In addition to his service to BSC, Lou is a member of the Board of Trustees of Bristol County Savings Bank, Morton Hospital, and a trustee and treasurer of the Taunton Development Corporation (developer of the acclaimed Myles Standish Industrial Park). He was also president of the Taunton Rotary Club in 1991-1992. He has been selected for Who’s Who in the World, Who’s Who in Finance and Industry, and Who’s Who in the East, 1994-95, 95-96, and 96-97 editions.

Cindy has been teaching part-time as a visiting lecturer in the Department of English at Bridgewater since 1984. She has been an officer of the Alumni Association since 1990, and chair of programming. She currently serves as First Vice President of the Alumni Association and in June, 1997, she will become president of the association, succeeding Martha Drinkwater Jones, '64. Cindy holds a master’s degree from Boston College and at present is completing her Ph.D. in English at Brandeis University.

Their is a special partnership which began when they met as students at Bridgewater. Now, because of their individual achievements, Lou and Cindy have been chosen by their separate constituencies to lead the two largest volunteer organizations at Bridgewater State College. This is a unique situation indeed — one member of a married couple heading the Foundation while the other partner is president-elect of the Alumni Association — and Bridgewater magazine is pleased to present interviews with each of them.

Lou is First Vice President for Investments with the firm of Dean Witter Reynolds and manages the company’s Taunton office. He I've been happy to have student interns - particularly from Bridgewater and Holy Cross - work with me because I know how important it is to young people to have those kinds of contacts. Some of them have actually gone into the business and done extremely well for themselves.

Q. Did you enroll at Bridgewater with the intention of pursuing a career in business?

A. "Yes I did. My interest in business originated when I was in high school at Sacred Heart High School in Kingston. I was a junior or senior there when I got interested in a project that my brother John was doing for his economics class on the stock market. When I had the same course, we hadn't done such a project. I got interested in what he was doing and started asking questions. I was fortunate also in that my father had an interest in the market, so he was one of the people I was able to turn to when I had questions. I had been working since my early teens so I had saved a few dollars on the side, and I began following the financial pages to the point where I thought I might be able to increase my savings a little bit. This was in 1976 and 1977.

"I happened to be on Main Street in Plymouth one day and I noticed that there was a sign for a stock and bond broker, Gage, Wiley and Company. I was sixteen at the time and I walked in and introduced myself to a man named Hap Person. I told him I was interested in getting some information about companies of interest to me — one was Exxon and one was Coca Cola and he took the time to talk to me and explain some of the basic facts of investing. I was fascinated by this and by the time I was a high school senior, I knew this was something I wanted to try.

"I've never forgotten how helpful he was to me, and so over the years I've been happy to have student interns - particularly from Bridgewater and Holy Cross - course work, allowed me to do several directed studies with Professor Stanley Antoniotti focusing on the stock market, which proved very helpful to me.

Q. As an undergraduate, you wrote a financial column for the student newspaper, The Comment, and that was to lead to several professional opportunities, correct?

A. “I had worked for my high school newspaper and when I read in The Comment that new ideas were welcome, I approached the editor and asked if I could write a column about the stock market. Apparently no one had ever done business-related writing for the newspaper but the editor agreed to give it a try. So for three years — my sophomore, junior and senior years at Bridgewater — I wrote a column called ‘Stock Market Sense.’

“I really don’t know how many students read it, but George Maher, a campus policeman did. One day I got a call that the campus police were looking for me, which was a surprise because I wasn’t in any trouble that I was aware of. It was George Maher, who had read the column and passed it along to his stock broker. He arranged a meeting and interview, and through that connection I was offered my first job in the business. When people say to me, ‘You give so much time to Bridgewater,’ I answer that it’s because there are so many people in the Bridgewater equation, like George, who were important and who took an interest in my life. George has since retired from the force and we also remain friends to this day.”

Q. When did you begin writing your column in The Enterprise, the region’s largest daily newspaper? [Editor’s note: his column in that newspaper has been running weekly for the past 14 years]

A. “There was a connection here also to my work as a columnist for The Comment. My first contacts with The Enterprise came for me when I was still in high school and would call in sports scores. As a regular reader, I was familiar with the paper and knew that there was no business page. Occasionally there would be business articles, but no page regularly devoted to business news. After I graduated from Bridgewater I walked into The Enterprise office in Brockton one day and talked with Joe O’Brien, the city editor. I told him I had written a column in college, that I was an area businessman and resident, and asked if he thought such a column was a possibility.

“He said, ‘Well, let’s give it a try. We’ll print it and see if people are interested.’ In March of 1983, the column began appearing every Thursday. It’s now 700 weeks and running. Writing that column has kept my writing ability sharp, and the questions I get from readers require that I keep up with my research skills. Also, I’ve managed to cope with the pressure of meeting a deadline every week, which is good training. I’ve gotten to know some great people through the column and it’s an activity I’m happy I got involved with.”

Q. When you graduated from Bridgewater in 1981, were you concerned about finding a job?

A. “I was fortunate in that I had several offers even before I graduated, but there was no way I was not going to complete my degree. In my junior year at Bridgewater I had made a visit to Fidelity Investments in Boston to see if there was an internship program available. A lady who had worked with me at the Halifax Country Club was working at Fidelity then, and she hired me to work there during the summer between my junior and senior year of college. I worked there days and at the country club on weekends. When today’s students talk about the need to have a job while attending school, I can identify with that. On average I worked 35-40 hours every week while I was a student at Bridgewater.

“When the summer ended I stayed on as Fidelity still needed people, so I arranged my senior year schedule, both semesters, 8:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m., five classes straight. On Tuesday and Thursdays I had no classes so I’d work all day at Fidelity on those days. “It was a fascinating time — ‘80 and ‘81 — because, first, there was hardly anyone my age in it, and, second, the market, which was then around 800, was beginning an exciting growth period, with gas, oil and gold stocks climbing wildly. I never forgot that I was just one of a million people trying to get noticed in the field. In the back of my mind, I was always trying to work a little harder and be more anxious to learn.

“Fidelity offered me a job in March of my senior year, but I told them I couldn’t work full time until I finished my degree. Thanks to George Maher’s connection, I did have the opportunity to interview and receive a job offer from Shearson.”

Q. What do you most recall from your first full-time job?

A. “With the brokerage industry, even though you work for a company, there is no salary. You aren’t provided with names of prospective clients. The company provides back-office support, but you’re responsible for developing a customer base. So I was basically starting a business from scratch. I was fortunate that one of my former employers, who owned the Halifax Country Club, was very supportive of me and believed in me early in my career. That helped give me self-confidence. I built the business by going out and meeting people, offering seminars, and becoming involved in the community. For at least the last dozen years referrals have provided the bulk of my clientele.”

Lou Ricciardi at work in his Taunton office

Q. You decided to open up a Taunton office. Why did you select Taunton?
A. "I'm really a small town person and it means a great deal to me to be able to be active in the community and active in the college. I could have gone in a different direction — Fidelity had wanted me to stay in Boston.

"In fact, many people were surprised that I'd want to work in Taunton. 'Why would you want to be in such a small city?' they'd ask. However, my thought was, 'Well, if nobody's willing to do that, there must be opportunity there too.' What attracted me was the knowledge that I could live in the area, that I wouldn't have to spend half my life on the highway, and I could get involved in the community.

"But separate from that, it's always been a quality of life issue for me, and that became even more true for me once I began my involvement in the college. For me, there's too much to give up to move from this area. Over the years I've been prospected heavily by big companies to go into New York City, Providence, and Boston, and the money was impressive. But I've never been tempted because I really enjoy being in Taunton. It's a wonderful city with great people. Bridgewater is a great college and I'm able to participate to the level I do because I live and work close to it. Those are all too important to me to give up.

"I deal in a big city business but in a small town way. Technology today connects me to all the major markets just as quickly and completely as the fellow sitting on the twenty-second floor of the World Trade Center in New York City.

"Every year that I've been with Dean Witter — nine years now — I've earned membership in the firm's President's Club, which comprises the top 4 percent of the company's most successful producers. Location isn't the issue anymore in my business.

"Let me give you an example of what it means to work in a community like Taunton. When the stock market crashed in 1987, we worked that whole week, probably until ten or eleven o'clock every night, taking calls not only from our own customers but people who were customers of other brokerage firms and mutual funds but who couldn't get through to them because the lines were jammed.

"Our customers were great — they were more concerned about us getting through it because the media was making such a big deal out of it. They were bringing us cheese and crackers and fruit. That was a perfect example of what it's like to do business in a community like Taunton versus a big city. We were concerned for our customers but we were also touched by their concern for us.

"The things that are important to me are here in Taunton and at Bridgewater State College. The college helped frame my perspective on exactly the part I play in my happiness."

Q. Was it difficult in the beginning to convince a big company that Taunton was a good place to open a business?
A. "Going back to the early 1980's when I was in Brockton, I had wanted to have my own office and I wanted to be in Taunton. I had since moved to Thomson-McKinnon Securities. I wrote to my boss and listed twenty reasons why I thought an office in Taunton would work. I agreed to pick up all expenses for the first eighteen months, and the firm accepted my proposal. In July of 1984 I opened the office in Taunton for Thomson-McKinnon Securities.

"I didn't have a computer and I didn't have a staff — I drafted Cindy, to whom I'd been married then for two years, to work with me on a voluntary basis for what was to be a two-month period. Eventually I was able to get her on the payroll and she stayed part-time in the office for more than eight years, balancing her schedule around her teaching assignments at the college, where she was hired as a visiting lecturer in 1984. In addition to the day-to-day help she gave me, Cindy was also a local person who knew the community and was a graduate of Bridgewater herself, so her involvement in the business was crucial to its success.

"I knew from the first month that we had made the right decision to open the office in Taunton. This is a good city, a vibrant city, and at the time Dick Johnson, also a Bridgewater graduate, was its mayor, and he was pro-business and pro-growth. He was bringing the city out of its high unemployment. It was, and still is, an exciting time to be in Taunton."

Lou remained with Thomson-McKinnon until 1987, when he accepted an offer from Dean Witter Reynolds to affiliate with that firm. In turn, the company agreed that Lou would remain in Taunton. He was already involved in many community activities and projects in Taunton.

It was at this time that he also became active in the college. In 1985 Lou and Cynthia established the Michael J. Ricciardi Memorial Scholarship in honor of Lou's father.
and $500 is awarded annually to a sophomore or junior year student majoring in management science, with preference given to students demonstrating particular academic excellence in accounting and finance.

Q. What were the first contacts you had at Bridgewater that led to your subsequent involvement with the college?

A. "The Alumni Association had made a decision to maximize the return on their scholarship investments and they wanted to establish an investment committee. What started out with twenty interested people eventually honed down to five and then to the current four who have done it these last ten years.

"Phil Conroy, '72, then-director of development, knowing that I was in the business, invited me to participate and that was how I got involved. Out of the initial group of five people, David Messaline became chairman of the Foundation and I became chairman of the college's Board of Trustees. Phil Conroy made me aware of the possibilities available to interested alums to become part of the college again. I had no idea of how much time one could spend at one's college after graduation!

"In 1990, when Ralph Fletcher, '53, stepped down as the Alumni Trustee on the Board of Trustees, I was elected to succeed him. Subsequently the members of the Board of Trustees elected me chairman and then reelected me three more times, so I served as chairman for a total of four years — I remind myself to put that in context by recalling that I was a student for only four years.

"It was a dramatic time to be on the Board. The latter years of the 1980's were tumultuous for the college. A new president — Adrian Tinsley — was chosen to lead the institution at the same time I came on the Board of Trustees, so we arrived simultaneously. The board and the college together had a hectic first year, but it was exciting and fun to work with someone who had a totally new vision, as I did.

"Neither of us was politically appointed and we were both inclined to adopt the philosophy that whatever the institution's major needs were, we would try to find a way to meet those needs. Given that state assistance is always going to be in flux, we took the position that if the state isn't interested in building a high-tech center, we'll find another way. And if the state won't build a baseball field, we'll raise the funds to do it ourselves.

"There's been some considerable success with this approach. Thanks to the intervention of two alums, Fred Clark, '83, and David Carreiro, '84, the college got the help of Joe Moakley to build the tech center. Meanwhile, Dave Messaline and I teamed up to go to private donors and raise $260,000 to build the new baseball and softball complex, a first time ever capital project among the state colleges supported by private donations, without even having a general appeal for money."

Q. You have served as a member of the Board of Trustees during a period when the college underwent a number of significant changes. How do you think your role as a trustee has changed?

A. "I think the role of a trustee both at the college and in the Commonwealth is hugely different in 1996 from what it was in 1989.

"Then there were many financial issues that had to be dealt with because the state walked away from what had been for decades a regular, predictable level of support. We were forced to manage the institution more efficiently than ever before and came to rely more on the students, who were going to be asked to assume more of the financial load than ever before. But we all worked together and we got through it.

"What hasn't changed is how a trustee looks at his or her responsibility. One might simply say 'we're just here to approve things' while someone else who understands the responsibilities involved will say 'we're here to work with the administration to build a better institution.'

"In my view, Adrian Tinsley sees the trustees as a consultative body and she wants the give-and-take. She is superb at laying out the possibilities and encouraging a dialogue. What I tried to do as chair was to raise the expectations of the trustees from themselves, and that can only be done by working with an administration which also wants that goal. As an alum, I feel an enormous pressure, in a positive sense, to use the role that's been entrusted to me as one of the eleven people on that board to ask questions, to understand the issues, and to help formulate policies that are in the long-term best interests of the college.

"My last act as chairman, other than proposing the resolution on the naming of Alumni Park, was to go into Boston with President Tinsley and a group of staff and student leaders to talk to the members of the Higher Education Coordinating Council. She asked me to address the Council, and when I did I said, 'I'm a first-generation college graduate and a graduate of this college. I worked to pay my way through college and I stayed in the area. I pay taxes, I'm involved in the community, and this is what state college graduates do.' I'm very proud of Bridgewater and very grateful for the opportunities the college has given me and continues to give me.

"Today Bridgewater is viewed clearly as a leader in the public higher education system, not just in the state college system. Adrian Tinsley deserves much credit for reigniting the 'Bridgewater spirit.' It was a privilege for me as a trustee to be whatever help I could be to her in that process. Truly, I see it as a once-in-a-generation opportunity that I've had to help shape the college's future; from the ballfields to the Technology Center to protecting and expanding our capital resources so that recently we could, among other things, acquire 40 acres of land contiguous to the campus. The college is in wonderful shape for whatever future it seeks to create for itself."

Q. Your work in the Alumni Association, on the Board of Trustees, and now as Chairman of the Foundation puts you in contact with the entire spectrum of the campus community, both internally and externally. Among all these groups, is there any particular one to which you feel most connected?
Cynthia Ricciardi has been a visiting lecturer in the Department of English at SSC since 1984.

A. "To me, the students at Bridgewater are the single most important constituency we have at the college. We — the college — exist for the students, our future alumni. When I was a student at Bridgewater, I sensed strongly that my professors believed this and that's why I had such a quality educational experience. I know that the faculty and staff feel the same way today. In every position that I've been fortunate enough to hold on campus, I've tried to take as many opportunities as I could to meet with students, talk with students, and make them aware of my interest as an alum in their well-being. As I said earlier, there were many people at Bridgewater who had the interest and took the time to help me along. I'd like to do as much for others as was done for me."

Cynthia Ricciardi is the First Vice President of the Alumni Association. She is a native of Raynham, Massachusetts. A graduate of the class of 1981, and a visiting lecturer in the Department of English since 1984, she holds a master's degree from Boston College and is currently completing Ph.D. studies in English at Brandeis University.

Q. How did you happen to choose to attend Bridgewater State College?

A. "I went to Raynham schools and had a lot of Bridgewater teachers, including Patrice (Sanborn) White, '52, who was one of the most important influences on my scholastic career. In addition to being a great English teacher, she lives across the street from my family, and her daughter was my best friend. Overall, I think having contact with people like her made a strong impression on me that Bridgewater was a good place.

"I attended Bridgewater-Raynham Regional High School and graduated in 1977. At the time, I wanted to become a librarian because I had been working in the town library for several years and thought it would be a great job to have. I looked at Simmons College, Keene State in New Hampshire, and three Massachusetts state schools, including Bridgewater.

"It came down to Simmons or Bridgewater. Two factors helped me make my decision: I decided I didn't want to live away from home, and going to Simmons would have meant taking out a second mortgage on my parents' home. Since Bridgewater had a Library Science minor, I was happy with my choice. Then came a pleasant surprise: I'd been on the high school yearbook staff, as copy editor, and at graduation I received a $250 scholarship from the yearbook scholarship fund. That $250 actually covered my first semester's tuition at Bridgewater."

Q. Do you have someone in your life whom you consider a role model?

A. "My mother is my strongest personal role model. She has always encouraged me to do things a little differently, to think for myself, to diversify my interests, and to avoid limiting my options, especially where gender roles were concerned. When she was in high school she won her school letter for softball — her dad had been quite an athlete and played in the Taunton Twilight Baseball league. Consequently, it was my mother who was out in the yard playing baseball with the neighborhood kids in the summer — none of my friends' mothers could even hold a bat properly. But then she would turn around and sew my entire school wardrobe. I think I learned from her example that if we don't limit ourselves, we can pretty much do anything."

Q. At Bridgewater, were you a commuter or resident student?

A. "I commuted. My family had one car during my freshman year. We worked it out so that some days I would drive my father to work, and take the car to school. When I got out of class in the early afternoon, I'd drive back to where he worked, he'd take me home, we'd have a late (sometimes very late) lunch, and he'd go back to work. Other days, I would go with one of my neighbors..."
to where she worked, and I would hitch a ride with the daughter of one of her colleagues. The most important thing was to get to school. And if I stayed until 3:00 or 4:00 o'clock in the afternoon, there was always the library or the music lounge, although the commuter cafe was my favorite place to study. I know from talking to my own students that many of today's commuters can identify with this.

"Because I commuted, I had a strong network of friends at home, so I didn't get really involved with any events at Bridgewater until I met Lou. He's always been a person who knows a lot of people and has a lot of friends. We met in Dr. Harold DeLisle's "Literary Types: Satire" class, in the fall of 1978. Lou was an English major too. We became friends, took more of the same classes, studied together, and a year later we began dating."

Q. Who were the professors at Bridgewater who most influenced you?
A. "Dr. Hal DeLisle, '51, is certainly someone who had a profound influence on me. My style of learning and his style of teaching just seemed to mesh perfectly (at least to me), and the breadth of his knowledge made his classes encompass much more than their titles would suggest. Hal was also very helpful to me in suggesting I consider Boston College for my graduate school.

"I had an interesting experience when I was at Boston College that shows how small a world we live in. It was in my very first class, Anglo-Saxon literature and the instructor was Dr. Charles Regan. He reminded me of Hal in his approach to teaching, in that he drew in all sorts of additional information beyond the literature. One day, in reference to some scenery in a poem, he mentioned having visited Finland and said something about the fjords. "Fresh from my environmental geology courses at Bridgewater with Dr. Boutilier, I mentioned something about the geology of coastlines, and Professor Regan stopped me, and asked, 'Where did you do your undergraduate work?' A little nervously, wondering why he'd asked, I replied, 'Bridgewater State College.' "Oh, now, that's interesting!" he said. 'I happen to be the godfather to the son of a member of the faculty there -- Harold DeLisle.' And I said, 'Well, you could say that he's the reason I'm at Boston College.'"

"Professor Mary Moore Jarvis, '39, is another member of the faculty who meant a lot to me as an undergraduate. She was my advisor until she retired at the end of my sophomore year. She was the first female instructor I encountered who exhibited a 'mentor-type' personality, and she became something of a role model in the sense that she was a kind person who managed to incorporate high academic standards in the classroom without sacrificing her humanity. I admired that in a teacher, and in an advisor. Every time I met with her it was a positive experience.

"Dr. Thomas Curley is another BSC professor who has had a significant influence on my academic career. It was Tom's strong recommendation that made it possible for me to be admitted into the doctoral program at Brandeis University, where I am now studying in his own field of eighteenth-century literature."

Q. You also became — and this was highly unusual for an English major at the time — interested in computer science, correct?
A. "Yes, and I will forever be a fan of the General Education Requirements. Because it was required, I took a course called 'Topics in Math' with Professor Robert Sutherland. In the last segment of the semester, he included a section of computer programming with the BASIC language. Remember, this was nearly eighteen years ago, so by today's standards, our TTY's and punch-cards were relatively primitive. But I loved it.

"So the following year, I took BASIC with him in the fall semester, FORTRAN in the spring, and then two courses in COBOL. In my last year, I enrolled in the PASCAL programming course, which I was told was the 'up-and-coming' computer language. I figured that no matter what happened, I would always have the computer science as a 'back-up' plan for employment. I was also an aide in the computer lab at Bridgewater for both my junior and senior years.

"Just before I graduated, there was an open house at the Foxboro Company, and I went in, just for the experience. I talked with a representative, filled out a job application, and was invited back for a second interview to be a programmer there. I said, 'No thank you.' When I told the story to Bob Sutherland, I knew he expected me to end by saying 'And I have a job at the Foxboro Company.' But the end of the story was, 'I'm going to Boston College to get a master's degree in English.' My parents were pretty surprised, too. But I've never lost my enthusiasm for computers. I'm still a 'tekkie,' at least by Humanities Department standards.

"One summer, after I'd been teaching here for two years, I ran into Rick Fontaine, from Information Services. He was looking for someone to do some testing on a software package purchased for the English Department, and I spent the summer writing a user manual for the Writer's Workbench application."

Q. And now you're pursuing a Ph.D. at Brandeis University. What is your field? What are you writing your dissertation on?
A. "When I started at Brandeis, I wasn't sure whether I was going to specialize in American or British literature, but a member of the faculty there, Dr. Susan Staves, encouraged my work in eighteenth-century fiction. As a result, I've spent the last two years working with her on a project that constitutes the majority of my dissertation: preparing a critical edition of an eighteenth-century novel. The name of the book is The Delicate Distress by Elizabeth Griffith, and it will be published by the University of Kentucky press next spring. The last time it was published was 1787, although the first edition came out in London in 1769. I've been able to use all of the research skills I've ever developed, tracking down unidentified quotations. I've even traveled to North Carolina and Pennsylvania, as well as spending weeks upon weeks at Harvard’s Houghton Library poring over two-hundred-year-old volumes. I’ve been having a great time.’
Alumni Profile

Q. How did you begin teaching at Bridgewater?
A. “When I graduated from Bridgewater, I had no intention of becoming a teacher. I imagined myself in those pursuits that most English majors dream about — publishing, writing, and so forth. Lou and I became engaged the February before we graduated. I had decided on graduate school, and when I approached one of my professors for a recommendation, that person said, ‘Graduate school? I thought you were getting married.’ I naively responded, ‘Well, yes. I’m going to do both.’ It had never occurred to me that the two pursuits could be mutually exclusive, and of course, they weren’t.

“Lou and I were married during my first year at B.C., right here at the Catholic Center, and we moved into an apartment at Waterford Village. It was in graduate school at Boston College that I realized I am what some people call a ‘perpetual student,’ and I belong in the classroom.

“When I graduated from B.C., I was working in the Bridgewater Public Library. I knew that I wanted to teach, and I wrote a letter to Cliff Wood, ’60, then chair of the English Department at Bridgewater, asking if there were any teaching positions open. He called me in January. ‘As a matter of fact,’ he said, ‘I’m looking to hire a visiting lecturer to teach composition.’ I started teaching two weeks later, in January, 1984, and my first course was EN 102. In July I began working with Lou in his newly-established Taunton office, and I subsequently got additional part-time teaching assignments at Newbury College and Bristol Community College.”

Q. How did you get involved with the Alumni Association?
A. “In 1990, Lou had been Alumni Trustee for a year. He came home from an alumni meeting at the college and said that there had been a discussion about recruiting more alumni from the area who might be useful on the board. Someone had proposed my name, and asked Lou if he thought I’d be interested in getting involved. Phil Conroy, ’72, former director of development, called me. I was a little bit hesitant at first, but Phil was most instrumental in helping me feel that I really had something to offer to the Association.

“I became programming chair after I made the typical rookie’s mistake. I was at a meeting where Dr. Mary Lydon, ’55, then-alumni president, was discussing a new standing committee for programming. We were then in the process of examining what today we call the Applied Strategic Plan, and we were looking at possible revisions to the Association’s by-laws. I made one tiny little suggestion about programming for professional development, and the next thing I knew, Mary was on the telephone asking me to chair the committee. That was one of my first official responsibilities with the Association.”

Q. You served as secretary of the Bridgewater Alumni Association for two years before becoming first vice-president and you have been chair of the programming committee since 1991. What are some of the Association’s major achievements in that time frame?
A. “I think that the ‘Learning in Retirement’ program, which began in 1991, is an important accomplishment. Maureen Silvia, former assistant director of alumni relations and I got together to plan a series of seminars that would bring alumni back to the campus to attend lectures and workshops that were educational in nature. We felt that at a college like Bridgewater, where teaching and learning have such a rich history, we ought to be doing something to provide opportunities for our retired graduates to continue learning. We started the first year with three programs and had a great response from alumni.

“So far, more than two dozen workshops have been presented, utilizing the talents of our faculty, students, alumni and representatives of the community. ‘Learning in Retirement’ is not classes per se but wonderful opportunities for people who are interested in learning. The best part is that there’s just no final exam!”

“I also think the concept of holding area meetings, not only in Florida but more locally, is an important step forward. The first was held on Cape Cod last summer and we held one in Newport in September. Mary Tiernan, our director of alumni relations, has done an exceptional job of expanding this idea.”

Q. What do you see as the advantages of having Lou as chairman of the Foundation, and, as of next year, you as president of the Alumni Association?
A. “The alumni association, at the age of 154, is the college’s oldest continuously operating organization, and the foundation is among the youngest at Bridgewater, just slightly more than a decade old.

“But they share the fundamental aim of promoting the college and providing financial support to it. Working closely together over the last several years, the alumni association and the foundation have already developed an impressive track record because there is trust and goodwill on both sides. I count on the fact that Lou and I are not only married to each other but have worked well professionally with each other for so long to make even more progress possible.”

Q. What goal would you most like to accomplish by the end of your tenure as alumni president?
A. “At the end of my term as president, I hope I will have found the magic formula that will encourage all our alumni to come back to Bridgewater to see what’s been going on since they left. Some things never change: students will attend classes and work part-time jobs and watch this year’s cult television show in the Rat — and some things have changed significantly: the campus is growing and the Alumni Association is growing with it. We try to offer a variety of ever-more interesting programs and services so that the time the students spend at BSC is really just the beginning of many more years of enrichment.”
Many people dream of being in business for themselves, and perhaps for most of them that’s what it remains — a dream.

But Jill K. (Fernandes) Rainville, a class of 1991 management science major, wasted little time in getting her own business started, and today Integrated Business Systems, located just across from the Taunton Green is a year old and already is making a profit.

“As far back as I can remember, I wanted to be in business for myself,” she says.

The idea remained with her after graduation from college, but Jill didn’t rush into opening a business right away. She worked in a computer store for two-and-a-half years and eventually became store manager. Later, while she was employed by an insurance company in the Taunton Industrial Park, she decided to make the move.

“It was February, 1995, and my husband and I — he’s an independent contractor — decided it was time.”

An initial challenge was finding a good location for a new business. “I wanted to be in Taunton because it’s so centrally located,” says Jill, a native of Dartmouth, Massachusetts. “Within an hour of Taunton are other major cities like Brockton, Boston, Fall River and New Bedford, and growing suburbs as well. I think the potential here makes a convincing argument for locating here. It turned out to be a good move because there is so much support here for new businesses,” she explains.

“When I started I had no customer base, but I got a lot of help from the city of Taunton’s economic development council, which provided me with leads and customer referrals,” she says.

“I also joined the Chamber of Commerce and that was a big boost. The ‘Heart of Taunton’ project, which aims to boost development in the downtown area, was also an excellent source of assistance. Also, I find that the businesses in this area are very loyal to each other and support each other. So there were many individuals and organizations anxious to help me make my business a success.”

Jill chose to establish a business that would cater to the computer needs of area and regional businesses.

“We do a variety of things but our primary focus is helping service all of a business’s computer needs,” Jill says. “From equipment sales, to networking, to service and repair work to employee training — our goal is to help companies invest wisely in computer purchases and then use their systems as efficiently as possible.”

“We sell based on service,” she continues. “For companies that have existing systems, we provide ongoing support and training, and we can help them upgrade their systems as needed.

“But I also love to go into companies that aren’t computerized at all because it gives me a fresh start. I enjoy sitting down with customers to discuss how computers can make their companies more efficient,” she says. “I like to ask, ‘What do you need? What can computers do for you?’ We talk about workflow and how computers can fit in.”

And Integrated Business Systems is there if trouble occurs. “If our customers have difficulties, we come immediately,” Jill says. “Today computers are everywhere in business, and when they malfunction, the lost productivity can be a very serious issue for any size company. Every person in business understands that it can cost a lot of money to have people sitting around just because the computers are down.”

Training is another important element of Integrated Business Systems and Jill has built a computer classroom in her suite of offices for training purposes.

“Most people are just too busy to open books and read technical manuals, and such manuals are often difficult for the lay person to follow,” she explains.

Keeping up with changes in computer hardware and software is itself nearly a full-time occupation. “You can’t even imagine how much of a challenge it is to do that. It seems I’m reading constantly. The growth of the Internet has only added fuel to the rate of change in this industry.”

Jill obviously enjoys operating her own business, though she admits there are sacrifices to be made.

“It has its pros and its cons,” she says. “Some days you feel, ‘It would be so much easier to work for someone else.’ There are a lot of 80-hour weeks. But 90 percent of the time I love it.”

Terry Hart Cogan, '51, To Chair Annual Fund Campaign
State This Year Will Match Alumni Donations Dollar-for-Dollar

Ms. Terry Hart Cogan, '51, has agreed to chair the 1996-1997 Annual Fund Campaign, succeeding Mr. Charles Stockbridge, '76, who chaired the campaign for the past three years.

That announcement was made by Dr. Richard Cost, vice president for institutional advancement, who said, "We are delighted that Terry Cogan is willing to take on this important task and we're grateful to Charles Stockbridge for the outstanding leadership he provided over the past three years.

"The college depends heavily on donations from private sources to strengthen Bridgewater academically, to provide scholarships to deserving students, and to support a wide range of projects that advance the college's reputation for educational quality and public service," he continued.

"Terry, like Charles, is a proven, experienced and dedicated volunteer. With Terry at the helm, the Annual Fund will continue to have solid direction and guidance.

Mr. Louis Ricciardi, '81, chairman of the Bridgewater Foundation, is equally enthusiastic. "Having worked with Terry on the Foundation, I know the depth of her feeling toward Bridgewater and the strength of her commitment to this position. The chairmanship of the Annual Fund is, as it was under Charles, in very capable hands."

For her part, Ms. Cogan is looking forward to the challenge. "As a trustee of the Bridgewater Foundation, I know how crucial the success of the Annual Fund is to the college.

In recent years, alumni have supported a number of major projects, such as the construction of the new baseball/softball complex and the purchase of land for future college expansion. There is much work yet to be done, and this year there is a significant added incentive in that the state will match dollar-for-dollar alumni gifts up to a total of $440,000."

Under a plan announced last spring, the Commonwealth — in an attempt to encourage private fund raising among the state's public colleges and universities — will match every gift from an alumni/na on a dollar-by-dollar basis, up to $220,000, and $1.00 to $3.00 above that, with a cap of $440,000 per college.

"This represents a major opportunity for us to build the Annual Fund," Ms. Cogan said. "I believe our alumni and friends will respond with even greater generosity, knowing that their gifts will be matched."

Ms. Cogan is herself a longtime benefactor of Bridgewater State College: in 1990, through circumstances in her life, she was able to give Bridgewater its first one million dollar gift from a graduate, a gift that allowed the college to purchase a key plot of land contiguous to the campus.

The MBTA recently purchased part of that land from the Bridgewater Foundation to construct an access road to the commuter parking lot when rail transit begins in a year.

A native of Cape Cod, she took a year off between high school and college and attended Bridgewater with her sister, Peggy.

"My brother was also starting college that fall at the University of Alabama, and so my parents had three of us away from home. I have wonderful memories of my student days at Bridgewater, and having lived there for four years, I developed many long-term friendships."

After graduation Ms. Cogan became a teacher in the Lexington Public Schools and eventually settled there after marrying. She is the mother of four children and grandmother of five.

Long active in civic and community affairs, Ms. Cogan is a past president of the hospital auxiliaries of Boston University Medical Center and Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston. She is currently a member of the Boston Ballet Board of Trustees and a benefactor of major arts organizations on Cape Cod and in Boston.

She has also been involved in the Democratic Party and was invited to attend the inaugurations in Washington, D.C., of Presidents Kennedy, Carter and Clinton. She is a past member of the Lexington Democratic Town Committee and currently serves on the Chatham Democratic Town Committee.

"The Annual Fund Campaign is underway and we're counting on everyone to participate in as large or as small amount as they can contribute," Ms. Cogan says. "Bridgewater is an outstanding public college whose reputation continues to grow. When alumni contribute to the Annual Fund, they help the college acquire the resources and provide the scholarships that today really are the 'margin for excellence.'"

"Ultimately, the college's good reputation enhances even further the value of the Bridgewater degrees alumni have earned, so we all have a vested interest in supporting the college through our donations. Bridgewater is counting on us to help it grow and prosper."

Paul Gaines: The Cornerstone of BSC’s Diversity Plan
by Marie Dennehy ’93

Visitors are greeted with a smile that lights up his whole face, the same smile that for almost three decades welcomed and put at ease the hundreds of minority students stepping onto the BSC campus for the first time. It is the smile of Mr. Paul Gaines, ’68, recently retired Assistant to the President for Affirmative Action and Minority Affairs at Bridgewater State College.

Mr. Gaines first came to BSC as a graduate student in the late 1960s, graduating with a master’s degree in counseling, with plans to return to his native Newport and continue his career as a high school teacher, counselor, and coach.

Bridgewater State College administrators Dr. Henry Fanning, Dr. Lee Harrington, and Dr. Philip Dooley approached him shortly after graduation with an offer of a position on campus. “One of my major assignments was to establish a program of recruitment, support, and retention of minority students,” he recalls. “There were three black students on campus at the time, and the first year we brought in 11 more.” The minority population greatly expanded under his administration. BSC has a minority population of close to 600 for the academic year 1996-97.

An enthusiastic proponent of minority recruitment, Mr. Gaines explains that BSC’s program was the first in the state college system. “Lee Harrington had a great deal of foresight,” he says. “Only a few years later, our types of programs became mandatory, and we were the pilot program for all those that followed.”

He has always been adamant that BSC should not recruit students just to increase the numbers, however. He likes to focus on retention and graduation rates. “In the early days, we were criticized because our numbers were not increasing rapidly,” he explains, “but I never wanted to have revolving door admissions, with high numbers of students but low graduation rates, and the administration supported me.”

This is why he developed retention programs, to assist these students with their academics. He is delighted to report that BSC minority graduation rates are high.

The list of programs that he developed or helped to develop as part of the support and retention phase of his work is impressive: PROGRESS/Outreach, to recruit and retain minority students; the AFRO-AM Club, an organization of African-American students; the African-American Alumni Association; the Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Annual Memorial Breakfast; the Hall of Black Achievement; the Rose Scholarship, to recognize scholastic excellence; the Robert Daniel African-American Scholarship program; the Latino Club, an organization of Hispanic students; the Robert Daniel African-American Scholarship program; the Latino Club, an organization of Hispanic students; the Robert Daniel African-American Scholarship program.

Bridgewater State College’s official world wide web site debuted to the public in July
by Leah Pabst ’94

In her book, HTML for the World Wide Web, Elizabeth Castro called the web the Gutenberg press of our time. The press opened a world of new ideas to masses of people who previously had no access to the limited handwritten books that were available.

The implications for the world wide web are very similar. The web has altered the way we obtain information and has placed a virtually instantaneous and limitless source of it right at our fingertips with only a quick click of the mouse.

This summer, Bridgewater State College joined this information mecca with its official site, www.bridgew.edu. The site, constructed and edited by the web management team, debuted to the public on July 12, 1996.

Under the direction of the president and vice presidents, the web management team, whose members include Tammy Anderson of information services, Marie Murphy of public affairs, and Ratna Chandrasekhar of library services, has been preparing the site since early April. According to Ms. Anderson, additional members of the information services staff were also instrumental in converting information to HTML, or hypertext markup language, the computer language used to create web pages.

The site, the purpose of which is to provide both external and internal visitors with a convenient source of accurate and timely information about the college, features a variety of pages about different programs and services at Bridgewater. It is an ideal tool for alumni to keep abreast of events at the college as well as for faculty, staff, and current students to obtain up-to-date information.

Consisting of fifteen members representing faculty, staff, and students, the web advisory group assists the web management team in providing feedback about the site and recommending strategies for its effectiveness. Additions being considered for the site include course offerings and program descriptions and requirements to generate interest among prospective students.

Web team members hope that visitors to the web page will provide them with suggestions so they may continuously improve the site. E-mail webteam@bridgew.edu with your suggestions.
the Leadership, Education, and Academic Development Program; and the BSC Racial and Cultural Diversity Plan.

Development of these programs came a steady pace. When he discovered a need, he helped establish a program to fill the gap. "The development of these programs exhibits the BSC commitment to provide support and to help students develop a feeling of belonging," he says.

A caring and competent administrator, Mr. Gaines spent much of his career assisting the diverse populations located in cities and towns within commuting distance of the college. His advice and assistance were sought during times of difficulty with issues of economic and social disenfranchisement.

"Education is the only way out of the cycle of poverty, and BSC is in a wonderful position to help break that cycle for many undergraduate students," he says. "Some of these students could never afford to go away to college, but it is possible for them to get a degree if they live at home and commute."

There have been many changes on the BSC campus during his 28 year career, and he believes that the minority students enrolling now are seeing a different college than that of the late '60s, '70s, and '80s. "These students are standing on the shoulders of those kids who came early on," he says. "Is it perfect now? No, of course not, but there is a lot more support available for these students than for those early ones."

As he remembers the climate on campus at that time, he is still impressed with those earlier students. "They were strong willed and determined, and together we forged a lot of new ground and laid the groundwork for the present populations."

A father of four children, all of whom attended BSC, Mr. Gaines is also an active participant in his community. He was the first black city councilman, then the first black mayor. He has served as a commissioner of the Rhode Island Ethics Commission and was a delegate to the Rhode Island Constitutional Convention. With typical modesty, he refuses to accept accolades for his work. He prefers to defer credit for his achievements to others at BSC and in Newport. "When you have good people surrounding you, that makes you look good," he says.

"Then, whatever falls in place, falls in place."

During his long and successful career serving the needs of others, he has touched and changed the lives of many students. After serving as mentor and friend to hundreds of these students, Mr. Gaines can look back with great satisfaction at what he has accomplished, particularly at Commencement time. "It's very gratifying to see the students cross that stage, because I know that I've been a part of it," he says. "And it's especially wonderful when you know that there are those that might not have made it if there hadn't been some personal attention given them. That's when you say, 'son of a gun, it's all worth it.'"
BSC Receives Fulbright Grant for Fall
Dr. Leatitia Wirht-Beek of Suriname to be Fulbright Scholar-in-Residence at Bridgewater for entire fall semester

by Leah Pabst '94

The prestigious Fulbright Scholar Program has selected Bridgewater State College as the recipient of a Scholar-in-Residence grant for the fall semester of 1996. The goal of the program, 50 years in existence, is to bring scholars from abroad to American universities and colleges in order to enhance the contact of students and faculty with peoples of other cultures.

Bridgewater students, faculty, and staff will have the opportunity to benefit from the vast wealth of knowledge that Dr. Leatitia Wirht-Beek, a prominent scholar from the University of Suriname in South America, will bring to the college as part of the Fulbright-Scholar-in-Residence Program. During her semester-long stay, Dr. Wirht-Beek will co-teach two courses in sociology, lecture for the Women's Studies program, take part in a faculty forum, give two presentations for the Center for the Advancement of Research and Teaching, and lead an intensive workshop for selected area teachers, among many other activities both at the campus and community levels.

According to Dr. Vernon Domingo, who was a Fulbright Senior Scholar two years ago at the University at Suriname and the coordinator of the grant-writing team that secured Bridgewater's current Fulbright Grant, "Bridgewater's objective in this Fulbright program was to have a visiting scholar who had both an internationally-oriented research focus, as well as a concern with curriculum development and teaching strategies. Dr. Wirht-Beek fit the defined objectives exceptionally well. She is an inspired teacher and researcher and someone who could serve as an on-campus catalyst for developing greater global perspectives in all of our academic endeavors."

Dr. Wirht-Beek is currently a professor of social sciences at the University of Suriname. She is also the coordinator of the Department of Sociology, a member of the faculty board, and a researcher at the Institute for Social Science Research, where she also serves as the coordinator for the Women and Development Research Group.

Dr. Ann Lydecker Appointed as Provost and Vice President

After an extensive search process that began last December, Bridgewater State College has chosen its newest provost and vice president for Academic Affairs, a position previously held by Dr. John Bardo, who last year accepted the position of chancellor of Western Carolina University in North Carolina.

Dr. Ann Lydecker, who has served for the past year as acting vice president for academic affairs, was selected from a nationwide pool of candidates who all went through a rigorous screening process for this prestigious position.

After numerous interviews, extensive reference checks and evaluations, Dr. Lydecker was chosen as the best candidate for the position.

Prior to her appointment as acting vice president for academic affairs, Dr. Lydecker served as dean of BSC's School of Education and Allied Studies for three successful years.

Before coming to Bridgewater, Dr. Lydecker served for five years as chairperson of the Curriculum and Instruction Department at Mankato State University in Mankato, Minnesota. She also achieved tenure there as a full professor.

Dr. Lydecker earned a bachelor's degree and master's degree from Oberlin College in Ohio and a Ph.D. from the University of Michigan.

Said President Adrian Tinsley, "Dr. Lydecker has established a reputation for attention to process, attention to detail, fairness, honesty, integrity, and demonstrated ability to focus on academic issues and provide strong academic leadership. I believe we are fortunate to have a person of Dr. Lydecker's credentials, experience, and personal qualities on our campus at this time."
BSC at the 1996 Olympics
by Marie Dennehy '93

The Bridgewater State College Athletic Training Program was well represented during the 1996 Olympic games held in Atlanta this past summer. Two faculty members, Professor Cheryl Hitchings, instructor of athletic training in the Department of Movement Arts, Health Promotion, and Leisure Studies, and Head Athletic Trainer Jeanna Polonchek assisted in the medical care of the Olympic athletes.

Professor Hitchings was assigned to work at Stone Mountain, a national park that carried three Olympic events, tennis, archery and velodrome cycling. She was responsible for the cyclists and the archers, working twelve hour days for more than three weeks. Ms. Polonchek worked at Wolf Creek with the athletes participating in the shooting and beach volleyball events.

Both athletic trainers were able to attend some of the Olympic events, such as baseball, women's basketball, water polo, diving, field hockey, softball, table tennis, and Greco-Roman wrestling.

Also on the Olympic medical team were BSC alumni Mr. Craig Andrade, '93, who worked with the boxing teams, and Ms. Cheryl Thompson, '94, who assisted with the track teams. Ms. Kady Plante, '93, was an events service specialist at the Omni Coliseum where volleyball took place.

BSC Senior Selected to Study at NASA Space Center
by Jennifer Brown '95

Bridgewater’s Mark Johnson, a senior Geology and Chemistry major, was selected by the Lunar Planetary Institute (LPI) at the Johnson Space Center to serve as a research assistant for the summer of 1996.

The LPI is a research laboratory located at the NASA Johnson Space Center in Houston, Texas, and during Mr. Johnson’s 10-week involvement with the program he worked with Drs. Carl Allen and David McCabe on their lunar projects. Part of the research involved analyzing lunar volcanic glass and then using remote sensing principles to map the distribution of various lunar soils and rocks.

Mr. Johnson’s selection by the LPI was based on the outstanding work he has done as a research assistant for Dr. Richard Enright of the Earth Sciences and Geography department on the NASA/JOVE program as well as his other academic achievements. His most recent work involved doing research on the Remote Sensing Study of the volcano Nevado Toluca located to the west of Mexico City.

During spring break, Mr. Johnson traveled to Mexico City with Dr. Enright to field check the results of his preliminary work, and he presented the results at the National Conference of Undergraduate Research in Asheville, North Carolina last April.

SPECIAL GIFTS AND NEW ENDOWMENTS

Endowed funds provide colleges and universities with financial strength and stability to face uncertain future appropriations and needs. They promote our ability to maintain high academic standards in spite of difficult financial times. Through special gifts and bequests, many individuals memorialize loved ones while at the same time contributing to the future health and well being of Bridgewater State College. During 1995-96, the following new endowment funds were created at Bridgewater:

1. An initial gift of $52,500 in stocks from Dr. David Klock established the Phyllis A. Wells Klock ‘67 Scholarship in the History Department. A very special Christmas gift to his wife, this award will memorialize Professor Jordan Fiore. A committee of the History Department will select the most deserving junior or senior history major, considering financial need and academic record.

2. A gift plus a pledge from Mr. and Mrs. William Hauke, Jr. added to an earlier gift created the Dr. George F. Aherne ‘27 Scholarship in honor of Mrs. Hauke’s father and his many years of service to higher education. The scholarship will be awarded to a student preparing to embark on a career in teaching.

3. Barbara Walton Zeoli ’39 passed away in December 1995. Major General Richard Zeoli ’37 contributed an initial gift of $20,000 to create the Barbara Walton Zeoli ’39 Memorial Scholarship at Bridgewater for a student preparing to enter the teaching profession. General Zeoli presented this gift to the college during Alumni Weekend last spring to honor his wife’s many years of service to education.

4. A bequest of $10,000 from the estate of Dr. Loretta M. McHugh ’34 of Westfield, Massachusetts, establishes a new scholarship at Bridgewater State College. The selection of each recipient is to be determined by the President of the college or the Office of Financial Aid.

5. Gifts from Mark R. Craven and John C. Danehy brought the Elaine M. Danehy Memorial Scholarship to a level where awards will begin in 1996-97. The scholarship will be awarded to a student with a grade point average of 3.0 and financial need. Preference will be given to a female graduate of Archbishop Williams High School in Braintree, Massachusetts.

All of these gifts plus related contributions added more than $100,000 to the lasting endowment of the college in 1995-96. We are especially grateful for these contributions.

More than 5,000 Applications for the Class of "00"

When classes began in September, the freshman class — the class of 2000, or "00" — was welcomed to the college family. In the following interview, Mr. James F. Plotner, Jr., '67, who is Assistant Dean and Director of Admissions, discusses the admissions picture at the college.

Q. How does our undergraduate admissions profile look this fall?
A. "The numbers are very strong. In total number of students, there are approximately 6,600 total students, full-time and part-time. As far as full-time undergraduates are concerned, there are more than 6,000 enrolled.

"This year we have 1,190 freshmen — which is an increase of 50 over last year — and close to the same number of transfer students we had last fall, about 750.

"But of course there's more to a school than numbers, and I'm pleased that over the past few years we've been able to enroll a more diverse student population — diversity in the sense that students come to us from a wide variety of ethnic backgrounds, ages and a broad range of geographic regions. Just this fall, for example, we welcomed 17 new students from Japan.

"Specifically, minority students make up 13 percent of the first-time, full-time freshmen at Bridgewater, a significant increase when compared to previous years.

"We had over 5,000 applications for admission for the class of 2000, which means that among the state's 29 public colleges and universities, only one — the University of Massachusetts-Amherst, with quadruple our student population — received more applications for admission than Bridgewater did. That's an important yardstick."

Q. When you talk with prospective students, what do they like most about Bridgewater?
A. "Bridgewater has a strong appeal for students considering colleges. The college has an excellent academic reputation, most classes are small and the faculty attentive to student needs, and the price is affordable for the average family. The campus itself — the physical plant — is certainly among the most attractive anywhere, so the first impression visitors have is a very positive one.

School of Management and Aviation Science Established

At its September 26, 1996, meeting, the Board of Trustees approved a recommendation from President Tinsley to establish a School of Management Science and Aviation Science, effective in the 1997-1998 academic year.

"This is a very important step for the college. I am delighted the Board agreed that this is the organizational structure we need," she said. The Board also accepted President Tinsley's recommendation that the position of Dean for the new school be created, and a national search is scheduled to begin in the spring.

The School of Arts and Sciences and the School of Education and Allied Studies were established four years ago.

President Tinsley said there are now more than 1200 students majoring in these areas. The new school will be comprised of three departments: Department of Management, Department of Accounting and Finance, and Department of Aviation Science."
BSC Students and Faculty Attend Model UN Program in New York

In photo above, students and faculty of the Department of Political Science met with the Canadian Ambassador to the United Nations during a trip they made to New York City last spring. The trip is part of the course requirement for PO 300, the “Model United Nations Practicum,” and was organized by professors Michael Kryzanek and Christopher Kirkey.

Karen Cooper is Director of Annual Giving

Ms. Karen Cooper is the new Director of Annual Giving at the college. Ms. Cooper joined the staff on June 3rd.

A graduate of Salve Regina University in Newport, Rhode Island, Ms. Cooper was previously director of alumni affairs at Salve Regina.

Ms. Cooper is active in several national development organizations, including the Council for Advancement and Support of Education (CASE), the National Society for Fund Raising Executives (NSFRE) and Women in Development, a regional organization which fosters the professional growth of women who are employed in the development field.

Dr. Richard Cost, Vice President for Institutional Advancement, reports that Karen is already developing excellent plans for fund-raising at BSC.

"As an enthusiastic young professional in higher education, Karen is just the right person to move our annual giving programs forward," he said.

"I'm looking forward to the challenge of taking the Annual Fund to new heights," says Ms. Cooper.

Dr. Jacob Liberles Puts Aside His Conducting Baton - Well, Almost Puts It Aside

Over the course of nearly thirty years at Bridgewater, Dr. Jacob Liberles has been the renowned conductor of numerous singing groups, including the Chorale, the Chamber Singers and the Alumni Chamber Choir. There have been literally hundreds of concerts that have thrilled audiences on campus, in other parts of the country, and during tours abroad to Europe and South America.

Under his leadership, Bridgewater students have performed in great concert halls, been feted at state dinners, and have had their music broadcast live on television and radio.

Now Dr. Liberles has decided to give his conducting baton, and himself, somewhat of a respite from the months-long rigors of training and rehearsing which are required to perform at the level these groups achieve in their musical presentations.

Starting this semester, he has turned over the duties of conducting the chamber singers and will concentrate instead on classroom teaching. "It's not easy just to stop," Dr. Liberles admits. "Working with students who sing in groups like the chorale and chamber singers is a different kind of experience from most student-faculty relationships.

"In a regular classroom, you typically have a student for a semester and perhaps may see them in passing in later years, and they might remember you and you might remember them," he explains.

"But I've known some of these people for fifteen or twenty years. We traveled together, we lived together, we rehearsed and performed hundreds of times together. There's a closeness that makes us special to each other. It's what I've enjoyed most of all about conducting through the years."

There are many special memories for him, but among the ones Dr. Liberles especially likes to recall is the time he led the Bridgewater State College chamber singers in concert in the town of his birth, Aschaffenberg, Germany.

"It was the second European tour we made, and I hadn't been back there since I was a very small child. Because of Hitler's policies toward non-Aryans, my father left Germany in 1937, and my mother, older brother and I left in 1938. I was glad to be able to return there under different circumstances than when I left."

Raised on the North Shore in Lynn, Dr. Liberles developed an early interest in music. "When I was growing up everyone played an instrument," he recalls. "I started playing trumpet when I was about six years old. I stopped playing for a few years but when I was in junior high school a music instructor named Dennis Kieley was attempting to form a band, and he offered free instruments in an effort to attract members. He became a mentor to me because first, he got me involved in music again and, later, he helped me obtain my first position at the college-level, at Hawthorne College in New Hampshire."

After high school, Dr. Liberles went to what was then Lowell State College (now the University of Massachusetts-Lowell) and earned a degree in music education. While at Lowell, he had his first experience with choral groups. "I was a trumpet player and the choral director recruited me to go on tour to both play and sing," he says. "As part of our music training at Lowell, we all had to try conducting, so it was here that I also had my first opportunity to do that as well."

When Dr. Liberles entered college, he imagined he would ultimately become a professional performer. "Nearly every musician has that dream at one time or another," he says, "And, to pay the bills, when I was in graduate school I did play professionally for a while — I did clubs, shows, performed in South America and even toured with the Rockettes. But by the time I had earned my bachelor's degree from Lowell, I was planning on a career in teaching. At the time I thought my future would be with instrumental music."

His first teaching position after graduation was in Turners Falls, Massachusetts. "I was hired as director of instrumental music. Turners Falls was a small town and I was responsible for music in the elementary grades, for the junior high school band, and for the high school band. It was a good experience," he recalls.
"I was there for three years and during one summer I won a fellowship from the American Council on Learned Societies to study at Bennington College in Vermont. I really enjoyed being at Bennington, so much so that soon after I returned to Turners Falls I quit my job to go back to Bennington to study full-time for a master's degree in music, with a major in performance."

After earning his master's at Bennington, Dr. Liberles taught for one year in the Ayer Public Schools and then was hired for his first college teaching post, at Hawthorne College in New Hampshire, where he remained for three years. He left to pursue a doctorate in music from Boston University.

"I was a student once again but I needed to work, so I looked around to see what was available," he remembers.

He found two openings in his field, one in the Newton Public Schools and the other at Bridgewater State College.

"I was somewhat familiar with Bridgewater because I had sung here once, in Tillinghast Hall, when I was at Lowell State College. Newton offered to hire me and pay for my doctoral studies at Boston University, but I had decided I really wanted to teach on the college level and so came here. I'm really glad that I made the choice I did."

The year was 1967 and the music department then consisted of, in addition to Dr. Liberles, professors Dorothy Ferry, Marjorie Haywood, and Vince Gannon. "I liked the college and my colleagues in the department made me feel welcome. I felt right away that this was a good place to be," he says.

"When I came to Bridgewater there was a chorus — which was a mixed group — and there was a women's glee club. Earlier there had been a men's glee club as well," he recalls. "There was also a strong music tradition. Whenever we went on tour, and we sang in front of alumni, the name that kept coming up was Frieda Rand, who is a legend in music among Bridgewater graduates. She must have had terrific choral groups. So I was pleased to be part of the quality music heritage that existed here."

Initially Dr. Liberles was responsible for the chorale. "I remember we rehearsed in what was called the 'Demonstration Room' in Boyden Hall, but perhaps we were too loud. We were later moved into the Horace Mann Auditorium for rehearsals."

These were years when the student population was growing. "The chamber singers were added during this period. At one time there were four choirs — the chorale, the chamber singers, the women's glee club, and a group founded by Dr. Maxine Asselin, 'Americana.' There were a lot of options for students to choose from."

Dr. Liberles stopped conducting for a period of time in order to complete his doctorate. "I came back to direct the chamber singers and then later took on the chorale," he says. "The chamber singers originally started out as a splinter group of the chorale, and then it just grew by itself, and became, in effect, the 'singing ambassadors of Bridgewater State College.'"

In 1985, the chamber singers were invited by the alumni association to perform for alumni in Washington, D.C. Later came tours in New York and Connecticut.

"The alumni association was our earliest supporter. After the first tours were successful, we began thinking about performing in Europe." With financial assistance from the Alumni Association, the first tour, to Romania, Hungary and Austria, was arranged.

"People ask me 'which tour was the most exciting?' That group has to stick out in my mind at least because it was the first tour we took outside of the United States, and both Romania and Hungary were then behind the Iron Curtain. I still get letters from alumni who were part of that experience. All of us who were involved were affected by it. It was a terrific opportunity for us," he recalls.

Three years later came a tour of Germany and Czechoslovakia, followed by a tour of Russia, Latvia and Lithuania. "These were all memorable for everyone who participated," Dr. Liberles remembers. "In addition to touring and meeting so many wonderful people, there were state dinners, performances in great palaces, and in several countries national television and radio broadcasts. It was something one doesn't forget."

Last year, Dr. Liberles led his last tour abroad involving Bridgewater students. "We decided to make this one to South America and we chose Venezuela. Every tour is unique, of course, but this last one included a ten-hour bus ride through the Andes. It was an exhausting trip but the scenery was just spectacular."

Yet even now another tour — this one involving the Alumni Chamber Choir — is in the offing. "We hope to go to Ireland and Scotland next year," says Dr. Liberles. "And I'm as excited about this trip as I was all of the others. I feel very fortunate to have been able to spend my career doing what I enjoy the most."

Mr. Roger Limoges, '97, has been appointed by Governor William Weld to become the student member of the Massachusetts Board of Higher Education. The nine-member board's jurisdiction consists of 129,000 students from the nine state colleges, 15 community colleges and five UMass campuses.

Mr. Limoges, a political science major, was serving his second term as a member of the Board of Trustees at Bridgewater when the Governor announced his selection. Mr. Limoges has resigned from the BSC board to assume his new state-wide post.
Alumni Update

Items, Dates, Programs, and Events

Alumni Gathering in Boston
Bridgewater alumni and friends will begin the holiday season with a chocolate tasting at the Ritz Carlton in Boston on Sunday, November 17. The hotel's chef will perform a pastry demonstration and guests will sample the creations. Come early and get a start on your holiday shopping on Newbury Street. For information, contact the Alumni Office.

Homecoming '96
Bridgewater State College alumni and students celebrated Homecoming on Saturday, November 2. Fellow graduates joined under the tent at Swenson Field as we cheered for our football team! In addition to the game, activities included the running of the Carol Mulloy Cuttle 5K Road Race, reunions at the Charlie Horse in West Bridgewater for the classes of 1976, 1981, 1986, 1991, and 1996, and a student production of Godspell. The next issue will include full coverage of Homecoming. To be part of the Homecoming Committee, contact the Alumni Office.

Athletic Hall of Fame Inductions
Congratulations to the 1996 induction class of Debra Carreiro '86, (softball/volleyball), Catherine Karl '91 (softball/volleyball), James McKeon '75 (ice hockey), Karan Parkin '84 (track and field), Michelle Thompson '89 (track and field), and Charles Tobey '76 (football). The Hall of Fame ceremony was held on Friday, November 1 in the Rondileau Campus Center. Established in 1986, the Athletic Hall of Fame recognizes the contributions of the developers and participants in the heritage of athletic excellence at Bridgewater.

A Call for Nominations
The Bridgewater Alumni Association seeks nominations for its annual awards, to be presented Alumni Weekend, May 30 and 31, 1997. We would appreciate it if you would attach supporting materials.

The Bridgewater Alumni Award for Outstanding Service to the Alumni Association is given to an individual whose qualifications include the ability to build understanding and awareness through involvement; leadership that fosters a caring community; and programs that promote strategies for drawing others into a network of cooperation.

The Dr. Catherine Comeau Award for Professional Achievement and Community Service is presented to a graduate of the college's Department of Movement Arts, Health Promotion, and Leisure Studies. The recipient will be a graduate of at least five years and be an influential role model in the field.

The V. James DiNardo Award for Excellence in Teaching is presented to a member of the faculty whose contributions include mastery of subject matter, enthusiastic teaching style, and personal attention to the students.

The Adrian Rondileau Award for Professional Achievement and Community Service was established to recognize an alumna/alumnus who demonstrates the qualities most valued by Dr. Rondileau, the eighth president of the college. The recipient must demonstrate exceptional service to the community, resulting in improvement of the quality of the community's life.

The Nicholas P. Tillinghast Award for Achievement in the Field of Education was named in honor of the college's first president. The award is given to an alumna/alumnus who demonstrates qualities of outstanding leadership, excellence in performance, and personal achievement in the field of public education.

CareerNet Alumni Career Network
Up and Running
Over 300 alumni have agreed to serve as career networking advisors to BSC students and other alumni. We have participants from as near as Middleboro and as far as California. CareerNet advisors, like all Bridgewater alumni, have a wealth of information to share. Some of the many ways that CareerNet advisors are involved with the career planning process include: serving as an individual career mentor in a one-to-one situation; participating in career panels and discussion groups; or attending networking events and sharing information about their career paths.

If you are interested in learning more about CareerNet, contact the Career Services Office at 508/697-1328 or via email at: careersrv@bridgew.edu.

Subscribe to the JobTrakker
The Career Services Office offers subscriptions to the twice monthly job news bulletin, JobTrakker, which contains listings of entry-level through upper-level positions in career field from accounting to sales & marketing. Job listings are also published on the JobTrak homepage (www.jobtrak.com) daily. For subscription information for the newsletter or the homepage password, please contact the Office of Career Planning and Placement at (508) 697-1328.

Comment Staff and WBIM Alumni
Many have expressed interest in holding a Reunion during Alumni Weekend '97 for alumni of these two active student organizations. To add your name to the reunion list or be part of the committee, please contact the Alumni Office.

Elizabeth Caswell Fobes, pictured, lives in an assisted-living center in Maine. Bessie Gruber Sanders and her husband Barkev sent a message via the internet saying, "Although we are in our nineties, with the spirit of Bridgewater behind us, we keep up with modern equipment in our apartment in a retirement community."

George Aherne spends the winter in Florida near his daughter and her family. During the past 28 years of retirement he has been active in many endeavors including serving as chairman of the historical board in Yarmouth, Massachusetts.

1935

George Higgins
20 Deerfield Road
Osterville, MA 02657

Audrey Tripp was named Westport, Massachusetts' Citizen of the Year. She was honored for her 38 years of service in the Westport School Department, before retiring in 1973 as assistant superintendent in charge of elementary education.

1937

Former Woodward Hall classmates Avis Brown-Cushman Olotka, Phyllis Roberts, Wilma "Billie" Quinn Fitzgerald, and Thelma Westerling French, enjoyed a June mini-reunion in Rockport, Massachusetts.

1940

Janice Breman Sprogell
41 Linwood Drive
West Hartford, CT 06107

Barbara Dobbyn Egan of Wollaston, has six children and 15 grandchildren. Arnold Levine recently was appointed to Americorps Elder Leadership Training Program under the aegis of the Quincy Council on Aging. Anyone interested in volunteer opportunities should contact him at the Atlantic Neighborhood Community Center (617) 376-1381. Eleanor Walsh Leary gathered some old Bridgewater friends at her home in East Weymouth for a luncheon in honor of Mary Lockary Hicks. Mary lives in Port Charlotte, Florida, and was visiting her daughter Beth on the South Shore in August. Those at the mini-reunion included Eleanor Mullen Sheehan, Marjorie Wright Skahill, Helen Judge Ryan, and Clem Daley's wife Doris... Helen and Bud Ryan celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary last May with their large family and many friends. The celebration began with a mass at St. Joseph's Church in Needham, in which all 16 grandchildren took part in some way, followed by dinner at the Wellesley Country Club. Helen and Bud were surprised and delighted to be presented with a "memory book" of old photos and letters of reminiscence. Barbara Taylor Hapworth is moving to St. Charles, Missouri, to be closer to her son and his family. She anticipates a more leisurely lifestyle there. During her years in Charlotte, North Carolina, she served on a hospital auxiliary board for eight years, three years as president, as well as president of her apartment complex for five years (being president of the student government association at Bridgewater States to have been an excellent training ground).... Pat Harrington Ryan and her sister enjoyed a wonderful trip to British Columbia which included a stay at the Whistler Resort and visits to Vancouver and Victoria and its world-famous gardens. The trip was part of the Golden Eagle Awards bestowed on Ryan Business Systems by Canon USA Incorporated. This is the second time the Ryan family business has won this prestigious award.

1941

Louise Forsyth
75 Monroe Road
Quincy, MA 02169

Mary Brigida Guidoboni still works and teaches on the Pima Indian reservation in Arizona... Louise Forsyth participated in the annual conventions of the American Counseling Association in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, and in the Massachusetts School Counselors Association in Hyannis, Massachusetts. She serves on two national committees of ACA and is a life trustee on the MSCA Governing Board. She is a past president of both associations... Betty Milne Edgar and her husband, William, and Elna Fillipson Helgerson and her husband, Arthur, enjoyed a spring trip to Costa Rica. Betty and Elma felt as though they were back in their "Br H2O days"... Our condolences to Tom Sparkes, who recently lost his sister Alice Sparkes '38.

Phyllis Clayman Friedman
30 Washington Street #713
Brookline, MA 02146

Congratulations to Alice Sullivan of Riverside, Rhode Island, who recently retired as assistant executive director of the Rhode Island Interscholastic League. Under Alice’s leadership, the state went from having no girls teams in the 1950s to the 400 teams that competed this past school year. She will be sorely missed by all involved in Rhode Island athletics. Already involved with the Bridgewater Alumni Association as a director, Alice has already put her “free time” to use—she helped plan a September alumni gathering in Newport.

Barbara Harrington Dillon and her family recently held their first Harrington family reunion with about 70 members attending.

She would like to hear from BSC friends Nancy King ’53 and Ann Defazio Berra ’57. Sandra Corey Gray runs her own company since the 1990 death of her husband. The business, Cushman & Marden, was founded in 1894 and is a supplier to the shoe, bookbinding, and leather accessories trade. Kathleen Crowley-Thibeau Kroll and her husband, Joe, are enjoying life in Dunellon, Florida, where she has begun a new career as a real estate agent. Congratulations to former BAA President Mary C. Lydon on her recent retirement. Pictured are Mary, third from the left, with several of her BSC friends at her retirement party.

Karen Mann Orcutt sends greetings from Florida where Sea World was a meeting place for Maire Callahan Zuist and husband Bob, Phyllis Lanza Caligaris and husband Connie, and Karen and husband Bill to spend the day. The Zuis and Orcutts met again in April at Cypress Gardens to spend another day together. Ruth Thompson Robinson of Piscataway, New Jersey, sings in three choirs and says it was a treat to combine travel and music last summer when she went to London and Canterbury with the Berkshire Choir Festival to perform Mozart’s Mass in C Minor. Sandra Sparrell Fitzpatrick is a multi-media coordinator for the Northbrook School District in Illinois. Francena Warren Smith sent us a note on last year’s 40th reunion, and through no fault on her part, we inadvertently delayed publishing it. What she wrote was, "We had a pleasant evening at the 40th reunion last year, renewing friendships, reminiscing and learning about the lives of classmates. We all enjoyed reading the letters of those of you who could not attend." Francena asked us to express her thanks to the committee members who did a fine job of providing the opportunity for the Class of 1955 to be together once again."

Women's Institute Day
Thursday, February 13, 1997
Rondileau Campus Center

sponsored by the Bridgewater Alumni Association and Bridgewater State College

The college's Women's Institute Day committee is looking for several alumnae volunteers to come back to campus for a day to speak to undergraduates about her Bridgewater experience. Alumnae from all majors and of all ages are welcome!

For more information, please contact WID co-chairs:
Mary Tieman at (508) 697-1287 or
Susan Holton at (508) 697-1750

A new chapter opens...

...with opportunities to show your pride!

You can help Bridgewater leap into the 21st century. Your donation to the Annual Fund can make it possible for deserving students to continue their education, furnish them with first-rate materials and assist faculty with state-of-the-art research and teaching tools.

We are faced with an exciting opportunity. The Commonwealth has challenged us to increase private support—your support—by offering funding from a new matching grant. Alumni gifts will be matched and can potentially generate up to $440,000 additional dollars for the college.

Your gift will mean more than ever before. Please send your contribution to the 1996/97 Annual Fund today. Join the hundreds of loyal alumni, parents and friends who show their pride and help us achieve our goal.

Dr. Franklin Wilbur, '69, Convocation Speaker

In photo at left, Dr. Franklin Wilbur, '69, addresses Convocation Ceremony on Friday, September 27, as the college began its 156th academic year. Dr. Wilbur is the associate vice president for undergraduate studies at Syracuse University, and a recognized authority on school-college partnerships. His latest book, "Linking America's Schools and Colleges," was published last fall. As part of the Convocation ceremony, President Tinsley presented silver commemorative medallions to 90 faculty members and administrators who have completed 25 years or more of service to Bridgewater.
