A Call for Nominations

The Bridgewater Alumni Association seeks nominations for its annual awards to be presented Alumni Weekend. We would appreciate it if you would attach supporting materials.

The Bridgewater Alumni Award for Outstanding Service to the Alumni Association is given to an individual whose qualifications include the ability to build understanding and awareness through involvement, leadership that fosters a caring community and programs that promote strategies for drawing others into a network of cooperation.

The Dr. Catherine Comeau Award for Outstanding Professional Achievement is presented to a graduate of the college’s Department of Movement Arts, Health Promotion and Leisure Studies. The recipient will be a graduate of at least five years and be an influential role model in the field.

The Dr. V. James DiNardo Award for Excellence in Teaching is presented to a member of the faculty whose contributions include mastery of subject matter, enthusiastic teaching style and personal attention to the students.

The Adrian Rondileau Award for Professional Achievement and Community Service was established to recognize an alumna/alumnus who demonstrates the qualities most valued by Dr. Rondileau, the eighth president of the college. The recipient must demonstrate exceptional service to the community, resulting in improvement of the quality of the community’s life.

The Nicholas P. Tillinghast Award for Achievement in the Field of Education was named in honor of the college’s first president. The award is given to an alumna/alumnus who demonstrates qualities of outstanding leadership, excellence in performance, and personal achievement in the field of public education.

Dr. Adrian Tinsley recently completed her 10th year as president of Bridgewater State College. In the following article, we chronicle how her leadership has revitalized, strengthened and — in significant ways — transformed the college.

According to a survey conducted several years ago by the American Association of State Colleges and Universities (AASCU), 61 percent of college presidents have been in their current positions less than six years; 26 percent have been in office less than two years.

"Twenty-five years ago, it wasn't unusual for a president to serve 10 or more years at the same campus," said AASCU in a statement announcing the survey results, but "since presidencies can be a very rough ride ... turnover in academia's top job has increased."

Given those circumstances, the fact that Adrian Tinsley has remained as Bridgewater's president for more than 10 years now is an impressive accomplishment all by itself.

Yet if one reflects back on the challenges she faced at Bridgewater as a new college president in the summer of 1989 — and then one considers how different an institution Bridgewater is in 1999 — it becomes clear just how effective she has been in that position. It has been, indeed, a remarkable 10 years.

"Welcome to Massachusetts, President Tinsley."

This past June, a group of faculty, staff, former students and other friends gathered on the college quadrangle at a surprise party to honor Dr. Tinsley and celebrate her years at BSC.

Among those invited to speak that afternoon was Mr. Louis M. Ricciardi, class of '81. Back in 1989, Mr. Ricciardi was elected alumni trustee on the college's Board of Trustees, and subsequently served four terms as chairman of that board (this June he completed the maximum 10 years allowed by statute for trustee service and stepped down from the Board).

In his capacity as a college trustee, and, in addition, as chairman of the Bridgewater State College Foundation since 1997, few have worked more closely with Dr. Tinsley over the past decade. When Mr. Ricciardi spoke of those early challenges, he was drawing on firsthand experience.

"Let me take you back briefly to 1989," said Mr. Ricciardi, turning to Dr. Tinsley. "You're excited ... you're finally going to become a college president ... This is what you've worked towards your entire career ... And what do you find?"

Many of those attending the event knew what was coming next, as a good number of them were on campus in those early Tinsley years. The memories are still vivid in their minds.

"Massive cuts in your college's upcoming state appropriation," Mr. Ricciardi continued. "Reversions to the existing budget ... and local town officials threatening to withhold the occupancy permit for your new dormitory just before the start of classes ... Welcome to Massachusetts, President Tinsley!"

Adrian Tinsley inherited an "extremely difficult situation," continued Mr. Ricciardi, yet "fortunately for all of us, she did have a plan and the courage to act on it. It wasn't easy, and her first year was a rough one. I recall vividly our long, sometimes animated conversations — and Adrian, you and I can both probably recall some unbelievable moments and situations — but the goal was always the same: do what needs to be done to make this..."
campus and this college truly excellent in name and expectations of itself.”

“There are challenges ahead...”

When Dr. Tinsley was appointed president by the board of trustees in December 1988, she was already a veteran with more than 20 years of higher education experience. She had faculty and administrative experience with colleges and universities in four states plus three years’ experience in the central office of the Minnesota State University system.

A native of New York City with degrees from Bryn Mawr College, the University of Washington and Cornell University, she had worked her way up through positions of increasingly greater responsibility.

At the time of her selection to be Bridgewater’s 10th president – and first woman president – she was executive vice president and provost at what was then Glassboro State College (later Rowan University) in New Jersey.

As Mr. Ricciardi pointed out in his remarks this past June, she would need every bit of experience, skill and good luck at her command when she accepted the Bridgewater offer.

In the summer of 1989, in her first message to the campus community as president, Dr. Tinsley sounded an optimistic tone: “I embark on this presidency with the greatest enthusiasm because of my strong sense that Bridgewater is a fine institution that wants to get better,” she said.

Then she spoke of the Commonwealth’s fiscal crisis, which appeared to become more calamitous with each passing day.

“There are, of course, challenges ahead,” she said. “Chief among them is a difficult state budget situation which threatens all institutions of higher education. The uncertainty of when and how the issue will be resolved places burdens on all of us.”

 Barely three months into her term as president, she lent her support to a “march on the State House” organized by the student governments of the public colleges and universities to rally legislative support for the state’s higher education institutions.

Early in the morning on October 18, 1989, 16 buses were lined up in front of the college’s campus center, ready to carry 500 BSC students to the rally — only UMass-Amherst was to send a larger contingent to the Boston Common, where the rally would take place. At 9 AM President Tinsley and student government president Michael Rothberg, ’91, together boarded the lead bus for the trip to Boston.

On arrival in Boston, the buses parked on Atlantic Avenue, and, with Dr. Tinsley and Mike Rothberg at their head, the BSC students marched the mile through Boston’s streets to the Common, where they joined 25,000 others in the effort to stop the fiscal assault on the state’s public colleges and universities.

“We will not be distracted.”

The following statistics reveal how serious an impact the budget situation was to have at Bridgewater: Between January 1989, and August 1990, the college’s state-appropriated budget was reduced nearly $5.5 million, which represented approximately 27 percent of the state appropriation.

On October 28, 1989, two weeks after leading the student contingent to Boston, Dr. Tinsley was inaugurated as Bridgewater’s 10th president. In her inaugural address she assured the campus community that, despite the fiscal problems, “We will not be distracted.”

Those words became a theme that helped shore up the spirits of the beleaguered college family as one budget cut followed another, and the faculty in the Department of Management Science had those words inscribed on a plaque which they presented to her.

The state’s budget crisis dragged on for months, and in the fall of 1990 — within a period of six weeks — another series of “emergency cuts” saw Bridgewater lose another $2 million of its state-appropriated funding.

“We are living through a watershed year for Massachusetts and for public higher education,” President Tinsley said at an all-college meeting in September 1990. “What happens this year is going to determine our future for at least the rest of this century.”

Moreover, an even greater fiscal threat loomed directly ahead.

A petition on the ballot that fall was about to give Massachusetts’ voters the option to force state government to implement even deeper cuts. Had that petition been approved by the voters that November, the college’s budget would have been reduced another $7.2 million in the first year alone.

Amid such gloom, Dr. Tinsley worked diligently to sustain the community’s spirit and morale.

“These are difficult issues to think about, let alone lead an institution through,” she said at that September meeting, “but with the help and support of the Board of Trustees, and with the help and support of the vice presidential team, and with the help and support of all of you here on this...”
made another key appointment to her senior administrative team when Dr. Dana Mohler-Faria was appointed vice president for administration and finance. Dr. Mohler-Faria, a well-respected veteran of more than 20 years' experience in Massachusetts public higher education, immediately began to implement major changes in budget development, allocation, oversight, reporting and auditing processes to bring the college's financial systems into compliance with national practices.

At Dr. Tinsley's direction, Dr. Mohler-Faria also moved quickly to push forward an aggressive and far-reaching plan to win support and funding to renovate existing campus facilities and acquire new facilities. The wisdom of that decision has become particularly apparent as the college prepares to observe the millennium with a host of major construction and renovation projects in progress and more on the way.

“A year of contrasts”
Looking back from the vantage point of 1999, the great successes that were the hallmarks of Dr. Tinsley's first 10 years as president tend to dim — as well they should — the intense trauma of those first difficult years.

But with a strategic planning process well underway, and a team of senior administrators chosen by the new president in place, there was — in the 1990-1991 academic year — a feeling that the worst of the budget cuts were over, and on campus there was a clear sense of forward momentum.

“This has been a year of contrasts,” wrote President Tinsley in the college's annual report. "Fiscal uncertainty continued. Individually, most faculty, administrators and staff were forced to endure a furlough in the spring. However, these very real and often painful experiences did not distract the faculty, administrators, staff nor the students of the college. We have maintained our focus on the building of those elements which distinguish Bridgewater.”

In October 1990, with further budget reductions taking place, the college observed the 150th anniversary of its founding with a Sesquicentennial Convocation. It was at that convocation that Lou Ricciardi, serving his first term as chairman of the board, spoke these words to the campus community:

“I urge you to have faith in this college. We have persevered through 150 years of challenges and I promise you we will emerge from this a stronger college because our faculty, staff, students, alumni, friends and trustees will not have it any other way.”

A dramatic turnaround
Indeed, just as Mr. Ricciardi had said, the college would persevere. In fact, it would flourish, although given the dire circumstances in the fall of 1990, few would have predicted that the college’s fortunes would so soon enjoy a dramatic turnaround.

Within the coming decade, however, the college would begin to take the steps to position itself among the most respected public colleges in New England.

Highlights of her 10 years:
• Organization —
Immediately upon taking office, Dr. Tinsley began a reorganization of the college administration.

Over the next several years, five organizational divisions were created — Academic Affairs, Student Affairs, Administration and Finance, Institutional Advancement and Information Technology — and three academic schools were established — the School of Arts and Sciences and the School of Education and Allied Studies in 1992 and, in 1997, the School of Management and Aviation Science.

In addition to creating the divisions and establishing the three new schools, experienced higher education professionals were secured to lead each of the divisions and schools, most of whom remain in those positions today.
ACADEMICS

In addition to creating three new academic schools, new undergraduate majors in economics and music have been introduced, plus a new master’s degree program in public administration.

Looking ahead, Dr. Tinsley has informed the Bridgewater community she plans to work with faculty to develop new undergraduate and graduate programs in management, computer science and criminal justice.

She plans also to engage the campus community in discussions relating to the assessment of student learning outcomes. “How do we document what our graduates know and are able to do as a result of their having attended college?” she said in her annual welcome to faculty and staff when the 1999-2000 academic year opened. “We will be spending a lot of time and energy this year as we attempt to answer at Bridgewater a question that challenges higher education nationwide.”

On a campus where new approaches to teaching with technology are a focus of many Bridgewater faculty, a new $150,000 grant from the Davis Educational Foundation is advancing that effort. The grant, awarded to the college in the summer of 1999, provides technical support and stipends over the next three years for more than 25 Bridgewater faculty who are designing courses that combine Internet and traditional teaching strategies.

Faculty, librarians and administrators at Bridgewater have another significant resource to support new initiatives in teaching and learning: The Center for the Advancement of Research and Teaching (CART). CART also coordinates an extensive program which provides grants to faculty and librarians to conduct scholarly research. Last year, CART awarded more than 60 individual grants to support academic research.

STUDENTS

During Dr. Tinsley’s tenure as president, Bridgewater has, in terms of enrollment, grown to be the largest state college in Massachusetts, with more than 9,000 full-time and part-time students.

That is one hallmark, and there are others. Dr. Willett, vice president for student affairs, said at the 10th celebration honoring Dr. Tinsley, “The well-being of our students has always been first and foremost in President Tinsley’s mind. She is a president who genuinely cares about students.”

At every level, student life at Bridgewater has been impacted by that concern. Take, for example, the range of services offered to students — from academic advising to health services to personal counseling to career planning — which is greater than at any time previous in the college’s history.

And there are other examples of the impact on students:

In an effort to reward and encourage academic achievement, Dr. Tinsley began a new practice starting at Commencement 1998. Graduating seniors who have earned cum laude, magna cum laude or summa cum laude status, or who have earned All-College and/or departmental honors, are recognized by wearing distinctive cords or sashes with their caps and gowns at commencement.

In an effort to discourage alcohol abuse, the college has during the past two years introduced new, strict policies governing the possession and consumption of alcohol on college property.

For example, alcohol may not be present in any campus residence hall except the student apartments, where all residents and visitors must be at least 21 years of age. Since the new policies were put into effect in September 1998, there has been a marked decrease in alcohol-related incidents and problems.

INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY

During the Tinsley years at Bridgewater, the college has become the preeminent public college in New England in terms of its commitment to acquiring technology resources and using those resources to improve teaching and learning.

A big boost in this direction occurred in September 1995, when the college opened the John Joseph Moakley Center for Technological Applications, one of the most advanced educational computing facilities in New England, which was built with a $10 million federal grant, one of the largest federal grants ever awarded to any state college in the nation.

The idea for the center originated with Dr. Bardo, who wrote the original proposal. In December 1990, two Bridgewater graduates — Fred Clark, ’83, now chairman of Board of Trustees, and David Carreiro, ’84, both of whom were on the staff of U.S. Congressman J. Joseph Moakley — arranged for the congressman to visit their alma mater.

Dr. Tinsley and Dr. Bardo presented him with the plan for what they called the “Old Colony Center for Technological Applications.” Congressman Moakley immediately promised his support to obtain funding, and on August 17, 1991, President George Bush signed legislation authorizing construction of the new center.

The building, named by vote of the college’s Board of Trustees in 1992 the “John Joseph Moakley Center for Technological Applications,” has become a major resource not only for the campus community but for K-12 schools, businesses and organizations of all kinds in Southeastern Massachusetts.

In March 1997, Dr. Tinsley took another major step forward in the effort to strengthen the college’s technology operation.

Upon her recommendation, Mr. Bill Davis became the college’s first Chief Information Officer, with responsibility for college information systems, instructional and research computing, technical services and educational technology.

Since coming to Bridgewater, Mr. Davis has overseen a number of significant technology advances, including the installation around the campus of 22 kiosks where students can easily check e-mail, grades or do research on the Internet. New student computer labs have also been opened on both East and West campus, and today all of the college’s residence halls and academic and administrative buildings are fully wired for voice, video and data transmission.

Expansion of technology-capable classrooms — first introduced in the Moakley Center — continues in other campus buildings. In fall 1999, two such classrooms opened in Hart Hall, and those classrooms include state-of-the-art presentation technology and full video-conferencing capability. These will serve as models when classrooms are redesigned and refurbished during the upcoming renovations of Harrington and Boyden Halls.

All together, the campus today has more than 1,000 computers — nearly double what it had just a few years ago — available to students, faculty, staff and the community-at-large, and offers training programs to help businesses, schools and organizations of all kinds utilize the latest technological innovations.

Facilities

A number of changes and improvements have taken place with regard to the college’s physical plant during the past decade, including the purchase of 43 acres of land to bring total campus acreage to 240 acres. Among other highlights are the following:

1. Alumni Park — Dedicated in 1995, Alumni Park is a baseball and softball complex. Significant dollars for construction came from donations raised from alumni and friends of the college as a project of the Bridgewater State College Foundation. Altogether, more than $260,000 was raised, proving conclusively that individuals and corporations would come forward to support the college, as Dr. Tinsley said, “they were approached and the project was right.”

2. MBTA Agreements — As part of agreements negotiated with the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority (MBTA), the college received more than $6 million for improvements to the campus when the MBTA resumed public commuter rail service to Southeastern Massachusetts in September 1997, with the Bridgewater station in the middle of the college’s campus.

3. New field house — A new $16 million, 90,000 square foot Athletic Complex/Field House is due to be completed by fall 2002. It will be located near the current football field and will accommodate athletic, teaching and support facilities.

4. Residence hall and dining facilities — A new 300-bed residence hall and a 700-seat dining facility are scheduled to be completed in fall 2002.

5. New operations center — A new operations center, proposed to house the college’s facilities staff, central receiving and campus police, is under study, with construction to begin in spring 2000. It will be located adjacent to Great Hill Drive on the East Campus.

6. Renovations to Harrington Hall and Boyden Hall — The complete renovation of Harrington Hall, designated as the new home of the School of Management and Aviation Science, is scheduled to commence in the winter of 2001. Renovations to Boyden Hall, expected to commence in the summer of 2001, will see administrative offices located on the main floor relocated to the second floor, and the first floor will be reserved for those offices offering direct services to students — financial aid, student accounts and registrar’s office.

7. Campus Beautification Committee — Under the leadership of Dr. Wayne Phillips of the Department of Elementary and Early Childhood Education, the Campus Beautification Committee — comprised of faculty, students and staff — has been working with the college’s facilities staff on a number of projects to improve the college’s buildings and grounds. Among other major projects, the committee has been instrumental in the design, planning and implementation of the campus center courtyard project, which involves the extensive reconstruction of the area behind the campus center into a spacious, handicapped accessible terraced garden and courtyard area.

8. Endowment Campaign — In terms of building private support for the college, these 10 years have been the most successful in the 160-year history of the college.

At Dr. Tinsley’s first Spring Commencement in May 1990, alumna Terry Hart Cogan, class of 1951, announced she was donating $1 million — the largest single gift the college had ever received from a graduate. Thanks to Ms. Cogan’s first million-dollar gift, the college was able to purchase 45 acres of land adjacent to the campus, expanding the college’s land area to 215 acres. At the fifth annual Chairmen’s Dinner in May 1998, Ms. Cogan announced a second million dollar gift to the college.

Dr. Tinsley described Ms. Cogan’s gifts to the college as “extraordinary acts of generosity that have given us great hope and motivation.”

In the spring of 1994, Dr. Tinsley, with the support of the board of trustees, brought to the campus an experienced development professional to lead the newly formed institutional advancement division, which incorporated alumni affairs, public affairs and development into a cohesive unit.
President Tinsley thanks her well-wishers at her anniversary party.

That summer Dr. Richard Cost became the college's first vice president for institutional advancement, and under his direction new initiatives to expand fund-raising efforts were introduced.

In 1997, the Bridgewater State College Foundation proposed an endowment campaign for the benefit of the college and set a goal of raising $5 million within five years. Under the leadership of Mr. Ricciardi, who was elected Chairman of the Foundation in 1997, the campaign reached that goal in 1999, a full three years ahead of schedule.

In remarks to the Chairmen's Dinner in May 1999, Dr. Tinsley said, "This is a turning point for the college. We're now on our way to growing an endowment that will genuinely impact the quality we can offer to Bridgewater students in the next century and for centuries to come."

Interest from the endowment is being used to support a variety of projects of direct benefit to the campus community, including scholarships for deserving students. In September 1997, another major Foundation project was the purchase for the college of a private residence at 180 Summer Street, directly adjacent to the campus, which houses the Department of Political Science and the Institute for Regional Development.

- Town and Regional Relationships

  Town — In the area of town-gown relations, there is significantly more communication and cooperation than there was back in 1989 when, as Mr. Ricciardi noted, town officials threatened to stop the opening of two new residence halls due to a dispute over water (that issue was resolved and the residence halls opened as scheduled).

  Today town and college officials meet monthly throughout the year to share information of mutual interest and resolve potential problems early. Every quarter, Dr. Tinsley meets with the members of the Board of Selectman to discuss a wide range of topics. And every June, in a tradition introduced by Dr. Tinsley in 1993, several hundred townspeople are guests of the college at the "Neighbors Dinner" where they enjoy a meal and a briefing from town and college officials.

Additionally, the town and the college work together on a number of projects. Recently college staff from Information Technology assisted town officials in developing improved computer systems, a move town authorities say saved Bridgewater taxpayers more than $20,000.

Region — In the Southeastern Massachusetts region, Dr. Tinsley has partnered with State Senator Marc Pacheco of Taunton in helping to promote the Southeastern Massachusetts Legislative Caucus, an organization founded by Senator Pacheco and State Representative Joan Menard, BSC '67, to help boost economic development and legislative support in the region. The caucus has been headquartered at Bridgewater since it was established in 1994.

Additionally, the college has established the Institute for Regional Development under the direction of Dr. Victor DeSantis of the Department of Political Science to serve as the focal point for outreach and support programs in the Southeastern Massachusetts area.

The Institute has sponsored a series of economic development conferences, conducted surveys and research on economic development issues, and worked to establish linkages between the college and regional businesses and government agencies. Within the Institute, a Center for Legislative Studies and a Center for Public School Leadership enable faculty and staff to provide important resources to government and education.

- Reputation of the College in Massachusetts and Nationally

  Because of the many changes which have occurred at the college during the past 10 years, the college today enjoys a highly favorable reputation both in Massachusetts and New England and, increasingly, across the country.

  State Representative David L. Flynn, '56, spoke of this recently when he said, "I have been associated with Bridgewater State College for more than 45 years — as a Patton. "With those words "Thank you for your Clark, who has just been elected to Bregewart's own General George program at any public college east of Ohio. only four-year aviation science offered to students, including the are at present more than 100 under­ graduate and graduate options from kindergarten through graduate and graduate options that had to be done on this campus, and I knew when I came in 1989 that the potential for excellence this campus had and I knew that I wanted to be a part of it. There was a lot of hard work that had to be done, and over these 10 years we've done that."

"I've never been in higher education at a more exci­ tinge time."

On that June afternoon when the campus community gathered to honor her for 10 years of distin­ guished leadership, and after everyone else had spoken, Dr. Tinsley had the opportunity to come to the microphone and offer her own reflections on her presidency.

"I didn't know when I came to Bridgewater how all this would go," she said. "I knew there were things that had to be done on this campus, and I knew when I came in 1989 that the potential for excellence this campus had and I knew that I wanted to be a part of it. There was a lot of hard work that had to be done, and over these 10 years we've done that."

"I am extremely optimistic about the future of the college," said Dr. Tinsley. "The problems we have are fixed and every member of this campus community can take pride and pleasure in that. I stayed because I saw where the college could go and because there could not be a better group of people to move a college forward. The next 10 years can be about this college becoming whatever it wants to be because the base is here."
Bridgewater's Cabinet Tackles the Tough Issues

By Karen White

Bridgewater State College's cabinet is comprised of the college's seven senior officials who, along with President Adrian Tinsley, wrestle weekly with some of the most pressing issues facing the institution.

A cabinet that works together is imperative. The toughest of problems come its way, such as devising the best and most effective use for the Moakley Center, or whether or not BSC should become a "dry" campus. Issues that have far-reaching impact across the campus, issues that are sensitive or potentially sticky - are all on the cabinet's agenda.

Each of the members represents a different aspect of the college organization, from academic programs to students to finances to fund-raising. Each is encouraged to comment on all topics on the cabinet's agenda, assuring a thorough discussion that considers all the angles and implications.

The cabinet serves as a sounding board and a source of up-to-date information for President Adrian Tinsley, who sets the agenda and leads the discussion. "But our primary function is to engage in a discussion focused on the development of the college, to look at planning processes, as well as the goals and visions of the college," Dr. Dana Mohler-Faria said.

The seven-member cabinet includes:
- Dr. Ann Lydecker, provost and vice president for academic affairs
- Dr. Dana Mohler-Faria, vice president for administration and finance
- Dr. Lynn Willett, vice president for student affairs
- Dr. Richard Cost, vice president for institutional advancement
- Mr. Bill Davis, chief information officer
- Ms. Pamela Parsons, assistant to the president
- Dr. Alan Comedy, assistant to the president for affirmative action, minority affairs and equal opportunity

The size of the cabinet has grown as the college itself has grown and changed. Mr. Davis is the first senior official hired to deal directly with technology at BSC. Recognizing the impact technology has and will continue to have at the college, he was added to the cabinet roster. Dr. Cost also was the first in his job at BSC, a position newly created in 1994 dealing with fund-raising, public affairs and alumni relations.
Another new addition is Dr. Comedy, who has served on the cabinet for two years.

All agree that serving on the cabinet helps them see the big picture at BSC. “Let me try to understand it from your perspective,” Dr. Cost said, explaining the fundamental strength of the cabinet. “That comes straight from the president. She has made it clear that each of us was chosen for a reason. If this president thinks these people are the best in their fields, I am going to listen carefully to what they have to say.”

Cabinet discussions are lengthy but fruitful. Consider recent discussions over the Moakley Center. Dr. Mohler-Faria said the cabinet took a close look at the center in the context of financing, academic use and programs, how students access its technology and how it serves the region in general.

“The Moakley Center is such a significant part of the institution, not just as a technology center but also as an academic center. Its implications are so broad and far reaching,” he said. “The written plan we subsequently developed was based on our collective thoughts and ideas about how to make the center a major academic and technology resource for the college and this region of the state.”

The cabinet has also worked on issues such as hiring a dean to oversee continuing education, the best use of Harrington Hall and how we dispense information about Internships. Each fall and spring the cabinet’s agendas are filled with budgetary matters. Occasionally an incident – such as the release of statistical data detailing diversity figures at BSC – will prompt a cabinet talk.

Or, as Ms. Parsons sums up the cabinet’s body of work – “They are all tough issues.”

To demonstrate how the cabinet functions, Dr. Lydecker recalled the discussion around changes in billing for evening enrollment. “We wanted to look at it from the students’ perspective, look at budget pressures on the academic enrollment, how will this be perceived by the public,” she said. “We do our checking now so we don’t run into pitfalls later.”

Seeing all issues from all angles is imperative to making sound decisions. “Often the hardest problems are cross-divisional problems that can only be solved if the divisions work together,” Dr. Willett said. “It’s a full campus perspective, not just everyone sitting around with his own division agenda clutched tightly in his sweaty little hands.”

The main agenda that’s on the table at all times is what’s best for Bridgewater State College.

“I give 99 percent of the credit for that to the president,” Dr. Willett said. “She makes her expectations known, that in order for the campus to work well there has to be some balance. High quality academic programs are important, but we also need beautiful flower gardens and cheerleaders and good publications and quality furniture and fun programs for the students.”

Hearing from each other, absorbing information from other divisions, sharing strategies – the cohesiveness of the cabinet helps the division heads to stay “on the same page,” Mr. Davis said.

“All agree that serving on the cabinet helps them see the big picture at BSC. The main agenda that’s on the table at all times is what’s best for Bridgewater State College.”

“Working within our divisions, we could easily become narrowly focused on our own goals and lose sight of the college as a whole,” he said.

Mr. Davis, in particular, is glad to be included on the cabinet. He considers himself in a “service role,” a cabinet member who’s main purpose is to assist the others by advising on the best technologies to get the job done.

“Everyone knows that technology is important, but not everyone has adapted to that,” he said. “The president is definitely forward thinking and takes the lead to make technology part of the cabinet discussions.”

Through cabinet meetings, Mr. Davis is able to balance the needs of the vice presidents more fairly than he could through separate one-on-one meetings. He is able to hear possible competing interests, and weigh them immediately and keep communication flowing.

Dr. Cost absorbs an untold amount of information from cabinet discussions, information that helps him do his job better. If he approaches a corporation about a possible donation, that corporation might want to know how the money would be directly used to service students. Alumni want to know about new things happening on campus. Other donors want to be assured the college is keeping true to its traditional values.

“Having that involvement with the cabinet enables me, when promoting this institution, to have a solid handle on who we are and where we are going,” he said.

Ms. Parsons comes at the cabinet from another angle. Unlike the others, she is not a department or division head. In her job as assistant to President Tinsley, Ms. Parsons oversees the president’s office and office budget, serves as a legislative liaison, handles complaints and coordinates major events. Her position, she feels, gives her a point of view unlike the others.

“I feel I have a different perspective, a different point of view,” she said. “It just adds to the mix. If there were no cabinet, the president might rely more on individual advice or individual meetings, but with the cabinet the group dynamic is there. I can’t imagine it any other way. It’s a great group dynamic. It works.”

Opinions are expressed and challenged. Members know they will have to defend their positions. Sometimes information from a cabinet member will send the discussion spinning in the opposite direction. Minds are changed. Consensus is reached, or the discussion is not yet over.

“As a group of people we don’t get defensive,” Dr. Lydecker said. “It’s a group where we can challenge one another in a way that is never taken personally. I value that.”

Despite the weighty matters on the table, the cabinet’s weekly two-hour meetings are not dour debates. Underneath their formal titles, the members share a sense of humor and a genuine affection.

Dr. Comedy speaks well of the cabinet, which welcomed him with “open arms.” As the affirmative action/minority affairs representative, Dr. Comedy is generally a little wary when he first arrives at a new campus. It wasn’t long before he realized the BSC cabinet didn’t see him as a “show piece,” but genuinely wanted to hear what he had to say about diversity.

Since then, he has been actively involved in all discussions, including the potentially controversial talk on sexual harassment training and pushing the issue of minority hiring.

“A lot of affirmative action people don’t have the ability to be involved. They are not in the cabinet and can’t go in and say, ‘This is an issue you need to look at from my perspective,’” he said. “When my voice can be heard on matters of diversity, that sends a clear message to me about the seriousness of the college.”

There are other challenges facing BSC beside the annual nail-biting wait for state funds. Dr. Lydecker wonders about technology and how it can be used to advance academic programs, whether classroom time can be replaced by computers without seriously damaging the teacher-student dynamic. She also wants to strengthen the college’s relationship to the K-12 school system.

Other members see other challenges. The institution will continue to evaluate its relationship with the region and the town of Bridgewater. The college will need to get to know the new chairman of the state Board of Higher Education, keep a handle on campus construction projects and continue to seek out ways to increase diversity.

Big concepts, tough issues.

“While each member of the cabinet naturally has an individual style and approach, collectively they work so well together because they genuinely respect each other’s experience and expertise. I draw great strength from their enthusiasm and their commitment to Bridgewater State College.”

They, in turn, have nothing but praise for President Tinsley.

“She’s a good leader with excellent communication skills, well spoken, able to tie things together from beginning to end, decisive,” Dr. Comedy said.

“She is in my estimation, in her leadership skills, second to none,” Dr. Mohler-Faria said. “She listens and understands, takes in all kinds of input and gives appropriate direction. She really makes this cabinet work well. I’ve been on others; this one works better than most.”

BSC Athletes Join Women’s New England Baseball League
by Paul E. Kandarian

In the male-dominated world of pro baseball, even mediocre hitters can haul in big bucks. In the brand new world of the Women’s New England Baseball League, three Bridgewater State College grads play the game for love, not money, shelling out their own cash for just about everything except uniforms.

And they’re pretty good ballplayers besides. The three grads - Jeannette Goodwin ’97, Tammy Silveira ’94, and Debra Sroczynski ’99 - were on the Bay State Express team that won the first WNEBL championship this past summer. The league will be back next season and so will the BSC grads, anxious to play a game they’ve long loved.

For most ball-playing females, softball is their only option, as was the case for the three grads at BSC, playing under long-time coach Dee Dee Enabenter. But for two of them, hardball was in their blood.

“I grew up playing baseball, in Little League and the Pony League,” said Ms. Sroczynski, a Rehoboth native. “The last time was in the Pony League, when I was 15. After that, schools wouldn’t let me try out for hardball, so I played tennis after that.”

Playing softball never dawned on her, she said, because to her it represented a step down in skills. But then she went to BSC, at age 25 after taking a few years off after high school, and found great encouragement under Coach Enabenter.

“She used to come by practice, I remember her sitting in her car, watching, not sure if she wanted to play softball,” Coach Enabenter said. “I told her to give it a try, and she ended up being a very good shortstop.”

Ms. Sroczynski took some time out of school to play for the Silver Bullets, a barnstorming women’s baseball team that was born and played a little hardball with her brother and father, but the only organized version of the sport she played was fast-pitch softball.

“Timo (Silveira’s nickname) and Deb put a lot into it, I don’t see it failing,” she said. “The league founders put a lot into it. I don’t see it failing.”

Of the three BSC grads on the Express team of the WNEBL this year, only Ms. Goodwin comes from a strict softball background. She played a little hardball with her brother and father, but the only organized version of the sport she played was fast-pitch softball.

“There’s so much different in baseball, the hitting, the wooden bats, the pitching, it’s totally different,” said Ms. Goodwin, holder of several softball records while at BSC. “It takes getting used to.”

Ms. Goodwin is currently an annuity service specialist for an insurance company, and is looking for a coaching job. She’d coached girls’ softball at Braintree High School for a year and loved it, she said.

Playing on the Express with the other two BSC grads was a bonus, Ms. Goodwin said, and “made me feel like 18 again, like I was a freshman in college again. Playing with Debra and Deb made it easier.”

Ms. Goodwin first heard about the WNEBL by spotting a brief item in the Boston Globe about tryouts. She went, made the cut and played ball all summer long; the WNEBL plays most of its games in Lynn.

Attendance this inaugural season was spotty, she said, but as with any new endeavor, “it’s tough the first year. It could’ve been better, I guess, maybe it wasn’t marketed enough.”

The league boasted four teams last year and will next, perhaps expanding to six teams that year or the next, which suits Ms. Goodwin and the other former BSC players just fine.

“It can survive,” Ms. Sroczynski said. “Talent-wise, there are a lot of good people in the league, and money-wise, they’re taking it nice and slow, not trying to get too big, too fast.”

Age, they say, is just a state of mind. But for three BSC alums and two current professors, it's also a state of body, as they use theirs to peel back the years, compete in some hard-fought athletic events and have a lot of fun to boot.

The alums - Marcia Crooks ’55; Helen (Wolski) Braithwaite ’55 and Sheila (Tunstall) McKenna ’62 - and professors Paul Dubois and Sam Baumgarten, all take part in athletic competition sponsored by the National Senior Games Association, which is sanctioned by the United States Olympic Committee. The Games host qualifying state events yearly and National Senior Games every other year. This year, the nationals are being held at DisneyWorld in Florida in October, an event expected to draw more than 12,000 people ages 50 and older from across the country - including a contingent of BSC people.

For the three alums, all female, participating in the games is the first chance they've had since their youth to engage in sporting competitions.

"They didn't have girls in sports in those days," said Marcia Crooks, 65, of Bellingham, retired teacher and director of health and physical education in the Abington public school system. "There were no high school teams, no college teams."

She heard about the Senior Games from her old friend and fellow BSC alum, Sheila McKenna, a few years ago and decided to give it a try. But she didn't want to be a runner, so she opted for something else: throwing things.

"I'd never done it before, but I watched other people do it and taught myself," Ms. Crooks said. "And I had the basic idea from teaching physical education all those years."

What she throws are the shot put, discus, javelin, hammer and weight (similar to the hammer only shorter and weighing 16 pounds with a shorter handle). And she does quite well for someone who'd not done it before: At a masters' meet in Chelmsford earlier this year, she heaved the discus 71 feet, 11 inches and took a gold medal. And this past summer, she competed in the Canadian national championship and took six golds for her age bracket.

Asked if that makes her the best, she laughs and said, "I don't know, maybe the best didn't show up that day."

She competes regularly in a variety of events all over New England, not just those put on by the Senior Games Association, she said. The trip to Orlando is her second outing at the national games. She says she competes mostly for the challenge and the benefit of good exercise.

"I do it for fun," she said. "If a medal comes along, great."

Helen Wolski Braithwaite, 65, has been at Senior Games competition for the past seven years in cycling, taking gold medals in state competitions from the first year running. She competes in 5K, 10K, 20K and 40K cycling events.

"I first got into cycling to lose weight," said Ms. Braithwaite, a retired Marshfield school teacher. "When my daughter went to college, I took her bike. I hadn't been on one since I was a kid, but the more I did it, the more involved I got."

She bought her own bike and won a race; her kids then bought her a better one for her 60th birthday. The competition bug was firmly implanted in her by then, so when she heard about the Senior Games, she was all for it. She competes in the games in other New England states and has been contacted about master games and senior events as far away as Utah, but said that would be too costly and time consuming.

She's been to the National Senior Games before; in 1995 in San Antonio, she took fifth place and in 1997 at Tuscon, she finished in the middle of the pack.

To train, she rides every day, even in winter, so long as there is no ice or snow on the road, saying "I just layer myself up and go."

She rides to stay in shape and give her focus, she said.

"I'm always practicing and staying in condition or I'd loll around half the summer. Competition gives me a goal to shoot for. It makes you more apt to continue with exercise."

At 59, Sheila (Tunstall) McKenna is the youngest of the three BSC alums traveling to the national games in Florida. The former physical education teacher and coach at Attleboro High School has been an athlete since childhood, playing basketball, softball and volleyball at Fairhaven High School. At BSC, however, there were no organized sports for girls who had to rely on "play days" for competition, days when other area schools would invite girls to participate in unofficial round-robin competition.

She played some organized basketball in a women's league in (Continued next page)

Attleboro when she was in her 30s and later played on a YMCA team, but competition was scarce, she said. In 1994, she was in a Mattapoisett restaurant when she spotted a woman in a Massachusetts Senior Games T-shirt. She asked about it, sent for information and has been participating ever since. Her first competition was 3-on-3 basketball with three other BSC alums, and while they won enough to qualify for the nationals, they were too young; at the time, athletes had to be 55 or older to compete. The minimum age now is 50.

She started competing in track events after that, running 200, 400, 800 and 1500-meter races. With a taped-up, pulled hamstring, she took sixth in the 800 at the '97 nationals and ninth in the 1500.

She got into basketball competition for Senior Games play by accident last year. She was at a meet in Springfield and was shooting some hoops to stay loose when a woman from the Connecticut team came over and asked her if she wanted to play with them. Ms. McKenna agreed and she now plays for the Connecticut Hotshots. “We compete in Senior Games in Massachusetts, Connecticut and Maine and recently returned from a tournament in Pennsylvania where we lost the gold medal in a triple overtime game,” Ms. McKenna said. “We also played a benefit game against a men’s team and only lost by six,” she said. The team has been featured on Amad Rashad’s NBA Inside Stuff. Ms. McKenna will be playing for the Hotshots at the nationals.

“I’ve always run in road races, have for years,” Professor Baumgarten said. “I’d been into team sports, but changed to running about 25 years ago.”

In 1997, he ran in the Massachusetts Senior Games in Springfield and finished second in the 800-meter run. He did it again last year, which was the qualifying year for the nationals in October.

“For me, being active is part of my whole lifestyle, I’d always been active as a child,” Professor Baumgarten said. “I’m not an overly competitive person, but I enjoy the competitive aspects of sports.”

Running became an individual thing for Professor Baumgarten, a way to test himself against no one but himself. He said he ran a marathon in 1995, adding with a laugh, “I had trouble recovering from that, so now I stick to shorter distances.”

He coached youth track for years, he said, and when he heard about the Senior Games, he decided to compete for the first time.
BSC Alumna Named New Burnell School Principal

Lynne Dunn Christensen is covering new territory in a familiar setting as she begins her first academic year as principal of the Burnell School.

Ms. Christensen, a 1977 graduate of BSC, will take on the challenge of helping teachers, parents and students adjust to the changes at the Burnell School, which is now part of the Bridgewater-Raynham Regional School District, while she adjusts to her new job.

The prospect of making a new start is not unfamiliar to her. After leaving Bridgewater with a degree in special education, she taught at an Indian reservation in Chinle, Arizona, where she met her husband, who was also teaching. The two later moved to his home state of Iowa, where they stayed for 17 years. In that time, Ms. Christensen had two boys and worked as a teacher and as principal of two schools.

In 1996, she returned to New England to be principal of the William E. Norris School in Southampton.

"Then this [the position at Burnell] came up and it was time to come home," said Ms. Christensen, who grew up in Pembroke and moved to Plympton while finishing high school at Silver Lake Regional.

"My family is all here and I feel comfortable and at home in this area," she said. "The Midwest has its charms, but New England is always going to be home to me."

Ms. Christensen plans to do what she's always done during her first few months as principal: to listen and to learn. Faculty, parents and students will be doing some listening and learning of their own as they adjust to Burnell's becoming part of the Bridgewater-Raynham Regional School District. Teachers are now employees of the district, not of the college, although the principal remains a college employee to "continue that tie" between the college and the school.

Teachers will likely notice changes in operating procedures, particularly with handling everyday tasks like requisitioning supplies, but Ms. Christensen doesn't anticipate any "insurmountable difficulties." She has said, in a letter to teachers, that "with a smile, a sense of humor and the focus on the children where it belongs, we'll get through this transition."

Ms. Christensen said she wants Burnell to be a true part of the B-R school system, in terms of having the same curriculum, books and standards, but she also wants to maintain a close relationship with the college so that students can take advantage of all the technological and cultural opportunities offered at BSC.

"Where else can children get their hands on a Moakley Center?" she quipped.

She also wants the school to offer top-notch training to student teachers from the college.

"I want to see the potential of this place realized," she said.

To appease his wrestling desire, he sometimes takes to the mats with 20-year-olds "who pummel the hell out of me. So I decided I had to find something else to do."

What he decided on was running. He'd been running for fitness for years but in very few competitions. When he got into Senior Games, he ran the 800-meter event at the 1999 Massachusetts games and came in third.

"I was happy with my time," he said. "I had a goal of trying to finish at 2:40 and I did 2:33."

He is not going to the nationals this year because he didn't start early enough in Senior Games competition to qualify. He will try qualifying for the next nationals in 2001. Between now and then he says he'll keep competing in Senior Games events in Massachusetts and other nearby states.

The Senior Games are a great outlet for him and all the athletes, he says, no matter how old they get.

"There are all age groups, there's even a guy in his 90s out there," he said, adding with a laugh, "Like Sam (Baumgarten) told me, you last long enough, you'd win your age group because you're the only one left in it."

Bridgewater Alums Receive State Recognition

by Linda Balzotti

Two graduates of Bridgewater State College, Matthew Delaney, G'74 and Barbara Bluhm, G'79, were among those honored at the State House in April. They are the first recipients of a bonus program to recognize teachers who have received the designation of master teacher by completing the demanding and intense National Board for Professional Teaching Standards certification process.

The veteran teachers, who received a $50,000 bonus of $5,000 per year over a 10-year period, have all achieved national certification and will mentor candidates working to obtain NBPTS certification or incoming apprentice teachers.

The NBPTS, for certification, requires an average of 200 hours of work by teachers who develop six portfolios of their teaching practices and student work, and successfully complete four rigorous assessment center exercises of content knowledge.

Mr. Delaney and Ms. Bluhm chose teaching as a profession for different reasons, but both have the same commitment and love for their work.

Mr. Delaney, curriculum coordinator for electives and fine art teacher at Whitman Hanson Regional High School, has been teaching for thirty years.

"During my student teaching I saw how one individual, Dr. Eldon Katter, current president of the National Art Education Association, was able to instill in his students a love of learning. He had the most serious impact on my becoming a teacher," said Mr. Delaney. "I became a teacher because I thought I could make a difference in the lives of my students and I believe now that is true."

Ms. Bluhm, a visual art educator at Silver Lake Regional Junior High School, has been teaching in her subject area for 26 years and was a substitute teacher for four years prior.

"I didn't grow up wanting to be a teacher. Arriving at teaching as a profession was a process for me. It began with my lifelong love of art and was combined with my experience as a substitute teacher," said Ms. Bluhm. "While substituting, I discovered that I enjoyed being with middle school students so I decided to concentrate on becoming a middle school teacher of visual art."

Both individuals acknowledge Bridgewater's accomplished and dedicated faculty, particularly in the fine arts, for their knowledge, encouragement and experience, which had a profound influence on their professional careers.

Education Commissioner David Driscoll hopes to have 1,000 national board certified public school teachers in Massachusetts by the year 2003. The certification process is a rigorous eight-month commitment that many might choose to forego. For Ms. Bluhm, it was one of the most rewarding experiences of her professional career.

"The national board certification validated my practice as teacher. I learned that I could express in a clear, concise, and compelling way what I was doing in my classroom," said Ms. Bluhm. "By having different peers from around the country read these entries and approve them, I realized that my thinking process was on target and I am proud of that."

Mr. Delaney looks at national board certification as a process in achieving one's personal best.

"As a teacher you always ask your students to do the very best they can and I see national board certification as a way to ask the very best of myself," said Mr. Delaney. "I have always been goal oriented and I felt there was nothing more challenging for me as an educator than to participate in this process."

Mr. Delaney and Ms. Bluhm, as recipients of the veteran teachers bonus award, will be mentoring and supporting candidates for national board certification during the coming year. Both agree candidates for certification have a great deal in common.

"All of the educators I have met as a result of participating in this process are intelligent, inquisitive, and enjoy being an educator," said Ms. Bluhm.
The prospect of taking a test like the Graduate Record Exam or a Federal Aviation Administration exam is enough to fray the nerves of even the most cool and confident students. Those nerves may become even more frayed when students discover they must take the test at a center many miles away, or that they've missed the registration deadline and now must wait months for the next opportunity.

Two computer-based testing sites at Bridgewater State College may help soothe some of those test-taking jitters. An FAA testing site that opened in May of 1998 in the Conant Science Building and a computer-based testing site that opened in the fall of 1998 in the Maxwell Library make it more convenient for students from throughout the region to take the tests upon which their futures may depend.

Educational Testing Services of Princeton, N.J., selected BSC to serve as one of its computer-based testing centers. ETS administers a wide variety of achievement, occupational and admission tests, including the SAT, GRE, and Law School Admissions Test (LSAT), at locations throughout the United States. Dr. Kerry Kerber, dean of graduate and continuing education, said the company had done a nationwide analysis of the demand for such exams and considered Southeastern Massachusetts an underserved area. The search began for a new facility to serve these students.

Dr. Kerber said factors such as distance from other ETS sites (the closest is in Boston), accessibility by rail and highway, campus size and hours of testing availability were all taken into account when ETS considered BSC's application.

"If you're going to be inviting the general public to your campus to take tests, you have to be able to accommodate them," Dr. Kerber said.

BSC's commuter rail service, proximity to major highways and anticipated high volume of testing from the region's many students all helped the college's application, Dr. Kerber said, as did the fact that the school already has a Laser Grade Co. testing center for Federal Aviation Administration exams in the Conant Science Building.

"The Laser Grade center probably helped the application by showing we were experienced," Dr. Kerber said.

FAA tests for various certificates have been available at BSC since May of 1998.

Like the ETS testing site, the FAA testing site is also available to people outside of the BSC community. Previously, anyone who needed to take an FAA test had to travel to Boston, Plymouth or Hyannis.

It's easy to see why the FAA tests are of great importance, but students should know that standardized tests may be crucial to their success in any number of fields. Dr. Kerber believes that tests like those offered through ETS are becoming increasingly important to institutes of higher learning and potential employers.

"We live in a credentialized society," Dr. Kerber said. "A lot of people are hired based on the certification that they have certain competencies and skills. ETS has found a niche in a business sense in administering these exams, and doing it in a very effective and efficient way."

The ETS testing site may not make answering the test questions any easier, but it will make it easier for students to schedule their tests. Students who need to take the GRE, for example, can obtain booklets about the test from their prospective graduate school. The booklet provides pertinent testing information, including a number to call to find out upcoming dates, times and locations where computer-based testing is offered. With a credit card number handy, they can register over the phone.

The students then come to the site at the appointed time and take the test in a small center, like the one at BSC, which they may find a little less intimidating than the large testing sites used for paper and pencil tests.

Once finished, students can expect their test results much quicker than they could from a pencil and paper test. In some cases, results are available as soon as the test is completed. The results can then be sent electronically to the college, licensing agency or employer that needs them.

Building the center required a lot of work from the Office of Continuing Education and the Facilities Department, but Dr. Kerber is convinced the hard work will pay off – literally. He estimates that the college, which will be paid an hourly rate from ETS, will earn back its financial investment in the center within three years of its opening.

Students in Southeastern Massachusetts are already reaping the benefits of having a convenient test-taking site.

"We are excited as an institution to be able to offer this not only to our own students, but to students throughout the region," Dr. Kerber said. "This is a logical role for Bridgewater. We have always had a strong regional mission."
A Bridgewater State College tradition ended at the 158th Spring Commencement ceremonies on May 22 when Dr. George Weygand, who had served as college marshal for 39 years, passed the college mace to incoming College Marshal Dr. Clifford Wood, professor of English.

Dr. Weygand, professor of physics at BSC for 41 years, retired in June. A BSC graduate from the class of 1953, he became a member of the BSC faculty in 1958. During the five years he spent away from BSC, he taught science at Dighton High School and at Harvard University. One of his students in Dighton was his successor, Dr. Clifford Wood.

"He was a marvelous teacher. Science was not a subject that interested me, but because of him I learned to like it," said Dr. Wood, a BSC graduate from the class of 1960.

The college marshal is chairperson of the convocation advisory group and oversees the planning and implementation of all academic processions. The marshal is the liaison between the administration, faculty and students in matters relating to the college such as winter and spring commencement, fall convocation and inauguration ceremonies. The college mace, an academic symbol signifying the official opening of each academic convocation, is carried in by the college marshal at the beginning of each procession.

During his years as college marshal, Dr. Weygand saw many changes. The total student population increased from approximately 600 to more than 9,000. Graduating classes ranged from 100 to 150 students in 1960, now they usually hover around 1,000.

"We had a small planning committee, in the beginning, for graduation. Now we have a really hardworking, knowledgeable committee of twenty people who handle all the details from security to programs," said Dr. Weygand.

Dr. Weygand, who worked with five presidents during his 39 years as marshal, prepared well for each commencement, but sometimes the unexpected happened. There was the time, for instance, when then President Clement Maxwell was approached by a highly excited individual just as the procession was set to begin. The president was informed that a pregnant woman had just fallen into a manhole.

"The manhole cover on the quadrangle was tipped and the woman fell in. Luckily, she was caught at the elbows. She was taken to the hospital and everything seemed fine," recalls Dr. Weygand. "Thankfully, her child was born a few months later in perfect health."

Other commencement day surprises, including the collapse of the stage in the middle of graduation exercises and the evacuation of the tent due to a torrential rainstorm, have added to the challenges faced by the marshal and the commencement committee.

Dr. Weygand, reflecting back on his years at BSC, wouldn't change anything about his life or the time he spent at the college.

"I am very fortunate to have returned to my alma mater and remained here for all these 41 years," said Dr. Weygand. "I take great pride in my Bridgewater tradition."

Dr. Weygand left a large three-ring loose-leaf binder chock-full of reference information for the incoming college marshal. Dr. Wood knows he has tremendous shoes to fill.

"George is just an extraordinary person. He has a wonderful disposition and inspires trust," said Dr. Wood. "He loves Bridgewater. You only need to talk with him for five minutes to discover that. I guess I do too."

Dr. Weygand is somewhat ambivalent about the new course he is taking and where it may lead, but is excited about the future. He plans to spend more time with his wife Beatrice, daughters Sandra and Joanne and his six grandchildren, as well as continue in his role as a member of the Board of Directors of the Bridgewater Alumni Association of which he is past president, as president of the Bridgewater Cooperative Bank and in other community activities.

"I leave with mixed emotions, but I think it is time to spend a few moments sailing my boat, discovering other interests and traveling," said Dr. Weygand. It is certain he will be missed, but the BSC community can take some comfort in the fact that he is teaching an evening course at BSC this fall.
Retirement Dinner

BSC honored retiring faculty and staff at the Retirement Dinner held in May. Those recognized for their years of service to the college were, from left to right, back row, Dr. Peter Karavites, Louis Resmini, Dr. Henry Daley, Dr. Walter Hewitson and Lawrence Bentley; in the front row, from left to right, are Ruth Fitzpatrick, Joan Knudson, Dr. George Weygand, Betty Repetti and Joan Joyce.

The following retirees were honored May 14, 1999 in the Campus Center Ballroom. In total, they represent 492 years of service to the college.

New Dean of Education Prepares for Accountability

By Linda Balzotti

The Bridgewater State College community welcomes Dr. Ronald Cromwell, who arrived on July 1 to his position as dean of the School of Education and Allied Studies.

He will oversee all of Bridgewater's academic and certificate programs for teachers and school personnel including early childhood, elementary and secondary education as well as the professional programs such as educational leadership, library media studies and instructional technology. The Movement Arts, Health Promotion and Leisure Studies department and the counseling programs are also his responsibility.

Preparing for the School of Education's accreditation by the National Council of Accreditation of Teacher Education (NCATE) is one of Dr. Cromwell's top priorities.

"The faculty and staff, working together as a team, will prepare 13 folios focusing on each of our programs that are sent to various professional organizations for review and approval," said Dr. Cromwell. "Each of these documents must explain how our programs prepare students to meet the standards expected of them."

Dr. Cromwell, who just arrived in Massachusetts, is no stranger to the challenges faced by college students and faculty members as a result of the Massachusetts Teacher Certification Tests.

"Most states, including New York where I came from, are demanding more accountability of future teachers and have determined that the best way to accomplish this is through some method of assessment and testing," said Dr. Cromwell. "It becomes a highly charged public issue because people are so committed to their children and want the most qualified individuals teaching them."

Prior to his Bridgewater appointment, Dr. Cromwell served as professor and chair of education at SUNY-Oneonta for two years. He spent five years at Marist College in Poughkeepsie, New York, simultaneously serving in several positions including director of undergraduate and graduate programs in education and codirector of the school psychology programs.

He holds a bachelor's degree in humanities and philosophy from St. Thomas College in Denver, a master's degree in theatre and speech from the University of Colorado and a master's degree in pastoral counseling from Seattle University. He received his doctorate in education leadership from Seattle University.
Bridgewater Senior, Scholarship Recipient, Completes Semester at McGill University, Canada

by David Wilson, 71

Olga Anagnostopoulos, a member of the class of 2000 from Plymouth, Massachusetts, majoring in accounting, spent the fall 1998 semester at McGill University in Montreal with the benefit of a $1,000 scholarship from a Canadian organization.

"Olga is the second Bridgewater student to receive a 'Bridgewater State College Canada Student Exchange Scholarship' from the Maple Leaf Foundation," explained Dr. Anthony Cicerone, professor of economics and coordinator of the college's Canadian Studies Council.

Akihiro Watanabe, the first Bridgewater student to receive a Maple Leaf Foundation scholarship, also attended McGill University.

"This is an important scholarship because Bridgewater is the only American college or university that the Foundation awards student exchange programs to, so we're very grateful for their support of our students," said Dr. Cicerone.

Foundation scholarships are chosen from among those who apply for either the New England-Quebec Student Exchange Program or the New England-Nova Scotia Student Exchange Program.

"The Maple Leaf Foundation is an organization established 15 years ago originally to promote student exchanges between high schools in Boston and Canada," said Dr. Cicerone. "The foundation was an outgrowth of the New England-Canada Business Council."

Dr. Cicerone, who is a vice-president of the New England-Canada Business Council, led the effort to have Bridgewater students made eligible for the annual scholarship.

"I'm very proud of our students and I think our Canadian Studies program is one of the strongest in the United States," he said. "I wanted to give more of our students the opportunity to study in Canada. The scholarship is an important incentive, so we at Bridgewater certainly appreciate the support of the Maple Leaf Foundation."

In Thanks and Appreciation

Mr. Lou Ricciardi is congratulated upon completion of 10 years of service on the college's Board of Trustees. From left, Mr. Fred Clark, '83, chairman of the Board of Trustees; Ms. Cindy Booth Ricciardi, '81; State Senator Marc Pacheco, top photo, and State Representative David L. Flynn, '56, receive special citations thanking them for their support of BSC. Awards were presented by President Tinsley and Mr. Lou Ricciardi, chairman of the BSC Foundation, at the Neighbor's Dinner in June.
What would you do if your kids came home from summer camp talking about the leaping lizards and man-eating blobs they’d seen that day?

You might be concerned. But you wouldn’t have to be if your children were attending the Arts for Youth Summer Program at Bridgewater State College, where such unusual creatures live not in the woods, but in the minds of the young campers involved in drama classes.

This summer saw the second run of the Arts for Youth Summer Program directed by theatre professor Jim Quinn. The camp was held for the first time last summer and since then, the Arts for Youth Program has expanded. Music theatre workshops were held in the fall and spring, and this year will see the piloting of the Arts for Youth after school program.

Professor Quinn said the programs help fill a void left by shrinking arts programs in public schools. “The arts in education are lacking, and the solution everyone has come up with is to fill in after school,” he said. “If that’s what we have to do, let’s do it well.”

To make sure it’s done well, Professor Quinn seeks out talented specialists to teach Arts for Youth classes. Drama specialists teach drama; dance specialists teach dance, etc. It’s a better situation than most kids have in their schools, where their music teacher is often asked to be the theatrical director as well. But that doesn’t mean Arts for Youth instructors operate in a vacuum: Teachers often “cross over” and work with other instructors to create a multi-arts production, Professor Quinn said.

Children can choose from a variety of classes when they come to camp. Kids in this summer’s program weren’t just offered “music” and “drama” — they could choose “African Music Troupe” and “Storybook Theatre.” There were a number of dance classes, creative computing classes and team art classes. Many children not only acted in plays, but wrote their own. Children in a marionette class built their puppets, their theatre and wrote a play for their creations.

This year, camp was held in two two-week sessions; students could attend one session or the other, or could choose to attend both. At the end of both sessions, parents and siblings of campers were invited in to see Artsfest, an entertainment extravaganza featuring the work of all the classes. They heard the story of “Leapin’ Lizzie” and a tale of terror featuring a marionette “blob.” They also saw some creative computing, works of art, and routines from young dancers and gymnasts.

Last year’s camp, which lasted three weeks, attracted about 45 students aged 7 to 12. This year’s summer program hosted a total of 85 children. Because a segment of three weeks seems to be just about right to allow students and instructors enough meeting time, Professor Quinn said next year’s camp will likely be two three-week sessions.

While details of the programs may change, the Arts for Youth philosophy — that participation in the arts is important for every child’s development — will not. Professor Quinn said he has seen a number of children begin a class in improvisation afraid to say anything for fear they’ll be wrong. They soon learn that what’s important is not what they say, but that they make the effort to say something.

Professor Quinn said he could picture those same students in math class the following fall, now eager to offer a response when the teacher calls out for an answer.

“The arts infuse all other learning,” he said.

For more information about Arts for Youth programs, including the summer camp, the musical theatre workshops and the after school program, call Jim Quinn at (508) 531-2141. To enroll, contact the Office of Graduate and Continuing Education at (508) 531-1261.
Spurred by challenges from the state incentive grant program and by a very special gift from alumna Terry Hart Cogan, Chair of the Annual Giving Campaign, total giving to Bridgewater reached a new record high of $1.2 million this year – with an additional $320,000 received in state matching funds. Total gifts were up by 16 percent, while annual giving grew by an unprecedented 26 percent. The state matching program ceiling, formerly half a million dollars, was capped at $320,000 this year due to limited state appropriations.

The extraordinary growth in annual giving bodes very well for the long-term health of the college. Annual gifts represent the essential reservoir of people who care enough to make routine gifts to Bridgewater and who someday will become our major donors. Annual giving is up substantially (see table below) in both unrestricted and restricted giving.

In May of this year, the combined (Foundation and Bridgewater Alumni Association) endowment passed the five million dollar mark. This has been an extraordinary accomplishment in less than two years, and encourages us to look toward a public campaign during the year ahead. Endowment funds provide a vital element of stability in an environment of fluctuating state support. Since the principal is never touched, endowed funds provide support that will last as long as the institution.

On the following pages we recognize those individual who made this extraordinary year possible. Please join us in celebrating these individuals and the sacrifices they made in order to contribute to Bridgewater State College. From all of us here on campus, thank you very much for all that you have accomplished. It was a great year!

Bridgewater State College received a total of $321,192 in bequests in fiscal year 1999 from four individuals. As a result of their foresight and generosity, the college’s ability to offer quality programs and adequate financial assistance to students is enhanced. BSC extends its deepest appreciation to the alumni and friends of the college who provided for public education in Southeastern Massachusetts through a bequest.

The 1840 Society Dinner is Held at the President's Home

The 1840 Society Reception

President Tinsley hosted a reception at her home on June 10, 1999 for members of The 1840 Society to recognize their special commitment to Bridgewater. These alumni and friends have notified BSC of their intention to provide for the future of the college through a bequest or life-income gift (i.e. annuity, trust, etc.). Please call (508) 531-2694 or write via e-mail to m3poirier@bridgew.edu for more information on The 1840 Society.

Estate Planning Event Held at Bridgewater

Certified public accountant Margaret Ferris made a presentation entitled "How Can Charitable Bequests and Life-income Gifts Fit into an Estate Plan?" The event was held in April at the Davis Alumni Center. This was the third in a series of three seminars sponsored by the development office for alumni, faculty and staff. The seminars focused on personal financial planning and planned giving.

Richard Durnin '43 expresses his interest in the college and The 1840 Society to Dr. Richard Cost, vice president for institutional advancement.

President Tinsley welcomes Frank '49 and Dorothy "Dodie" (Szafer) '51 Dunn to The 1840 Society reception.

Member of the Class of 1960 Honors Lifelong BSC Connection With Meaningful Gift

Mary (Hoyle) Mahan '60 and her late husband, Roger, named Bridgewater State College and Cheshire Academy, a Connecticut preparatory school, beneficiaries of a charitable remainder unitrust (CRUT) as part of their estate planning.

"When we were creating our will, we thought it would be worthwhile to leave a legacy to the alma maters that were responsible for our educational development," noted Ms. Mahan during a recent campus visit. "In this way, another generation of students will benefit in the manner in which we have."

One of 17 physical education majors who graduated in 1960, Ms. Mahan recalls that her "only goal" as an undergraduate was to teach physical education and coach. She succeeded. After earning a master's degree in physical education from the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, Ms. Mahan taught and coached at Stoughton High School, Locust Valley, New York, junior and senior high schools, Central Connecticut State University, Miami-Dade Community College in Florida and Bridgewater State College.

Ms. Mahan continues to work at Miami-Dade Community College as a faculty member in the natural and social sciences division. Since 1971, when she and Roger moved to Florida following their 1970 wedding, Ms. Mahan has contributed to the college on many levels. Over the years, she has been department head, assistant to the associate dean, associate athletic director and a varsity basketball, volleyball and softball coach.

As an undergraduate, Ms. Mahan commuted to Bridgewater from her family's Weymouth home. As an adult, she continues to commute to Bridgewater, from both her Centerville, Massachusetts, and Fort Lauderdale, Florida, homes. She is a visiting adjunct professor in the Clinical Education Master's Program here and most recently taught "Effective Practices in Human Behavior and Learning" and "Critical Issues in Education and Society." Her classes were such a hit with students that class members were planning a reunion two weeks after finals.

Ms. Mahan credits her Bridgewater education for her profound success as an educator. "As a result of the educational experience I encountered as a student in the physical education major program, I have been able to transfer skills to students as well as enhance the teaching and learning experience of professional teachers," said Ms. Mahan. She recognized the following BSC instructors for the positive influence they had on her life: Dr. Mary Moriarty, head of the physical education department; Mrs. Barbara Poesep, Burnell School training teacher; Dr. Mary Jarvis, assistant dean of students; Dr. Kay Comeau; and Dr. Jane Herrick.

And now, with the establishment of the charitable remainder unitrust, both the college and Ms. Mahan benefit — "and that's the message that should be spread to Bridgewater's alumni," she said. Using appreciated securities to create the CRUT, the Mahans reaped tax benefits, generated an income flow for the remainder of their lives and provided for the future of BSC. Ms. Mahan conveyed the sentiment that "no matter what the amount is, a trust is a meaningful way to give."

In her free time, Ms. Mahan enjoys swimming, golfing, interior decorating, theater and traveling. She looks forward to her first European vacation, a visit to Ireland, a visit "back to her roots."

If you would like more information about creating a gift that is mutually beneficial to you and Bridgewater State College, please call Michelle Poirier, director of major and planned gifts, at (508) 531-2694 or write via e-mail to m3poirier@bridgew.edu.
Over 150 people returned to the Bridgewater State College campus on June 4th & June 5th to celebrate Alumni Weekend. The classes of 1939 and 1949 had a wonderful time renewing old friendships and spending quality time together. President Adrian Tinsley hosted a reception at her home for the class of 1949 on Friday afternoon. After leaving the President’s home, the reunion class attended an elegant reunion dinner in the Bridgewater Dining Room. During the dinner, class members were installed as the newest members of the Golden Bridges Society by the newly installed alumni association president, Daniel Darcy, ’88. Many remained awake until the early morning hours, catching up on what had been happening in everyone’s lives since they were last together.

All who returned were amazed at the many changes that have occurred recently on campus. The Moakley Center was visited during a campus tour and all were highly impressed with the state-of-the-art technology housed within that facility. The 50th reunion class was greeted with a welcome message. An enhanced 1949 graduation photo that was displayed on the large screen in the Moakley Center lobby brought smiles to everyone’s faces.

Plans are already being made for the Alumni Weekend 2000. If anyone would like to assist in getting classmates back to campus for a reunion on June 2 & 3, please call Candace Maguire, director of Alumni Relations at (508) 531-1287 or 800-BSC-9555 and she will assist you in locating classmates.

The Dr. V. James DiNardo Award for Excellence in Teaching at Bridgewater State College

Dr. Clifford Wood, '60, Department of English

After graduating from Bridgewater State College, Dr. Clifford Wood began teaching at the high school level. He then returned to the college, and has spent the past 30 years dedicated to giving back to his alma mater and helping to prepare future educators for the Commonwealth. During these years, he has long been one of Bridgewater's most beloved faculty members. Dr. Wood has been, to the everlasting benefit of his students, a teacher who combines pedagogical skill with deep human grace. Dr. Clifford Wood is an outstanding embodiment of the values for which the Dr. V. James DiNardo award represents.

The Dr. Adrian Rondileau Award for Outstanding Professional Achievement and Community Service

Mr. Louis Ricciardi, '81

At the age of 30, Louis Ricciaridi had the distinction of being not only the first alumni trustee to be elected as chairman of the Board of Trustees, but also being the youngest person to hold that office. He has worked tirelessly for Bridgewater State College in many leadership capacities since March 1989, coming to the Bridgewater Alumni Association Board of Directors first as assistant treasurer, and then as treasurer. He served as the alumni trustee for 10 years, spending four of them as chairman of the board, and he is currently chairman of the Bridgewater State College Foundation.

The Nicholas P. Tillinghast Award for Outstanding Leadership and Professional Achievement in the Field of Public Education

Dr. Thomas LaGrasta, '65

Dr. Thomas LaGrasta is a 1965 graduate of Bridgewater State College with a degree in elementary education. He went on to earn a master's degree in special education from Boston College, a certificate of advanced educational specialization from the same institution, and an Ed.D in special education leadership from Boston University.

For the last eight years, Dr. LaGrasta has been superintendent of schools in Sharon, Massachusetts and is highly respected for his leadership and innovative approaches to education. In addition to his service as an adjunct faculty member at Bridgewater State, Lesley and Stonehill Colleges, Dr. LaGrasta has also remained active in a number of professional organizations including the American Association of School Administrators and the Massachusetts Association of School Administrators.
The Bridgewater Alumni Award for Outstanding Service on Behalf of the Alumni Association

Brian Salvaggio, ’80, Director, Office of Career Services

Brian Salvaggio graduated from Bridgewater State College in 1980 and stayed on to complete his master’s degree in counseling in 1982. His accomplishments on behalf of Bridgewater are many and substantial. Mr. Salvaggio has a clear vision of what is important for this campus. Through his leadership and personal drive, the alumni career advisory network, CareerNet, and the Minority Network currently provide undergraduates with a direct link to 200 alumni advisers who live and work in 30 different states and represent a broad spectrum of career fields. Other examples of Mr. Salvaggio’s desire to connect alumni and students are the Annual Job Fair and networking events. For these events, alumni are encouraged to return to the campus to engage in discussion with students who are interested in either learning about emerging career fields or seeking assistance in preparing for the job search. It is through Mr. Salvaggio’s efforts that all of this is possible.

The Dr. Catherine E. Comeau Award for Professional Achievement in the Field of Movement Arts, Health Promotion and Leisure Studies

Susan J. Marble, ’90

Susan Marble graduated from Bridgewater State College in 1990 with a bachelor of science and teacher certification in physical education and health for grades K-9. Sue has dedicated herself to teaching quality movement through educational games, dance and gymnastics. Along with her coworkers, Ms. Marble has made numerous physical education presentations at state and national conventions. She is a past president of the Hyannis-Bridgewater Physical Education Alumni Association and served as secretary on the Board of Directors of the Massachusetts Association for Health, Physical Education and Dance from 1993-1995. In May 1999, Ms. Marble received her master’s of education in creative arts and learning from Lesley College.

The Award for Exceptional Dedication to Students

Helena Santos, Assistant Director, Academic Achievement Center

Helena Santos came to Bridgewater State College in 1986. She had been working in the guidance department at Hudson High School. Her experience in a local high school setting made her the perfect choice for the new work being accomplished at the Haughey Academic Achievement Center. Ms. Santos’ role has always been to work with freshmen. She hears about the panic, fear, joy and accomplishments associated with the transition to college. She dries tears and celebrates personal triumphs. For Ms. Santos, each student’s story is important and she exhibits infinite patience. She never directs them to make particular decisions, and she never makes the choices for them. Instead, she gives freely of her time to get to know them and to understand their uniqueness.

She is a champion fighter for students. In her graceful, poised, quite manner, Ms. Santos has extended extraordinary services to the students at Bridgewater State College.
Golden Bridges
Fall Schedule
October 13, 1999 – Museum of Fine Arts
The paintings of Martin Johnson Heade are on exhibit at the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston. If you are a member of the Golden Bridges Society, plan on joining the group for a guided tour of his beautiful artistry. Please call Melissa Macgrath at (508) 531-1287 for more details.

Student/Alumni Networking Events
On campus networking events are cosponsored by Career Services and the Alumni Association. These events bring together successful alumni with current students. The sharing of expertise with today’s students is an invaluable tool as they try to decide which career path to choose.

The first event of the season is scheduled for Tuesday, November 16, 1999 from 6 PM to 8 PM. If you would like more details about this and other upcoming career service events, please contact career services at (508) 531-1328.

Regional Chapter Events
The Bridgewater State College Office of Alumni Relations is planning to organize several regional chapters throughout the country. Listed below are a few chapters that have already had events. If you would like to become involved in future chapter events or if you would like to discuss establishing a chapter in your area, please call Candace Maguire, director of alumni relations at 888-BSC-9555. You may also e-mail her at cmaguire@bridgew.edu.

Northern New England Chapter
Alumni from New Hampshire and Maine gathered for a Sunday brunch on October 17th at the Portsmouth Sheraton Inn and then went on a fall foliage cruise aboard the Isles of Shoals Steamship.

Rhode Island Chapter
Plans have been made for a December 6th meeting of alumni living in Rhode Island and Southeastern Massachusetts.

San Diego Chapter
Ron Piscatelli ’76 has contacted the Alumni Office and wants to plan an event in the San Diego area. Please watch your mail for more details on this event.

Florida Chapters
Candace would like to explore establishing two chapters in Florida. There are a great number of alumni who live in Florida and she would like to start an East Coast and West Coast chapter. It is often difficult for alumni who live such distances away from Bridgewater to attend on campus events, so she wants to bring Bridgewater to you! If you would like to assist in starting a chapter, please contact her at (508) 531-1287.

Mr. Dan Darcy, assistant director of student activities and member of the Class of 1988, works by day planning events for Bridgewater’s undergraduates and now as this year’s Alumni Association president, he will spend his spare time planning activities and events to draw alumni back to campus.

He has been an active member of the association for the past several years. He is looking forward to finding ways to help fellow graduates reconnect to their Bridgewater roots.

“I am really excited about this year’s alumni board. We have a great group of people who have similar ideas about how to bring our alumni friends back to campus,” said Mr. Darcy.

This year, the Alumni Association will be focusing all their efforts on strengthening their two major events – Homecoming and Alumni Weekend.

“Our emphasis this year will be on expanding the programs and events for our two major weekends. We want to include more family-oriented activities,” said Mr. Darcy.

“Most of our 30,000 graduates have families and it is difficult for them to come back if we don’t offer activities for all members of the family.”

The organization hopes that by changing the class reunion focus of alumni weekend many younger graduates will see this weekend as a chance to return to campus and see all the changes that have taken place at Bridgewater over the past few years.

“Many people consider Alumni Weekend and class reunions as events for individuals who graduated 10, 20 or 25 years ago,” said Mr. Darcy. “We want graduates to know that events of interest for everyone take place on that weekend. The association encourages everyone to come back, reconnect, and get involved.”

The Alumni Association, as a way to increase visibility on campus, has reintroduced the Crimson Ambassador program for undergraduate students. This group functions as a student alumni association and introduces participants to graduates involved in the Alumni Association.

“The association also hopes to establish a formal presence on campus to further increase our visibility,” said Mr. Darcy. “We want students to know who we are, what we do, and how we can help them.”

It is clear that the next year will be a very busy one for Mr. Darcy. However, he has no regrets about the commitment he has made.

“I know what Bridgewater State College did for me as an individual. I really want to give something back not just professionally, but also personally.”

Bridgewater State College Alumni Association Hosts Recognition Dinner

Carrie Kulick-Clark’s last official event as president of the Alumni Association was a recognition dinner held on June 16, 1999 in the Bridgewater Dining Room. Carrie wanted to host this dinner to recognize the efforts and contributions of past BAA presidents and to thank all current board members for their dedication to Bridgewater alumni as the alumni trustee on the college’s Board of Trustees since 1989.

President Kulick-Clark then handed the president’s gavel to incoming president, Dan Darcy. See the Alumni Association News section of this magazine to read about Dan’s goals for this upcoming year.

Come and join in the celebration of the African-American Alumni Council’s 10th Anniversary!

Greetings! The African-American Alumni Council of Bridgewater State College is commencing a Year 2000 membership drive! The council is hoping to increase awareness and membership during our 10th year anniversary. We have some exciting events and projects planned but need your assistance and continued support. There are numerous ways to be involved!!

Our newly formed web page will be up and running soon and will afford you the opportunity to keep abreast of AAAC events; connect with other BSC alumni of color or to let us know of your career changes or improvements.

Our main goal is servicing present BSC students of color and to work within the local communities through outreach and mentoring. Your support will help us reach our goals. Our future alumni of color need and request some additional support. For further information such as meeting times, committees and upcoming events, you may contact Dr. Alan Comedy, Office of Affirmative Action/Minority Affairs and Equal Opportunity at (508) 531-1241 or e-mail: acomedy@bridgew.edu.

STAY TUNED AND WATCH US GROW!

Alumni Update

Football Alumni Continue to Support Bears’ Program

Football alumni have gathered annually for a reunion dinner for almost 20 years, on the last Friday in April. More than 100 football alumni enjoyed a morning golf tournament at the Easton Country Club followed by a dinner at the Charlie Horse Restaurant in West Bridgewater this year.

A special tribute to the championship team of 1989, led by then captain, Tom Egan, and joined by (top photo) teammates Jim Mello, Matt Jardin, Bill Griffin, Ripp Charters, Sean Tiernan, Glenn Gonsalves, Jeff Lane, Mark Sarkesian, Chris Coyne, Sean Frazier, Jerry McGrath, Sean Connor, Chris Conchieri, Clint Cabral, Richie Crossman, Jorge Orta, James Shaffer, Rich Weinhold, Mark Goldman, David Adams, Paul Burke, Jack Quinlan, Bill Macri, Steve Ditria, Jack Dillon, and Eric Cedrone was the focal point of this year’s dinner. Also included in the evening’s festivities was the presentation of the Tom Cook Alumni Association Football Award. Ryan Lavallee, last year’s recipient, made the presentation (see photo right) to this year’s recipient, Jonathan “J.J.” Donohue.

The proceeds from this event help support the Bears football program at the undergraduate level through the purchase of equipment and the sponsorship of events.

Alumni Association News

Dear Friends:

Welcome to what promises to be another successful year in the history of Bridgewater State College. The excitement of a new academic year is upon us. Students, both wide-eyed freshmen and seasoned upperclassmen, anxiously anticipate classes, practicums and internships. The change in seasons is also indicative to the opening of the Bridgewater Alumni Association social calendar.

The BAA offers you, one of more than 30,000 alumni, the opportunity to get involved, meet new friends, reacquaint with old friends, but more importantly to reconnect with your alma mater. As an alumnus who also has had the opportunity of returning to the campus in a professional capacity, I can honestly say that Bridgewater State College has changed dramatically since my days as a “wide-eyed freshman”. In the years since I resided on campus, Bridgewater’s enrollment has surpassed 9,000, making it the 10th largest college/university in the state of Massachusetts. Many of you returning to the campus will be astonished by how BSC has transformed in your absence.

The undergraduate program is not the only area of the campus that is actively anticipating the new year. The BAA, your alumni association, is preparing for a very exciting year as well. We have a number of activities planned for the upcoming year, with the highlights being Homecoming (October 23) and Alumni Weekend (June 2 & 3). Along with those long-standing traditions, some new events will include an alumni reception at the Imax Theater at the Boston Science Museum, a fall foliage cruise of northern New England, and an alumni cruise of the Caribbean for one week in March.

Opportunities are endless within the Bridgewater Alumni Association. Whether you want to attend a social function or volunteer on one of our subcommittees, the BAA has a position for you. Another way of keeping abreast to the workings of the BAA is to browse the alumni web site at www.bridgew.edu/alumni. For those of you wishing to sign up as a volunteer, ask a question, voice a concern or just say hello, please do so through my e-mail address ddarcy@bridgew.edu or by dropping me a note at Campus Center, Room 109 Bridgewater, MA 02325.

As the president of the Bridgewater Alumni Association, I am honored to serve you. I know success will be ours and we will be proud of our accomplishments. It is time to work collectively toward the fulfillment of one specific goal – making the BAA the best that it can possibly be.

Please join me in making history in 1999-2000!

Sincerely,

Dan Darcy ’88, President
Bridgewater Alumni Association
Receiving the Bridgewater Magazine is a wonderful way to keep in touch with the college. The remarkable changes and growth of the college, the alumni profiles, notes and information about faculty, but especially my favorite, the class notes (Oh, those juicy little bits of information!) Imagine how delighted I was to read the Home Sweet Home section of the Alumni Association News...this really hit home for me not only as a BSC graduate but even more importantly as a BSC graduate who is also fortunate to be a stay-at-home mother. Ever since I resigned from a child care administrator’s position, I have wrestled with the most agonizing of all modern parental issues: should I continue to work or stay home with my children? OK, so what makes me so special just because I graduated from Bridgewater and have chosen not to work? I can explain. Graduating with an elementary education degree in the spring of 1985, I was eager to begin touching the future for my students. Any students. The job market for elementary teachers at the time wasn’t exactly thriving but preschool teachers were in demand and thus began my ten year career in the child care profession. What a creative and fun way to fulfill my desire to work with children!

Working my way up from teacher to program director to child care center director was indeed challenging. Those challenges did not go without their rewards as parents entrusted their children to my care on a daily basis and often came to me seeking professional advice.

Having read about some of the distinguished careers of some other BSC graduates, I sometimes wondered if I should have been doing something more. Has the degree I earned been utilized to its greatest extent? Have I made a positive contribution to society? Are there any other graduates that might be feeling this way?

Meanwhile, my husband Scott and I settled down and started a family. Our son, Thomas, was born in June 1994 and I returned to my job of child care administrator three months later. With my son attending the same daycare I worked in, it seemed like I had the best of both worlds. Unfortunately, the stress of running a large child care center and working ten hour days took its toll. Although I was reluctant to resign, I felt I was doing what was best for my son (and me, too). It really helped having the support of my wonderful husband who, by the way, happens to be a sales manager – a traveling man.

I know I made the right decisions. Being at home has been great! I love it – playgroups, going to the library and the park, coffee with the other moms, even watching Barney! We have since welcomed our second son, Jeffrey, born in August, 1998.

My life has been touched in a great many ways by all the learning experiences I had a Bridgewater State College. Parenting itself represents its own set of challenges and being out of the professional limelight causes those same doubts about my career to occasionally surface again. But through it all I have come to realize that these fears are groundless. I know that the degree I earned at Bridgewater has been and will continue to be utilized fully. I know this is true in many respects. I know it when I remember how reassured those parents in the daycare centers where when they confidently dropped their children off in the morning, kissed them and smiled as they said “Have a good day!” I know it when I apply discipline techniques to my own children that I learned in my behavior management class. I know it because I can understand the fact that some families don’t have the choice of only one parent working.

Sometimes it’s only those precious moments between diaper changes that I can take the time to write these thoughts down and to reassure myself in knowing that I have contributed to society in countless ways through my accomplishments. I’m proud of the path my career took. I can understand that although the outcome was a little different than I had originally planned, it was still a successful one. I am successful for having touched the lives of all those children I cared for (and their parent’s as well). I know I’m successful from having the joyful experience of watching my own children growing and thriving in this wonderful world.

We all have some difficult decisions to make over the course of our lives, but it’s reassuring to know that your college community can help with some of them. Having been a professional at one time, it is very comforting to know that should I choose to return to the working world, I will have BSC on my side. Opportunities for professional networking and the chance to reach out and inspire others through the Alumni News are certainly most encouraging. I am truly grateful to know this is all here for the future should I need it, but for now, home really is sweet!
The Class Notes printed in this issue were received by August 15, 1999. Information received after this date will be held for the next issue.

Janice Sprogell would like to inform her classmates that it is not too soon to think about celebrating your 60th reunion year! Do make plans to return to your alma mater in June 2000 for a get-together with your classmates. The class of 1939 had a great turnout for their 60th reunion and a wonderful time renewing old friendships and comparing notes on the intervening years... we can do it too! If anyone would like to volunteer their time and creativity on the 1940 Reunion Committee please contact Candace Maguire, director of alumni relations... Many members of the class of 1940 are celebrating an important birthday this year. Janice Kimbal Andrews' children feted her with a party for 40 friends and family. Among the guests were Ida George Meikle, and her husband Dave, who drove from Walnut Creek, California to attend. Janice lives in Livermore, California...

Helen Judge Ryan's children also held a large party for her birthday at the New Orleans Inn on Cape Cod. The event was attended by her large family and her many friends, a good number of those friendships dating back to Bridgewater days.

On July 15, 1998 Loring (Pete) O. Felch and his wife celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary. They are currently living happily in Moraga, California, keeping themselves busy with five grown children and twelve grandchildren... William and Betty Milne Edgar sold their home in Old Greenwich, Connecticut and moved to Palm City, Florida. They have two married daughters and grandchildren who live in Florida and Washington state. Bill's last role was as superintendent of Greenwich Public Schools and Betty was very active in her church.

50th Reunion Celebration
Helene O'Hara Adams is happily retired in Brewster, Massachusetts. Her days are filled with many interesting experiences that could only be enjoyed on the Cape... Natalie Dorman Agostino is retired and happily residing on Nantucket. She is involved in local craft groups... Imogene Brownell Brightman occupies her time these days with duties as a museum docent, as an usher for performing arts and with quilting, walking, travel and family. She remembers from her years at Bridgewater: Mardi Gras floats, freshman week, cookouts, teas in Tilly, big/little sisters, "Laundry tonight? Watch out below!" tap water cocoa, southern gentleman, Doc Arnold and great friends... Joan Bull Brouwer is enjoying retirement these days. She has gone on many trips, the most recent was to China. She enjoys boating, fishing, knitting and reading, and has recently added golfing to her list of hobbies. She remembers Miss Pope and the teas and the social graces to be learned. She also recalls being chastised for holding hands with her fiancee downtown... Marie Vincent Costa is currently living an active life on the Connecticut shoreline. She is active in her church, is a literacy volunteer, teaches a Brazilian woman English, and reads to toddlers at a local day-care center. Her memories of BSC include WAA supper hike and campfire, formal Christmas banquets, caroling, Mardi Gras Junior weekend, the training school and the senior banquet and prom... Dorothy Fisher Dickie recalls Glee Club concerts, working after class for Miss Rand, dressing for Wednesday dinner, fun in the dorm, meeting Paul, her husband, and the "Follies" performances with a great bunch of dancers and Peg Brogi, the director... J. Kenneth Downey, a founding member of the Cape Cod Jazz Society, enjoys reading and painting in his retirement. He remembers the sadness he felt in February 1944 when he left Bridgewater for service in the US Navy, and how overjoyed he was to return in September 1946... Frank F. Dunn enjoyed his time at Bridgewater so greatly that he has never left. He is an active member of both the college's Alumni Association and Foundation, as well as a former member of the Board of Trustees...

Russell P. Fears remembers the premier of "Young Howard" and standing alone on the auditorium stage after the first class of K. Hill's speech course... When Mary L. Fitzpatrick thinks back on her BSC days she remembers the combined Glee Club Concert with Bowdoin College... James A. Flanagan recalls the great ratio of women to men when he was a student at BSC, as well as the devoted faculty with all of their help to the returning veterans... Irene M. Costello Gosselin and her husband enjoy traveling the United States and would like to tell friends and alums not to be surprised if they phone while on one of their trips... Frances McElroy Heney has many fond memories of her BSC days. She keeps busy with travel and her family... Mary T. MacDougall spends many happy days in Brant Rock and says, as a commuter, she spent many interesting times in the rooms beneath the administration building. She remembers spaghetti dinners and Miss Rand’s music classes and fondly remembers Kay Leggett, Jane Plunkett Corsini and Mary Silvestri Callahan, who have passed away... Jean Legg Macfadgen remembers Camp Howes in Hyannis and all physical education majors. She enjoys reading, gardening and needlework... Sister Maria (Dorothy) Murray is still working full-time in pastoral ministry caring for the sick, elderly and dying. Sister Maria recalls the hike to “sand-pit” for a sing-a-long, campfires, roasted hot dogs and marshmallows, Dr. Maxwell, Mr. Durgin, Dr. Kelly, maple sap buckets on trees, walking on top of high snow drifts to St. Thomas Church at 5:30 AM, hymn singing and graduation day... Grace Murphy Nelson enjoys gardening and reading and loves golfing and riding around in her husband’s 1945 WWII Jeep, in pristine condition... Donald C. Nesmith’s favorite BSC memory is his college romance with Frances Burbank Nesmith ‘48 which has lasted 50 years... Doris Hartwell Osborn treasures her lifelong BSC friend, Eleanor Raleigh Trevains... Irene Bouley Oslund remembers Lewis Bay, Miss Pope’s teas, working as a waitress in Tillinghast dining room, Our Town, Glee Club and traveling in Miss Moriarity’s convertible... Natalie Weinstein Oxman takes classes at Wellesley College and enjoys dancing and leisure time besides. She remembers the feeling she had after completing her last final exam and, of course, Miss Pope’s teas... Marjorie Berry Pearson’s fondest memory is of a time when she substitute taught for a kindergarten teacher in West Bridgewater, her senior year. She found from that experience, that kindergarten was where she wanted to be... Berniece Seavey Reed is a hospital volunteer in California and recalls from her Bridgewater memories playing piano in Tillinghast Hall, conducting in music class, Symphony Hall and caroling through town... Belmira Teixeira Robinson remembers Lewis Bay in Hyannis and the thirteen physical education majors... Erick Sargent is retired in Mexico and busy doing charity work. He says he never would have made it without Joan Bull, Frank Dunn and Miss Pope... Leona Liftman Taylor was a member of the drama club, modern dance and kindergarten-primary club. She remembers being fearful of Miss Pope when she transferred to BSC in her sophomore year... Rita B. Fiorentini Tholette met her husband, Warren E. Tholette ‘50, in Miss Hill’s speech class, they have been married since 1950... Doris Haynes Tierney can remember her practice teaching in her senior year. She found great inspiration in the school principal. She would love to hear from anyone who likes to write and keep in touch... Betty Morton Tidrow certainly remembers getting campused for chewing gum in public and only being able to wear shorts in gym class. She also remembers the lights out at 10:30 policy, housemaster patrols and, of course, all of her friendships at Bridgewater... Mary Minerva Tinto is grateful for her life-long friend, Marie Vincent Costa, and recalls devoting many hours to French Club activities, preparing for Mardi Gras, being the delegate to the Atlantic City convention for Kappa Delta Pi, freshman initiation, assigned seats in chapel and overnights in Woodward with Marie... Eleanor Raleigh Trevains meets regularly with college friends still on the South Shore to reminisce about Bridgewater and the college days... Gloria Brogi Turgiss’ memories are of skits and dances and costume making, refinement, Miss Pope’s teas, learning the secret to cutting fractions of pies, walking into Miss Graves and identifying cut branches for part of the science final... Jacqueline Killen Weyand is filling her retirement days with travel. She has many treasured friends from BSC and many rich memories. She recalls the drama productions and Miss Pope’s teas.

Since William Pepe left the teaching profession in 1980, he has converted his part-time job, income tax preparation, into his full-time occupation. He and his wife are still preparing income taxes and have no immediate intentions of retirement. He has five children and twelve grandchildren and is looking forward to attending the 45th reunion.
A group from our class began lunching together at the Red Coach Grille in Middleboro the Christmas after graduation. We often sat in the same room with S.E. Pope, Mrs. Frost, Mrs. Borchars and Miss Hollis. Of course, we were all on our best behavior, manners-wise, under S.E. Pope's watchful eyes. Invitations went out to over 20 people and many were able to attend over the years. After almost two decades of our Christmas gatherings, the event was expanded in the 1970s into a three-day April vacation overnight on Cape Cod that was hosted by Marie Quirk Cheney and Madeleine Topham McDonald. Because we were so "outgoing", the group expanded to include many friends from our own class as well as the class of 1950. Being open-minded, we came to include elementary education majors, history majors and everything in between.

Over the years, our spring gathering included exploring old Camp Howes, visits to Dr. Mary Jo, and trips to the lower Cape to explore new eateries and watering holes. Another date was added to our calendar in August. This was a roving event—Lowell to the mills with Nancy Cordingly Murphy, Nantucket in a bucket, Fairhaven for clam bakes with Martha Cummings, train rides up the Cape Cod Canal, Little Beach in Dartmouth with Nicky Linehan, Vermont to the Von Trapps with Doris Goyetche, gourmet lunching in Marion with Jean Parkinson Briggs—all in combination with three days on the Cape.

Some of the group has come all the way from Texas, Florida and Connecticut—and all across Massachusetts of course—to the August get-together.

A few notes about the nucleus of the group...

Ethel Waters Korotsky '51...is retired from teaching and splits her year between Maui and West Bridgewater. Two of her children live in Maui. Martha Cummings, Claire Peach McHugh and Loraine "Sis" Rossi are delighted to have a place to visit.

Jean "Cappy" Cappaluzzo Egan '51...lives in Greenfield. Cappy taught in Greenfield after graduation until she joined the Navy in 1954 to see the world. She returned to Greenfield in 1957 and resumed her teaching career. She met and married Don and left teaching to raise her family. Cappy is still very active. An avid golfer, she also bowls and does aerobics...not surprising since she was voted Outstanding Woman Athlete of the class of '51. She has a daughter living in the Boston area and joins us when she can, the last time being the Christmas luncheon in 1997.

Faith Dudgeon Glennon '51...lives in Mattapoisett and is about through subbing. She takes great joy in telling us about her teenage granddaughter and almost teenage grandson who both live nearby. Still very carefree, it is not uncommon to receive a call after a visit asking, "Did I leave my pocketbook under the bed?" That's our Faith!

Claire Peach McHugh '51...lives in Hyannis. Claire's teaching career was cut short by her marriage to John and the birth of Lynn and Cindy. It resumed in the Hyannis system. Claire speaks to her sixth grade class about her attendance at JFK’s nomination reception! Her daughters have given Claire and John four grandkids to boast about! She still finds time to head up the local garden and craft group. Nothing is too difficult for Claire to tackle...just ask her husband John!

Nancy Cordingly Murphy '51...lives in Lowell and has finally been able to retire as her last son graduated from college. Nan now sits a day or two a week for her grandchildren, Michael and Brian—yes, more boys!

Marie Larrey Johnson '50...lives in Easton and Sandwich. She retired to take up more pleasant vacations—sailing, tennis and biking. She often travels to Chicago to visit her granddaughter, Megan.
Janet Dunwoodie '51 ... lives in North Dighton. She has joined the Hostess Club and she now has a second home in West Hyannisport. Janet spends time in Connecticut with her two granddaughters, Kate and Sarah. She travels to Florida in February, California in October and summers on the Cape. Tough life??!! (Joan was laid up one summer after she broke her leg windsurfing!)

Doris Goyetche '51 ... lives in Gloucester. She works longer hours now than before she retired - stripping woodwork, building bookshelves and other remodeling tasks. She owns a time-share in Stowe that was the base camp for the group's visit to the Von Trapp Estate. Doris is very involved with her nieces and nephews and their kids. She really enjoys the good life!

Joanne Ferguson Brooks '51 ... lives in Bradenton, Florida and Hyannis. She has retired from director at the Riverview School in East Sandwich and spends her time migrating from North to South and back again. As the saying goes, you can take the girl off the Cape, but you can't take the Cape out of the girl.

Rhoda "Nicky" Leonard Linehan '50 ... lives in Norwood. Nicky is a wonder. Though only a lowly social science major, she has honored herself by being a cup-winning golfer. She almost fell off our mailing list because of her many engagements. When she is free, Nicky thoroughly enjoys her grandchildren given to her by her son, Mark, and daughter, Maggie.

Martha Cummings '51 ... lives in Fairhaven. Martha is retired from an exemplary career at UMass Boston. She is deeply involved in civic activities in her hometown. The Historical Society has been her love through the years and she is still planning projects for the future. Martha's extensive travels have included Maui, England, Europe, Mallorca, Panama as well as the continental United States.

Harriet Royce '51 ... lives in Wales. After a rewarding teaching career, Harriet is now involved in senior activities and housing in her area. She even once ventured "across the pond" and paid us a visit on Cape Cod.

Marie Quirk Cheney '51 ... lives in Sagamore Beach. Marie taught for many years, raised two sons and a daughter, became a child advocate for special needs programs, and then launched a second career - a cleaning business! Her many employees keep her busy, but her several grandchildren take precedence over all else.

Janet Dunwoodie '51 ... lives in Middleboro. Janet spent many years in guidance at the Paul Dever School in Taunton. She "hit the road" after retirement, traveling South and West, but seldom misses our get-togethers.

Lorraine "Sis" Rossi '51 ... lives in Hingham. Sis first taught in Boston, but then set her sights on the military. After climbing to the rank of (1st WAC – Adjudant General) Colonel, she retired from her final post in Washington, D.C. Family brought her back to our area and Sis settled in Hingham. Her volunteer work and travel schedule keeps her busier than ever!

Madeleine Topham McDonald '51 ... lives in Marshfield. After teaching for 10 years, she and her husband, Joe, settled in Marshfield to raise their two sons, Scot and Reed. A volunteer in the community for many years, Madeleine joined the real estate field and now operates her own agency there. Cape Cod is a second home and she and Joe enjoy their two grandchildren who make their home "up the dirt road."

Others that come when schedule allows...

Ruth Alice Ottman '51 ... lives in Attleboro. Ruth Alice taught physical education in her hometown until her retirement. She and her husband raised three children, a son now in New York, another son in Attleboro and a daughter in New Hampshire. Ruth Alice is constantly on the run with her family and community activities and of course, her golfing is paramount!

Audrey Roshe Gough '51 ... lives in Windsor, Connecticut. Can you believe it? Audrey is so secure she brought her husband Ray! Not many guys would come to such a gathering - guess Audrey lucked out! All kidding aside, Ray's brother lives on the Cape and they combine their social calendar. Audrey works(ed) outside education and loved it! She and Ray enjoy their grandchildren even more than their own! (Don't we all?!)

Jean Parkinson Briggs '50 ... lives in Marion. Jean started her teaching career in Hyannis. She and her roommate, Nicky Leonard, hosted many fun weekends for us all. Jean is a lady of leisure at this time. Skiing, travelling, golfing, antiquing and enjoying the family fill her schedule. The gourmet lunch on the Bay could be repeated, Jean!

Mary Oakley Anderson '50 ... lives in Leominster. Mary is our mad scientist! After receiving the National Science Teacher's Award, she had to teach another year to receive the grant. But that was just the "icing on the cake". Mary's family is scattered and since retiring, there are no holds...off to Europe, Illinois, Maine and who knows where next!

Rita Loughlin Scudder '50 ... lives in Watertown. Rita recently rejoined our group. Family, teaching and hobbies have kept her very busy. After many years of absence, nothing has changed...shape, height...well, maybe coloring!

Marion Haley '50 ... lived in Cotuit and Florida. Marion passed away in January 1998. Her career in Sharon ended with a great party, which we all attended. Marion loved a good time and was blessed with a great heart. No one passed Marion's door without a warm welcome and meal. Through many years of discomfort, Marion always gave to others. She
The seeds of our friendships were sown at Bridgewater State College and have continued to blossom over the past 52 years. The harvest is yet to be reaped, even though the fading time has begun!

From 1947, at the campus, on Cape Cod as summer workers, students at Camp Howes, our commitment to each other has strengthened through the years. We have shared our work, our families and friends to stay in tune with all our lives.

Bridgewater State College was - is - and always shall be remembered as the greatest catalyst in our lives. As the song goes, “you’ve dropped your anchor deep in our hearts.”

was one of our mainstays and will be sorely missed.

Barbara Ann “B.A.” Holub LaCambria ’51...lived in Milton. B.A. passed away in April, 1998. She loved the college and teaching. She retired in 1983 having taught in Milton for twenty-eight years. She and her husband, Frank, traveled and enjoyed life until recent years when her poor health kept her close to home. Though she was unable to join us physically, she kept in touch with her newsletters that will be missed by all.

Mari Lou Williams Rios ’51...lived and taught in Westfield. Mari Lou passed away in January 1983. Prior to marrying Alfred, Mary Lou served as a civilian attached to the Army Special Services. She was stationed in Germany and was in charge of leisure and recreational activities for the troops and their families. Mari Lou was able to join us for one of our April gatherings years ago. We were all saddened to hear of the passing of such a calm and gentle lady.

Maude Chase Wilkinson ’51...lived in Eastham. Although an English major, Maude started teaching in Greenfield in the lower grades. She returned to Eastham (her roots) and retired from the Harwich system after thirty some odd years. A true Cape Codder, Maude seldom ventured over the bridge. Maude passed away at a much too young age in 1992.

Virginia “Ginger” Smith MacLeay ’51...lives in San Antonio, Texas. After graduating, Ginger taught in Westport. She left for Indiana University to further her knowledge (MA) and to sharpen her tap dancing skills (her only B grade at BrH2O). This accomplished, Jesse changed her whole future. After many years of sharing her life with us by mail, Ginger was able to drop by for one more of our summer get-togethers. Her family lives in Texas where her husband, Jesse, retired from the college after many years as the athletic director. Their boys have followed in their parents’ athletic-loving footsteps. Ginger’s activities are too numerous to list – she never wants for something to do – always on the run. As grandparents, Jesse and Ginger have a lot of love to give!

Dorothy “Dodie” Szafer Dunn ’51...lives in Bridgewater and on a golf course in Florida. Dodie retired from teaching in the Bridgewater schools. She and her husband, Frank (also a Bridgewater alum), have traveled the world by car, plane and boat (including a freighter). Their most recent trip was to the Galapagos Islands. All the travelling hasn’t interfered with their continuing support of the college or their work with the Alumni Association.

Jane Cliggot Fisher ’51...lives in Poughkeepsie, New York. Jane taught in Massachusetts for 10 years. Then onto New York where she was a teacher/librarian in Newburg for 25 years. Jane is currently active with various committees: Planned Parenthood, Vassar Art Gallery, and President of Retired Teachers. Totally involved with her four children, Jane plans to return to her roots, Cape Cod, in the near future.

Lois Powers Arnold ’51...lives in Gloucester. After teaching four years in a public school, Lois shifted to a private school, team teaching half days until retirement forty plus years later. After raising three children, Lois keeps busy reading, walking, catching up with old friends and visiting her grandchildren in New Hampshire.

Pauline Pifko Amaral ’50...lives in Fairhaven. Pif retired from the New Bedford school system after teaching physical education for many years. She enjoys travelling to Texas on occasion to visit family.

Virginia (Peg) Stetson Allen ’51...lives in Frogmore, South Carolina. Peg started out in Falmouth as Don worked in Woods Hole. After many years in South Florida, they chose Frogmore for their retirement. One of their children lives in Alaska – so guess where the travelling shoes take them? Peg does return to Fairhaven regularly to visit friends and family. We always find that visiting is as natural as meeting in the “butt room” at Wood Hall – nothing ever changes!

Robert F. Murphy, principal of the Chace Street School in Somerset for the past 25 years, has retired. He plans on spending his newly found free time cooking and fishing... Robert Vincent Fay will have his name honored in the non-fiction section of the new Thayer Public Library in Braintree. Fay, a student at BSC, was 25 years old when he was killed in an automobile accident in 1964, leaving behind a wife and three children. While at BSC he played football and was president of the Alpha Upsilon fraternity. The fraternity, under Fay's leadership, was able to raise enough money to purchase its first house on-campus. Fay wanted to become a history teacher. He was a lover of history and current events and so his daughter, Kerri MacKenzie Eck, thought that the non-fiction section of the library would be a very appropriate place to honor her father. The Thayer Public Library is currently under construction and with the help of Kerri and her family will be able to house a bountiful selection of non-fiction materials as well as a fitting memorial to Robert Vincent Fay.

If anyone would like to volunteer their time and creativity on the 1975 Reunion Committee please contact Candace Maguire, director of alumni relations... The Office of Alumni Relations is looking for Karen F. O’Rourke. A class ring has been found with her name on it... Lee A. McNeany is very busy these days. She is a health and physical educator in the North Brookfield School System. Along with these duties she is also the school’s curriculum coordinator.
Lee dedicates a lot of her time getting across to students a message of healthy living. She stresses drug and alcohol awareness, accentuates the dangers of tobacco use and works with organizations such as the American Cancer Society to bring programs like the 1999 American Cancer Society Daffodil Days fund-raiser to the North Brookfield public schools... Paul Carroll is keeping busy these days teaching sixth grade social studies in Norwood, Massachusetts, coaching varsity basketball at Medway High School, junior varsity baseball at Foxboro High School and is certified as a guidance counselor, K-12, an elementary principal and an assistant principal, K-8. Paul is also very active in curriculum planning. He has rewritten Norwood’s social studies curriculum to align it with the statewide curriculum frameworks... Paul R. Cooper has been named director of staffing for National Grange Mutual Insurance Company, in Keene, New Hampshire. He is now responsible for the management and development of all corporate and field recruitment. He will also provide the Information Technology Department with human resources and organizational development support.

Elizabeth Fish is an extremely busy woman these days. She is in her seventh year in charge of special education in the Hingham public schools. Along with these responsibilities, she is also the department head for guidance and school nurses and the “504 plan” coordinator. Elizabeth faces many challenges in her field of special education and according to her colleagues, is very good at what she does... Tim and Maryanne Lally Sullivan live in Sandwich. They have two children: Maura, 9 and Luke, 11. They will be restoring their home forever while they enjoy coaching the kids’ soccer and basketball games. Tim is a senior sales representative for Hubbell Inc. and Maryanne is an inclusion special education teacher for the Sandwich public schools. If anyone is on the Cape, they welcome you to look them up...
