Dear Alumni, Parents and Friends,

This issue of Bridgewater Magazine goes to press only days after the horrific terrorist attack on our nation. Our thoughts and prayers at this time are with all those who suffered as a result of these terrible events and with their relatives, friends and neighbors. As many already know, that includes William Hunt, a BSC graduate of the class of 1992, who was reported missing in the World Trade Center explosion.

On campus, as everywhere else in America, people struggle to cope with this situation. But each of us feels strongly the obligation and the desire to keep moving forward. In keeping with that spirit, I will share briefly with you pertinent information about the college as the fall 2001 semester opened:

- As a result of Bridgewater’s rising reputation for academic excellence, and a new requirement establishing a minimum 3.0 high school grade point average for regular admission candidates, the number of applicants denied admission to Bridgewater this year increased by 21%. There is an even more dramatic statistic: fully 43% of the students admitted to Bridgewater in September 1999 no longer meet the college’s regular admissions standards.

- Meanwhile, the number of transfer students from other colleges and universities applying to Bridgewater continues to grow. The college enrolled 11% more transfer students this year than last year.

- Bridgewater opened the fall semester with two new academic programs—a bachelor of science and a master of science in criminal justice. We expect both of these programs to address a long-standing need in this region of the state to prepare students for careers in this field. A new interdisciplinary Irish-American Studies minor, a joint initiative with Massasoit Community College, is also being offered for the first time this fall.

- The single largest capital construction program in Bridgewater’s history continues this fall. In total, the state has appropriated more than $71 million to this effort. These projects include:
  - A new 300-bed residence hall is on schedule to open next September;
  - Adjacent to the new residence hall, a new 700-seat dining facility is on schedule to be completed next summer with occupancy in the fall;
  - A new $16 million field house is scheduled to open next fall. The 85,000 square foot facility will house both academic and athletic programs and provide a fully equipped state-of-the-art fitness center for our students, faculty and staff.
  - The renovation of Harrington Hall has begun. Completion is expected in mid-fall 2002, with opening scheduled for spring semester 2003. Harrington Hall will become the home for the School of Management and Aviation Science;
  - In spring 2002, work will begin on a new operations center to house our facilities, central receiving and campus police departments, with completion expected late fall 2002.

- Turning to technology, for the second year in a row Bridgewater has been included in Yahoo’s Internet Life Magazine among the “Top 100 Wired Colleges in America.” The September 2001 edition ranked Bridgewater 50th in the nation—a major advance over last year when the college was ranked 98th. In Massachusetts, Bridgewater was the only public college or university chosen for the list. Two private institutions from the state were also selected—M.I.T. (5) and Harvard University (56).

This summer, the college received two grants totaling nearly a million dollars to fund technology for teaching and learning. With this funding, we have installed a wireless network across 100% of the campus, to every building, office, classroom and residence hall and outdoors as well. Bridgewater is today one of the first and largest campuses in New England to offer wireless networking everywhere.

- Finally, as I prepare to leave the presidency of Bridgewater next June after 13 years in office, I want to ensure that the all-important Campaign for Bridgewater reaches its $10 million goal by June 2002. As we enter the final phase of the campaign, I urge all you to help us reach this goal by making your donation now to the Campaign for Bridgewater.

In these difficult and challenging times for America, I am impressed every day as I enter Boyden Hall and see the plaques on the building’s walls which celebrate the bravery, and in many cases, the ultimate sacrifices, of our students, faculty and alumni who served in uniform during times of conflict. One dates back more than 140 years, to the start of the Civil War.

Now it is the turn of our generation to be resolute and determined in the face of threat and danger from democracy’s most determined opponents. Like you, I have every confidence in the ability of our people, our country and our friends around the world to safeguard humanity.

Sincerely,

Adrian Tinsley

BSC Reaches Into the Greater Community to Teach, Assist and Support Others

Tim Lang, '02, learned one of his most important lessons outside the classroom. It was the kind of lesson that sticks with students long after they have stashed away their diploma. It was a lesson about life.

"This program helped solidify my faith that things are being done for others, and that any little contribution I can make will make a difference," he said. "I had such a good time that I'm looking into the Americorp program, doing disaster relief, working with the poor."

Mr. Lang was one of 10 students who spent spring break building a house for a low-income family in the Miami-area community of Florida City. The Office of Student Activities has been sending students around the country to help with the Habitat for Humanity project for six years, as one of the many outreach programs at Bridgewater State College.

Through these community- and service-based programs, students help children with disabilities strengthen uncooperative muscles. Others participate in clean-up days at a local pond or tutor elementary school students struggling to read. Some students dispense a sense of confidence and self-worth as they encourage youngsters to pursue a college education, or open up children's eyes to the wonderful world of science.

Each spring break, two BSC groups head out to do good deeds. Michael McKenna, who had served as acting program coordinator for the Students Activities Office, said about 30 students generally apply for the Habitat program. A core group of 10 is selected based on their ability to work together. To pay for their trip—lodging, airfare, food, and such—as well as assist with building materials, the group must raise about $7,000. This year's troupe outdid themselves, he said, raising $13,000 from businesses and friends within Bridgewater and their home communities.

Once on site, the BSC students joined college students and other volunteers from all over the country in building houses for low-income families. A house supervisor with construction experience showed the students what to do, and everyone pitched in. Some people might discount the construction efforts of a bunch of students, but Mr. McKenna said after a hurricane, many of the houses left standing are Habitat houses.
BSC students work on roof of Habitat for Humanity house in Florida.

Mr. McKenna has seen the positive impact the program has on the students. "By doing it this way, by making it a big adventure, it sparks a fire in them that they can carry with them to their communities," he said. "It instills a real sense of responsibility to your community."

The students who spend spring break with Sister Mary Ellen Dow and Father Lawrence Jerge, campus ministers at the Catholic Center would agree. Each year, Sister Mary Ellen and Father Larry lead a group of between eight and 10 students into a community of poverty to help others. One year, the students ran an after-school program for little ones in Mexico. Another time, students helped to build and refurbish homes for poor women and tutor inner city children in Cincinnati.

This spring the group found itself in Phoenix at the Andre House of Hospitality, serving more than 500 meals a night to the homeless. The students lived and worked with the regular volunteers, hearing both their stories and the stories of the poor in dire straits.

"The students go in with the stereotype of the poor as lazy and shiftless," Sister Mary Ellen said. "Then they look into their eyes, realize the unforeseen circumstances that causes this to happen, learn about addiction. The students knew they had something to offer, but they didn't know how much they would learn from the poor."

The Catholic Center program also functions on another level, by encouraging the students to build a Christian community amongst themselves. Service and community building help the students become better, more caring individuals with a good sense of their own giftedness, she said.

"Our perspective is that because of faith and spirituality we are called to be of service," Sister Mary Ellen said. "Life takes on new meaning when we brush up against those less fortunate than ourselves."

Melissa Morad, '96, who participated in the alternative spring break program her senior year under the direction of Father John Denning, echoes Sister Mary Ellen's words when recalling her own experience helping to build a house in Georgetown, S.C. Ms. Morad now works as a pre-law adviser at Boston University and has completed the Ed.M. program there as well. She said her experience in South Carolina was a factor in her decision to enroll in the program.

"It definitely made me more socially aware," Ms. Morad said. "I came from a very middle-class family, and sometimes you forget how much you have. It helped me have a better outlook on life."

Students don't have to travel miles from campus to help others. BSC's nine Greek organizations keep busy year round raising money or donating their time to worthy causes. During the past academic year, fraternity and sorority members recorded 5,333 hours of volunteer effort and raised $10,298.

"I'm excited. This is the highest amount raised in the past five years," said Dan Darcy, former assistant director of orientation and Greek life. "Each year they set themselves a higher and higher goal."

There is no end to the variety of volunteer activities undertaken by the Greek members. They make "get well" cards for sick children, run voter registration drives, deliver Easter baskets to hospital patients. They participate in any number of walk-a-thons, ride-a-thons, jump rope-a-thons and rocking chair-a-thons. They deliver sandwiches to the homeless in Boston, volunteer at the Pine Street Inn, help out the Handi-kids, run food drives and book drives and toy drives. One group even cut their hair and donated their discarded locks to be made into wigs for cancer patients.

Money they raise goes to the Multiple Sclerosis Foundation, the National Kidney Foundation, the American Cancer Society and the Make-a-Wish Foundation, and also helps support the homeless and area veterans. Fraternities and sororities have not forgotten to lend a hand on campus, as well. They volunteer to help freshmen carry their belongings to their dorm rooms, take part in campus clean-ups, and run educational tables about alcohol awareness at campus events.
Much of this good work is done without adequate fanfare, Mr. Darcy said. "I am so proud of the chapters and the hard work they do. Yet so much of it goes unnoticed and they just don't get enough credit."

On many Saturday mornings, members of Sigma Chi and Phi Sigma Sigma rise at 7 AM to volunteer with other BSC students in the Children's Physical Developmental Clinic. Established by Dr. Joseph Huber in 1974, CPDC brings together students and children with disabilities from the community in a setting that benefits both.

Dr. Huber remembers the early '70s, when the popular process of institutionalization was falling out of favor. School systems were scrambling to find professionals who could care for these special children suddenly appearing in the mainstream. The Bridgewater program started small, with 25 BSC physical and special education students assisting 20 area children, but has grown tremendously, he said.

Today, more than 100 students from various majors volunteer eight Saturdays a semester to enhance motor, aquatic, sport and social capabilities and interact with 65 children ages 18 months to 18 years. Although other similar clinics exist elsewhere, Bridgewater’s CPDC is unique in New England.

"In the classroom, the student doesn't get hands-on experience," Dr. Huber said. "Here, knowledge and information is in practice. The student who stays with us semester after semester becomes better and better able to anticipate what the child with disabilities needs."

Warm water and manual support provided by Jen Smith are a perfect combination to assure a child's initial success with water orientation skills at the Children's Physical Developmental Clinic.

Along with the practical and hands-on career knowledge students glean from the program, Dr. Huber feels they also benefit through its community service aspect. "They can be students who sit at a desk for eight semesters and be passive recipients," he said. "Or, I see students entering the clinic stepping away from being passive recipients into active providers."

BSC students aren't the only ones reaching out to the community. Through the college’s CityLab program, a number of biology and chemistry professors share their expertise with middle and high school teachers and students. The program, run in conjunction with the Boston University School of Medicine, allows elementary students to undertake experiments and explore the world of science in a way not always possible in the budget-tight K-12 school system.

"The idea behind it is that biotech and cellular molecular biology are growth areas. There are many job opportunities," Dr. John Jahoda, project director, said. "But it's also an area most high schools and middle schools don't teach. They just don't have the facilities."

Instead, area students are welcomed to BSC's CityLab, located in the Moakley Center. Here, in an authentic molecular biology lab, the students can learn about such cutting-edge topics as protein analysis, electrophoresis and DNA fingerprinting through experiment and investigations geared to capture their imaginations.
Through the project “The Mystery of the Crooked Cell,” students learned about normal and abnormal hemoglobin through studying sickle cell anemia. More than just studying science, they also delved into history, math, language arts and social science as they learned about sickle cell anemia’s connection with the rum and slavery trade in early America.

Fortunately, the program has received a huge financial shot in the arm this year from the National Institutes of Health and will be able to expand to include teacher enhancement workshops, an after-school scholars program and a summer camp for students entering the sixth through ninth grades.

“Two things NIH wants to do with these programs: get the message out to students that biotech is an interesting area you might consider in your career goals, and develop effective partnerships between colleges and schools,” Dr. Jahoda said.

CityLab also serves another purpose – by partnering with the local school systems, the college continues to fulfill its commitment to improving education by improving teachers. “We at Bridgewater are committed to the professional development of all teachers. That’s been a part of our mission here for a long time,” he said.

The idea behind BSC’s Turning Point program is to focus students’ dreams on a college education. Karen Johnson Slaton, former director of multicultural affairs at BSC, founded the program three years ago. She realized that if students don’t begin thinking about college at an early age, valuable years of preparation, planning and opportunity can be lost.

Through Turning Point, fifth graders from the Brockton school system are brought to the BSC campus. BSC students and faculty talk about their personal college experiences in the hope of generating a real enthusiasm for higher education in the fifth graders. The day includes a fun educational lecture, as well as a tour of the campus.

Fifth graders may be years away from college, but it’s never too early to start thinking about the future, Mrs. Slaton said. “They are becoming pre-teens, and the tendency is to begin the process of dropping out. They begin to develop negative attitudes and behaviors. By high school, they have created a pattern for themselves that is hard to break.”

One of the most important aspects of the program is the family dinner, when parents are treated to a meal and told the hard truth by BSC staff – most children will not succeed without their parents’ help. Parents need to make sure that homework gets done, that arrangements are made for extra help, that extracurricular activities build leadership skills.

The program targets between 350 and 400 students each year. While it’s still too early to tell how many Turning Point participants will find their way to college, parents have told Mrs. Slaton their children came home from BSC excited about college and excited about their futures.

“Once on a tour we went by an empty classroom. The students went in and sat at the college desks, then bragged about it later to friends,” Mrs. Slaton said. “For one little moment in time we have them. Because of their experience here with college students, faculty and staff, it might be the moment they say, ‘Yes, I can.’”

Another program run through the Office of Multicultural Affairs, Leadership, Education and Academic Development (LEAD), helps about 20 Brockton High School sophomores and juniors attain their college dreams. The students attend leadership seminars and workshops on topics such as life skills and time management. BSC students tutor the high schoolers in math and writing, and also dispense practical advice about preparing for college by serving as mentors.

Both programs are intended to assist students along the path to higher education – no matter which institution they plan to attend. “We are not preparing students specifically for BSC but for higher education,” she said. “All of us in higher education have to do a better job to reach back to the K-12 system to say we support you.”
Nigel Smith, '01, Turning Point mentor, discusses the day's activities with the students.

Students, faculty and staff volunteer endless hours to community service. STARS (Students Teaching Awesome Readers) has been operating out of the Office of Student Activities for the past four years. About 20 BSC students travel to the Kennedy Elementary School in Brockton twice a week to work with third and fourth graders on their reading skills.

The Circle K Club, sponsored by the East Bridgewater Kiwanis Club, puts in 1,200 hours of community service both on campus and off during this school year working with the AIDS Task Force, taking inner city children on a zoo trip, and giving seatbelt safety presentation to second graders. The group also raises donations for the Kiwanis Pediatric Trauma Institute at the New England Medical Center and to organizations that combat Iodine Deficiency Disorder.

Ann Doyle, outreach education coordinator for the alcohol and drug program, organizes lectures and workshops on pertinent topics such as binge drinking, recognizing ecstasy and other club drugs, and underage drinking. Invitations are sent out to parents, police, liquor store owners – anyone she feels would be interested in learning more about these topics.

With so many BSC students and staffers lending their expertise and giving hours to help others, the benefit to the community is clear. But what is the advantage to the college itself? The answer can be found inscribed on a bronze plaque at Boyden Hall: "Not to be ministered unto, but to minister." Since 1888, this motto has guided BSC’s efforts in community service and instilled a spirit of duty and service deep into the college’s collective soul.

Dr. Huber calls the motto "the underlying basis of the college education here at Bridgewater. I see our graduates leaving Bridgewater. I see them as people who are going to be leaders in their communities in the years to come."

The prime time to foster that spirit of community service is when a person is between 17 and 22 years old. A first-person experience in helping others can be intoxicating.

A Sailor’s Life For Me

Captain Foley, '70, Finds Satisfaction Sailing Schooners and Tall Ships

Like all the best sea captains, Capt. Kevin Foley can spin a good yarn. Asked about his adventures, he’ll unleash a cascade of stories – stories about Key West and Jolly Old England, of Anthony Perkins and Russian commodores and carousing politicians who must go unnamed; of tall but true tales of Stradivarius and square riggers and history he has touched.

He’ll tell you how precious the light is in Maine, and how beautiful it is to be gently drifting on a boat as the fog rolls in among the Camden hills. He’ll tell you about patriotic Philadelphia crowds as he captained a schooner up the Delaware during the Tall Ships celebration. He’ll tell you about washing down boats for $2 at the Wellfleet Marina and piloting whale watch cruises out of Provincetown and running a surf shop in Eastham.

Most importantly, he’ll tell you how satisfying his life at sea has been. “If I died tomorrow I’d be a happy person,” Capt. Foley said. “I’ve sailed to Europe, the Mediterranean, Ireland, Scotland, South America, Bermuda, the Caribbean. I feel blessed.”

Capt. Foley’s love affair with boats began long before his graduation from Bridgewater State College in 1970 with a degree in elementary education. Teaching was never really on his mind – sailing and surfing were. On many mornings Capt. Foley and his roommates would rise at 4 AM, grab their boards and drive to New Bedford to surf, arriving back at the college dripping but in time for 10 AM class.

When his first career choice as an oceanographer didn’t pan out, Capt. Foley persisted in molding his love of the sea into a career. “I just had an interest in boats. So many people have an interest in something and don’t pursue making a living with that interest,” he said. “I must stress this is something anyone can do. When I started, I didn’t know anything more than anyone else.”

When Capt. Foley and his former wife purchased a 56-footer and began chartering cruises in the Caribbean, he realized it was possible to run boats professionally. He took jobs sailing to Europe, up and down the East Coast, learning the ins and outs of running yachts and large sailing ships. Then a friendship with the owner of the Schooner America gave Capt. Foley the chance to sail the ship of his dreams.

The Schooner America is a replica of the original America, a ship of ground-breaking design built in 1851 specifically to be displayed at the first World’s Fair in England. There the ship raced and beat (quite soundly, Capt. Foley states) 14 top British ships, thereby beginning a racing tradition that would become known as the America’s Cup.

Capt. Foley captained the Schooner America in the Tall Ships 2000 sail. From his place of honor on deck, he heard the cheers and greeted long lines of guests at every city along the tour. “When you pull into harbors in a schooner, people go crazy,” he said.

There is a romance about Tall Ships, he said, undeniable to sailors and landlubbers alike. Being chosen as captain of a Tall Ship – in particular, such an important historic ship – is an experience that Capt. Foley can barely describe. Perhaps growing up in Massachusetts, loving baseball and being chosen to play for the Red Sox would compare, he said.

“You dream the dream, you love boats – traditional boats, schooners and square riggers. On those kinds of boats you learn your skills, how to tie knots, how to treat the rigging with pine tar, how to splice,” he said. “It’s reliving the glory of the old days, trying to keep the past alive. These boats are like moving museums.”

Last spring and summer, Capt. Foley captained a privately-owned 70-foot sailboat from Florida to the Great Lakes. Friends and family of the boat’s owner were along for the ride, and Capt. Foley made the journey as pleasant as possible by dropping anchor at Annapolis, New York City and Nantucket.

He hopes to use the money he made on that six-month assignment to buy a bed and breakfast in Maine. He envisions a life of summers spent trading stories with tourists, and winters cruising boats in Key West. Best of the land, best of the sea. It’s an enviable lifestyle, and Capt. Foley admits just how fortunate he’s been to find it.

“I was in the library at BSC looking up a book on O’Henry, and I ran into a book on Joshua Slocum (the first man to sail solo around the world). I read that book in my dorm room, right there at Bridgewater, and I knew that’s what I wanted to do,” he said. “I haven’t sailed around the world, but I’ve sailed plenty of miles. I feel very lucky.”

Gaines Family Connection to BSC Runs Deep

They might not talk about it much, but the connection is there. Each and every member of the Gaines family - from mom and dad right down through four siblings - has attended, worked at or graduated from Bridgewater State College.

"It's something we all have in common," Paul Gaines Jr., '91, said. "We understand what Bridgewater has done for us. We know Bridgewater has helped us get where we are today. That's just something we know."

It's unusual enough for siblings to pick the same school as each other, and rarer still to attend college on the same campus where their father works. As an administrator, Paul L. Gaines Sr., '68, worked to set up and coordinate minority programming at BSC from 1968 to 1996. During those years, daughters Jena Gaines, Patricia "Patti" Gaines, Paulajo Mays, and son Paul Jr. were undergraduate students. Not only that, but mother Jo Eva Gaines also spent plenty of time at BSC, receiving a certificate of advanced graduate study.

There was no master plan at work here, no parental pressure or impending sense of duty. Patti admits she liked the idea of being close to her father, as well as attending a college where both her parents were "making a difference." Paul Jr. looked at many schools and also considered the military before deciding BSC was the best fit.

Yet, two sisters started their college careers at other institutions - Jena at Mt. Holyoke and Paulajo at Spelman College in Atlanta. Midway through their college careers both transferred to BSC; Jena drawn by BSC's anthropology offerings and Paulajo by its fine reputation for turning out teachers.

All the siblings received BSC diplomas with the exception of Patti, the family "free spirit," who fell in love with an Australian while in school and moved to the Land Down Under. Although Paulajo shared the campus with Paul Jr. for one year, and Jena and Patti were at BSC for a time together, all were in different majors with different professors, hanging out with different social groups, finding their own niches.

"I am surprised all my kids ended up at Bridgewater," Jo Eva said. "They are all very independent. I suppose there is something special about their dad that they didn't think being at his school would compromise their individuality."

Through all those years and many more before, Paul Sr. worked to assure ethnic diversity and understanding across the college campus. After receiving his master's from BSC in May of 1968, he was hired to recruit and assist minority students. At that time, ethnic equality was still a new, and very volatile, concept, and the job was not an easy one.

"Bridgewater State College took the lead in assuring diversity and equality. Those were hard times, very difficult," he said. "In Boston, there were tremendous problems with integration, minorities were fighting all over the South."

Despite his ideological motivations, accepting the position was not an easy decision, Paul Sr. said. He was comfortable teaching and coaching basketball in the public schools in Newport. The family's hometown of Newport was a long way from Bridgewater - one hour and 15 minutes in the days before Route 24, he said. But he had always felt a strong sense of support from BSC, and at the urging of Jo Eva, made his choice.

During the next three decades, Paul Sr. worked to recruit minority students to BSC, then assist them both academically and socially while on campus to assure their eventual success. During his first year, Paul Sr. recruited only 11 students, six of whom graduated. As time went on, the numbers of minority students steadily rose.

Paul Sr. established the African-American Society and PROGRESS, helped students with difficulty in the residence halls, and talked to professors about changing attitudes. His titles kept changing, from director of PROGRESS to director of...

minority affairs to assistant to the president for affirmative action and minority affairs, but his job was basically the same - make sure each student, regardless of color or race, has a fair chance at an equal education.

"I wanted this to be woven into the college, not remain a special program," he said. "Our goal was to have a campus where the students were just accepted as students, not as minority students."

Because of their parents' involvement in the local school systems and Paul Sr's service on the city council and as mayor of Newport, his children had grown up with comments of "Oh, I know your father" or "I know your mother." They were used to hearing strangers' accolades about their parents.

"My dad is an icon. People talk with such reverence when they talk about Mr. Gaines; especially former students. People really appreciate the hard job he had," Jena said. "He didn't talk about that stuff much. Until he retired I never knew." Even though Paul Sr has retired from his full-time position, he is still part of the college community as a member of the BSC Foundation Board.

If BSC is one large theme in the Gaines' family story, education is another. All the family members except for Patti were or are employed in education. Once again, as with BSC, no one knew everyone was headed in the same direction.

"With other families, they go into medicine or law or business. Education was the only thing we were exposed to," Jena said. "Our parents were tough on us in school. We had to do as well as we could. Looking back, it was natural that we gravitated toward teaching."

A 1983 BSC graduate, Jena eventually gave up anthropology for history, receiving a master's in 1985 and a doctorate in 1990 from the University of Virginia. She's been teaching modern European history to graduates and undergraduates at Western Michigan University, and is considering switching to a Kaplan school to teach test strategies to nervous SAT test-takers.

A freelance writer for reference books, Jena's love of animals keeps her busy. She volunteers with the local animal rescue league, greyhound rescue, and humane society, and takes her dog on pet visitations with children at the local battered women's shelter. She lives in Kalamazoo.

It was at BSC in Joanne Wuschke's language acquisition and development class where Paulajo realized teaching was her calling. She had tried different majors, "attempting to do anything else but be a teacher," but finally gave in to fate. After graduating from BSC in 1990, she secured a first-grade teaching job in Newport, eventually staying in the classroom for 10 years. A National Board Certified Teacher, she received a master's from the University of New England in Maine in 1999 and is a third year doctoral student at Rhode Island College and the University of Rhode Island seeking a Ph.D. in Education.

She is the early childhood coordinator for the Newport Public Schools. Paulajo and her husband, Don Mays, have two sons, Zachary, 7, and Nicolas, 6.

While at BSC, Paul Jr. thought he'd forge a career using TV to discuss important issues or perhaps find a job in the mental health field. After graduating in 1991, he worked at WGBH in Boston. In June of this year, he accepted a position at Carleton College in Minnesota as assistant director of multicultural affairs. He supervises a peer mentoring team for first year students and serves as a supervisor for three culture houses: Latino, African-American and Asian-American. He also provides consultation regarding cultural identity and adjustment issues that many students of color face. He plans to complete his master's in education from Bridgewater this fall and is looking forward to graduating in January.

A gifted athlete, Paul Jr. has volunteered his time working with high school students coaching track at Rogers High School in Newport. His team had a remarkable 53-1
Jena Gaines, '83

Ambition, family tradition, a love of learning — the Gaines family has plenty of ties that bind. They also share a love of the ocean gleaned from growing up on Narragansett Bay.

And, of course, there is always BSC, a place that has meant much more to the family than just a school. It's a place where Paulajo ran through the corridors of Boyden Hall as a tiny child, a place where the independent Patti would seek out her father for advice on college life. It's where Paul Jr. traveled the globe vicariously through the stories of students he worked with in the international and national student exchange programs, and followed in his father's footsteps by volunteering his time with multicultural affairs.

The three have followed in the footsteps of Mom Jo Eva, who taught elementary music in the Middletown, R.I., Public Schools for 14 years before switching to guidance. She retired as the Middletown director of guidance in 1995.

Once again, Patti followed a different path. For several years she worked in communications for Chase Manhattan Bank in Australia, introducing the brand new electronic banking network to skeptical customers. She then decided to combine her love of computers and art by becoming a graphic designer, and now runs her own computer graphics design business, working with major advertising agencies as well as in the motion picture and music industries.

Patti's creative success led her design work to be nominated for an ARIA award (the Aussie equivalent of a Grammy), but her design career may be almost over. The "free-spirit" of the Gaines family is in the process of setting up an eco-tourism health spa near her home in Kalkite.

For Paul Sr., Bridgewater is a special place where he made close friends who enrich his life even today. Jo Eva admits that the family's connection has created a loyalty to BSC, and she gets a bit testy when others might criticize the college or decisions by the administration. "It's hard to separate myself and realize it's not my school," she said.

"I am blessed to be a Gaines, attend BSC and be part of something that has been so important to my family life," Patti said. "That was the most important thing."

BSC, in turn, has not forgotten the Gaines. A scholarship has been established in Paul Sr.'s name and is awarded to Black, Cape Verdean or Hispanic students of African descent who are majoring in education and preparing for careers in teaching or counseling; and several family members have been inducted as student achievers in the college's Black Achievement Hall of Achievement.

And there is always the next generation. Paulajo's two sons already know they are bound for college. Picking a school now might seem a bit premature, but she can certainly imagine a day far from today, driving them up the familiar roads to Bridgewater, dropping them at the Rondileau Campus Center and waving good-bye.

Lights, Cameras, Action!

Burnell School Fifth Graders Use Moakley Center in Creative Curriculum

Arthur Slotnick, assistant director for Telecommunications, thought the children would be shy. He thought he'd have to encourage the fifth graders from Burnell Elementary School to touch the television studio's involved visual and audio equipment, convince them to operate the lights, coax them in front of the camera.

Boy, was he wrong. The young students took to TV production like Steven Spielberg to a summer blockbuster. "It was as if we didn't have to tell them anything," Mr. Slotnick said. "These kids have grown up with technology. There really was no fear."

Two classes of fifth graders, led by Burnell School teachers Brooke Doran and Matthew Clark, worked throughout the past school year with Mr. Slotnick in the Moakley Center's Television Studio. The students became involved in all aspects of creating a video presentation, from writing the script to directing the scenes to running the cameras to performing.

As the students learned about camera angles and audio boards and switches, they were also working on writing, science, technology, language and the performing arts.

"This sort of program is clearly part of the Moakley Center's mission, and it has been given the go-ahead for this school year."

Mr. Slotnick said the children jumped into the program with enthusiasm. They filmed science experiments and cooking demonstrations. They put together an "appropriate" school fashion show and read original stories and poetry. They recorded an interview with an elderly gentleman who spoke of going to school in the "good old days." One group gave out the secret recipe for making ooze. Others discussed relationship issues such as friendship and discrimination. One video presentation showed how to play the flute, another explained how to take a test, while another dissected a math problem.

The students were never at a loss for a good idea. "I give credit for that to the teachers for encouraging the thought process," he said.

Throughout the process of creating and filming the video sequences, Mr. Slotnick said he was pleased to see the students cooperating and collaborating, working together, explaining their ideas to each other. Every time a segment was finished, whether the shot was a keeper or a blooper, the students applauded and said nice things to each other.

"There was a lot of intellectual brainstorming going on," he said. "There were different things happening at different levels. Not only did this program address real academic disciplines, but also it helped them generate leadership and social skills. There's no curriculum for that."

Performing Music with a Caribbean Flair

A distinguished group of musicologists, ethnomusicologists, composers and performers from around the world gathered in Trinidad and Tobago for the 2001 Inter-American Conference on Black Music Research sponsored by the Society for American Music and The Center for Black Music Research, Columbia College. The group was fortunate to have as one of their presenters a talent familiar to the Bridgewater State College community – Henry Santos, professor emeritus of music.

"It was truly an honor to be invited by the premier institution of its kind, the Center for Black Music Research, to perform for my peers," said Professor Santos.

An accomplished and respected pianist, Professor Santos has performed the works of classicists in the United States and Europe. Professor Santos, who has studied piano with Arturo Benedetti Michelangeli, Alfredo Fondecaro and Carl Lamson, has not allowed his retirement from teaching to slow him down.

In addition to his performance in the Caribbean, he also performed the Sonata in D Minor by Domenico Scarlatti and the Piano Sonata in E Flat Major, Opus 7 by Beethoven at the East Stroudsburg University of Pennsylvania.

"Music is my life," said Professor Santos. "It is what I do."
Faculty and administrators gathered at a festive reception at the Maxwell Library to recognize nearly 70 faculty members who had books or articles published between 1995 and 2000.

Faculty members Dr. Michael Kryzanek, chairperson of political science, and Dr. Paul Dubois, movement arts, health promotion and leisure studies, helped former director of libraries David Carlson coordinate the event.

The list represents publications of the highest quality. Only books published by university or nationally known commercial presses were included, and only articles from verified refereed journals were listed. The selection process for refereed journals requires an anonymous review process by peers and other scholars in the field.

Faculty members who published books were presented with plaques, and those published in journals received framed certificates. The nearly 70 authors recognized amounts to almost a third of the entire faculty.

“I hope that it sends a message to faculty that their contributions - not just to teaching, but also to research and scholarship - are very important, and that this is one way we can recognize it,” said Mr. Carlson.

Gesturing at tables filled with the books and articles written by faculty members, Dr. Kryzanek noted that the accomplishments of the faculty are especially impressive when considering that professors here carry a heavier course load than instructors at many other institutions.

“It’s another example of this place being a lot more than we think it is,” Dr. Kryzanek said. He said the event gave faculty members the opportunity to learn more about the work of their colleagues, and noted that the recognition of their publications has “really invigorated the faculty here.”

“This is my first year here, and it’s very exciting for somebody new to see this kind of support,” said Dr. Matilde Zimmermann, assistant professor of history. She noted that in addition to the publications listed for recognition, there are “literally thousands of conference papers, book reviews and presentations” produced by faculty members every year.

Dr. Marcia Anderson, chairperson of the Department of Movement Arts, Health Promotion and Leisure Studies, said she was pleased to see faculty members, several of whom are in her department, be recognized for their efforts.

“We have some tremendous faculty members who, on their own time, do writing that puts the college name on the national forefront,” Dr. Anderson said. The library has made every effort to obtain copies of each of the publications honored.

The following faculty members were honored for having had one or more books published between 1995 and 2000: Dr. Marcia K. Anderson, Movement Arts, Health Promotion and Leisure Studies (MAHPLS); Dr. Walter Carroll, sociology, anthropology and criminal justice; Dr. Thomas Curley, English; Dr. Elizabeth K. Englander, psychology; Dr. Sandra Faíman-Silva, sociology, anthropology and criminal justice; Dr. Robert E. Fitzgibbons, philosophy; Dr. Diana Fox, sociology, anthropology and criminal justice; Dr. Anne Hird, secondary education and professional programs; Dr. Andrew C. Holman, history; Dr. Susan A. Mickey, communication studies and theatre arts; Dr. Glenn Miller, earth sciences and geography; Dr. Nancy Street, CART, communication studies and theatre arts; Dr. Gerald Thornell, elementary and early childhood education; Dr. Thomas R. Turner, history; and Dr. Matilde Zimmermann, history.

The following faculty members were recognized for having an article published in a verified refereed journal: Dr. Jabbar Al-Obaidi, communication studies and theatre arts; Dr. Marcia K. Anderson, MAHPLS; Dr. Barbara Apstein, English; Dr. Bettina Atten, earth sciences and geography; Dr. Jeanne Aurelio, management; Dr. Victoria L. BSC Signs Joint Admissions Agreement with Dean

By Linda Balzoni

Bridgewater State College and Dean College have entered into a Joint Admissions agreement, which will facilitate the transfer of eligible participating students from Dean to Bridgewater upon completion of their associate degree program. The program began in September.

"Bridgewater State College has enjoyed a strong association with Dean College students for many years," said BSC President Adrian Tinsley. "This formal agreement between the two institutions, which represents the first such agreement with an independent college, will enhance student transition into our community. The agreement also reaffirms Bridgewater State College's commitment to providing access to higher education for residents of Southeastern Massachusetts."

"Dean College has historically sent a large number of graduates to Bridgewater State College each year, and this formal agreement will further enhance that relationship," said Dean College President Paula M. Rooney.

Dean College, founded in 1865 in Franklin, is the largest private college in New England offering a traditional two-year liberal arts program of study not only to students in Massachusetts, but from all over the United States and 20 countries.

BSC and MCC Collaborate on Irish-American Studies Minor

By Linda Balzoni

Bridgewater State College and Massasoit Community College have collaborated to offer a new minor in Irish-American Studies to students at both institutions for the first time this fall.

This multidisciplinary program, the first of its kind in the nation, focuses on the Irish experience in the United States and Canada, which represents a departure from most Irish Studies initiatives in American universities. The program integrates history, literature, art, sociology, anthropology, political science and popular culture.

"A large number of students at Massasoit Community College and Bridgewater State College, as well as many residents in Southeastern Massachusetts, are of Irish-American descent," said Dr. Conor Johnston, co-director of the program and professor of English at Massasoit Community College. "This new area of study will provide these students with an opportunity to learn more about their own heritage as well as the ethnic experience as part of American history."

The Irish-American Studies Program contains three distinct components: academic coursework, the opportunity for study abroad and cultural programs and events.

"We also hope to tie together the past experiences of the Irish-American community with present activities and events," said Dr. Patricia Fanning, co-director of the program and assistant professor of sociology at Bridgewater State College. "Because of the rich Irish-American cultural life of Boston and the surrounding suburbs, we plan to supplement the program with a variety of public events which would draw upon, and be of interest to, the area's Irish-American population."

For more information on the program, contact Dr. Conor Johnston, Department of English at Massasoit Community College at (508) 588-9100 ext. 1884 or Dr. Patricia Fanning, Department of Sociology, Anthropology and Criminal Justice at Bridgewater State College at (508) 531-2648.

Board of Higher Education Approves Criminal Justice Programs

By Linda Balzoni

Two new degree programs are fully subscribed in their inaugural semester this fall at Bridgewater State College, after the state Board of Higher Education earlier this year approved proposals for a bachelor of science in criminal justice and a master of science in criminal justice.

"Bachelor's degree programs in criminal justice are offered only at private institutions in Southeastern Massachusetts and there is no graduate degree program offered at any private or public institution in the region," said Dr. Laurence Richards, acting vice president for academic affairs. "The creation of both the bachelor's and master's degree programs was motivated by a growing demand for these programs both nationally and regionally."

Both programs, approved unanimously by the BHE, are based on standards established by the Academy of Criminal Justice Sciences (ACJS), which requires specific content in five essential areas: criminal and juvenile justice processes, criminology, law enforcement, law adjudication and corrections. Information technology in criminal justice and diversity in the criminal justice system represent two special themes that distinguish this program from other undergraduate degree programs.

The master's program offers concentrations: the administration of justice, in cooperation with the master of public administration program, and crime and corrections.
Japanese Educator Visits to Learn About BSC Graduate

The campus welcomed an associate professor of education at Tokyo Gakugei University this summer to aid in her research of famous Japanese educator and BSC graduate Mr. Shuhei Isawa.

Dr. Miho Hashimoto discovered Mr. Isawa's connection to BSC when she was writing her thesis about him and his importance in the development of the modern Japanese school curriculum.

Mr. Isawa, an 1877 graduate of BSC, came to the United States during the “New Meiji Era,” a time when many young Japanese came to America, especially New England, to learn about the social, economic, and cultural elements of American life.

Franklin Ollivierre Appointed to BSC Board Of Trustees

Acting Governor Jane Swift has appointed Mr. Franklin P. Ollivierre of Newton to the Bridgewater State College Board of Trustees for a term ending in March 2005.

Mr. Ollivierre is the special assistant for projects at the Massachusetts Port Authority, where he represents the director of Massport at meetings and activities where the agency has an interest such as the development of regional airports. He works with concerned individuals and organizations such as citizens, environmental and business groups as well as local, state, and federal officials and their staffs.

“The college plays an important role in the educational, cultural, and economic life of Southeastern Massachusetts. I eagerly look forward to becoming a participating member of the BSC community,” said Mr. Ollivierre.

Before his position with Massport, Mr. Ollivierre served for seven years as the Secretary of Elder Affairs for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. A 1999 recipient of the Career Achievement Alumni Award from the Greater New Bedford Regional Vocational High School, Mr. Ollivierre holds a bachelor's degree from Boston University and a master's degree from Michigan State University. He is a member of the Collegium of Distinguished Alumni of the College of Arts and Sciences, Boston University.

Public Service is a Family Tradition

Kate Stone, '02, learned the art of running a political campaign at an early age and it is clear she paid attention. She took the skills she learned from her father, Plymouth County Commissioner Robert Stone, and parlayed them into a successful bid to be the student trustee to the Bridgewater State College Board of Trustees for the 2001-2002 academic year.

Her interest in the student trustee position came from her experience serving as a senator in the Student Government Association. She had considered running for re-election to the senate, but soon realized the student trustee position would provide her with an opportunity to make an even greater difference in the lives of BSC students.

As student trustee, Ms. Stone, a senior majoring in intensive special education and psychology, will represent the student body at monthly board meetings and serve as a representative on the presidential search committee.

"The most important responsibility the student trustee has is to communicate to the students what changes are occurring at the college and why they are happening," said Ms. Stone. "I want to make myself available to the students to listen to their concerns and articulate their opinions and issues to the board."
Appointments

Appointments approved by Board of Trustees

Dr. Dorothy Oppenheim was named acting dean of the School of Management and Aviation Science. Dr. Oppenheim had served as acting associate dean last year. A faculty member at BSC since 1996, Dr. Oppenheim will have responsibility for the development of the self-study needed for the school’s accreditation by the International Assembly for Collegiate Business Education (IACBE) and development and implementation of the IACBE Outcomes Assessment plan. She will also be responsible for the CAA accreditation process for the aviation department.

Associate Dean for Student Affairs Martha Jones was appointed to the position of Dean of Students. Dean Jones began her tenure at Bridgewater in 1966 as assistant to the dean of women. She was promoted in 1977 to her most recent present position as associate dean of student affairs.

Wireless Technology Impacts Campus

Students who registered for summer session II classes, along with scores of orientation students registering for the fall, were assisted by staff working on wireless laptop computers. Registering wireless may not have seemed like a big deal to the students at the time, but the fact that wireless technology is now available on campus will have a major impact on college life in the near future.

The new technology is part of an Information Technology Demonstration Project financed by a grant for $529,000 from the Board of Higher Education and the Commonwealth Information Technology Division. The grant was written by Chief Information Officer Bill Davis to build campus-wide wireless technology to support the redesign of three core courses in teacher education.

In addition to supporting these courses, the wireless technology will allow students, faculty and staff to use wireless computers throughout the campus. Bridgewater State College is one of the first and largest colleges in New England to provide wireless access across 100 percent of the campus.

College students, already consumers of cell phones and personal digital assistants, will likely welcome the new opportunities that come with wireless technology.

In other information technology news, the Commonwealth Information Technology Division has also awarded BSC a $340,000 grant to extend the MITI (Massachusetts Information Turnpike Initiative) fiber-optic network to Southeastern Massachusetts via a cable installed by the MBTA. The installation of the cable was part of the agreement between BSC and the MBTA when the commuter rail station was constructed.

Chief Information Officer Bill Davis noted that “The Commonwealth’s largest, highest capacity data network, MITI, had no state-owned fiber-optic link to Southeastern Massachusetts and instead leased these facilities. This meant that data connections for higher education and some other agencies were slower and much costlier in Southeastern Massachusetts than elsewhere in the state. The new grant makes possible much faster and efficient network services for BSC and Southeastern Massachusetts.”

Also scheduled for completion by fall will be the installation of four new technology-enhanced classrooms on campus. Two will be in the Maxwell Library, and the other two will be located in the Conant Science Building.
Alumni Weekend 2001

The rains came, but so did more than 250 alumni! While Alumni Weekend 2001 was a soggy one, those who braved the elements were happy they did!

On Saturday, the 50th reunion class went to the Moakley Center for the taping of a “Walk Down Memory Lane.” Alumni were given the opportunity to share their BTC memories and have them videotaped. From there everyone moved to Horace Mann Auditorium for the Alumni Association’s Annual Meeting.

BAA President, Mr. Robert Carter, ’51, presided over the Annual Meeting. The Class of 1951 presented President Tinsley with a check of $176,000, the largest class gift in the college’s history and the Class of 1947 also presented a check to President Tinsley in the amount of $11,000. These class gifts will be used for student scholarships. Also, Mr. Robert Ryan, ’55, and Ms. Carolyn Turchon, ’62, were elected to the Alumni Association’s Board of Directors.

On Sunday morning the skies were overcast once again, but the Class of 1951 were determined to have a good time on their Sunday brunch cruise to Newport, Rhode Island. Just as they were boarding the ship, the skies cleared and they enjoyed their brunch and casual ride on Narragansett Bay.

Even though it rained, it truly was a wonderful weekend and the Office of Alumni Relations received numerous thank-you notes from those who attended the festivities. It is always a great feeling for the staff to see the weekend unfold into something so enjoyable for all.

Daniel J. Darcy, ’88 G’90

Dan’s friendly demeanor, open-door policy and calming personality were key factors in ensuring students would have an enjoyable college experience at BSC. As the former orientation program coordinator, Dan was responsible for providing new students with a smooth, yet exciting transition college life. A coworker stated, “His service to the college represents the ideal of what every administrator should strive for: the ability to see the potential in every student, the challenge to implement new ideas and creative programs, and the chance to find the humor in many situations.”

Dr. V. James DiNardo Award for Excellence in Teaching

Dr. Kevin D. Curry

Dr. Curry came to Bridgewater State College in 1994. He received his undergraduate degree from Central College in Pella, Iowa, his Master of Science degree from the University of Arizona and his Ph.D. from Purdue University. His career as an aquatic ecologist began when he was a child growing up in Rhinebeck, N.Y., where he spent hours playing in streams, and always looking for that special fishing hole for trout. He studied biology at Central College in Iowa and then his path shifted to fisheries and aquatic biology while he was working on his master’s degree at the University of Arizona. Upon completion of the master’s program, Kevin was offered a position at Purdue University as an instructor in fisheries while he worked on his Ph.D.

He left teaching for a short period and worked as an Environmental Engineer for Monsanto Chemical. His desire to return to teaching was strong and in 1989 he became part of the Biology Department at the American International College in Springfield, Massachusetts. Dr. Curry came to Bridgewater State College in 1994 to develop an environmental biology program. His students have been invited to present their undergraduate research at regional and national meetings. Students view Dr. Curry as a special personal mentor and friend.

Alumni Directory —
In Search of all Bridgewater State College Alumni

Have you ever tried to get in touch with old classmates, only to find that the last directory is eight years old? Well, your troubles are over. Soon an impressive directory of Bridgewater State College alumni will be available to help you locate all of your friends.

The Alumni Office has contracted Bernard C. Harris Publishing Company to produce our directory. Harris has begun researching and compiling the information to be printed in the directory by mailing a questionnaire to each alumnus/a.

Please be sure to complete and return your directory questionnaire before the deadline indicated. If you don’t return your questionnaire, it is possible you may be inadvertently omitted or your personal information will be printed incorrectly. So don’t take a chance; complete the questionnaire form and return it promptly.

Your information will be edited and processed by Harris for inclusion into the new directory. During the months of December and January you will be contacted by Harris directly to verify that your personal data is absolutely correct. Please give the representative who calls you a few moments of your time to verify your listing. If you wish to place a reservation for the directory, please advise the Harris representative during the conversation, since this will be the only opportunity to order the book.

If you prefer not to be listed in the directory, please contact the Alumni Office in writing as soon as possible.

The new alumni directory, scheduled for release in June 2002, will be the most up-to-date and complete reference of alumni ever compiled! This comprehensive volume will include current name, address and phone number, academic date, plus business information (if applicable) bound into a classic, library quality edition.

If you prefer not to be listed in the directory, please contact the Alumni Office in writing as soon as possible.

Calling All Alumni!

Do you work for a great organization? Would your employer benefit from hiring future BSC alumni? If so, please consider encouraging your employer to recruit soon-to-be BSC graduates for full-time, professional-level positions within your organization.
Alumni Association Activities Benefit Students, Alumni and the College

College alumni associations should foster activities that benefit alumni, students and the college. These activities or programs should positively impact each of the above to variable degrees.

For example, your alumni association has nearly consummated an agreement with Liberty Mutual Insurance Company whereby all alumni may purchase house and automobile insurance from Liberty Mutual and realize up to an eight percent savings. You benefit.

Because the royalties your association receives for sponsoring the program are all added to the alumni scholarship fund, our students benefit.

According to U.S. News and World Report's criteria for evaluating colleges, scholarship money attracts more and better students. The college benefits.

Another program under development is our alumni brick walkway, whereby alums may have their names and class year engraved in a brick permanently positioned in the walk, which is part of the Campus Beautification Program.

The Alumni Travel Program is just beginning to gain momentum. Patronage is growing for this low-cost overseas travel agenda. Fellow travelers include Bridgewater alums along with alumni from other eastern Massachusetts colleges.

Our Visa credit card program generates the most dollars. Thanks to our alums for vigorously endorsing this scholarship growth program.

And, the surprising fact about our Bridge–water Collection merchandising program is that the more expensive rockers and chairs with the college seal are the best selling items. Most business transactions benefit the buyer and the seller. Our commercial programs reward you, the students and our college. Additionally, the profits are added to an endowment where the principal is never invaded. The interest and dividends only fund the scholarships.

Please participate in our home/auto insurance program and review our other offerings. You will be investing in the future for Bridgewater students.

Class of 1962 – 40th Reunion
July 26-27, 2002
“Sturbridge Revisited”
Mark your calendars now to attend the Class of 1962 40th Reunion. It is being held at the Old Sturbridge Village Lodge and Tavern. More details will follow in the upcoming months.

Washington, DC Alumni Reception
The Occidental—Washington, DC
More than 25 alumni and friends turned out for a great night at the famous Occidental restaurant in Washington, DC. Dr. Richard Cost, vice president for institutional advancement brought everyone up-to-date on all of the exciting things taking place on campus. There will be another reception held in this area in the spring of 2002 and alumni in the area will be notified when a date has been set.
We thought it would never happen! In 1970, the faculty of the Department of Health and Physical Education first identified the need for an enlarged indoor facility to accommodate academic courses, athletics, intramurals and campus recreation. At least three times in the past 30 years need assessments were done and external groups evaluating campus needs recommended a new academic and recreational facility. Now at last, it is happening!

Planning began in earnest in 1996. Clearing and groundbreaking occurred in April and May. The construction of the 84,000 square foot $17 million facility, located near Swenson Field, Alumni Park and the other athletic fields, will be completed next fall.

For three years, campus committees have worked with architects and state officials to get the maximum benefit for the money allocated. The new building will contain faculty, staff and coaching offices for Athletics and the Department of Movement Arts, Health Promotion and Leisure Studies. There will also be locker rooms; an athletic training room; a 9,000-square-foot fitness room; three labs (exercise physiology, biomechanics/motor learning and athletic training); five classrooms; a jogging track; and a large field house area containing a wooden floor, bleachers and a synthetic floor space for a variety of activities. Softball and baseball batting cages will be suspended above this area.

As the walls for the facility go up, a campus committee is planning the furnishings, furniture and equipment necessary. President Tinsley has agreed that the endowment campaign could include a fund dedicated specifically to the enhancement of the field house and grounds. This would provide funds for equipment and furnishings over and above what will be available through the state budget. To date, nearly $50,000 has been raised through solicitation of physical education majors (1941-2000), former faculty members and former athletes. As endowed funds, the interest will be utilized each year to supplement state funds to enhance the building and its grounds.

Now there is an opportunity for all former students at BSC to show their support of this important addition to the campus. Imagine how the field house will enhance academic and athletic programs. Imagine the recruitment potential as prospective students visit the campus. (This is the first in a series of articles about the facility to be featured in this magazine to keep alumni informed. We hope you will consider the field house endowment fund worthy of your financial support. Please send contributions to Jane Rae Bradford, '72, G'76, assistant vice president for development, Bridgewater State College Foundation, P.O. Box 42, Bridgewater, MA 02324.)

Consider making a gift of $10,000 or more, in cash or appreciated stock to Bridgewater's charitable gift annuity program. You will receive a charitable deduction for part of the gift, and quarterly income for life—based on the ages of the beneficiaries and the value of the gift.

The chart below gives you a general idea of how this type of gift could work for you. Remember these gifts "count" toward major reunions like the 50th. For further information, or a personal example, write or phone Jane Bradford, '72, G'76, assistant vice president for development, Davis Alumni Center, Bridgewater State College, Bridgewater, MA 02325 Telephone: (508) 531-2946.

June 2nd was truly rain swept, a factor that must have discouraged some of you from attending Alumni Day. Still, it was a success. Only six loyal 1936’s gathered at the alumni luncheon: Connie Nash Hartwell; Alice Carr Pedonti; Peg Mahady Boyle; Paul Olenick with wife, Rita Donahue, ’37; Phyl Esau and Barb Albert. Tillinghurst Dining Hall was beautifully decorated and the bountiful buffet was delicious. When Candace Maguire, director of alumni relations, asked the Class of 1936 to stand, we received a fine round of applause (perhaps in amazement that we could still stand?) How we wished that more of you could have stood with us! Each of us received a handsome personalized tote bag and a booklet containing the questionnaire which some of you had filled out and returned. The alumni staff surely made every effort to make our day pleasant and rewarding.

It was good to hear from Dot Bearse in Tennessee who brought us up to date with news of some classmates. A hairline fracture of the knee prevented her from attending Alumni Day. Her letter contained the sad news of the death of Barbara Schmaltz Dorn. To that list we must add the names of Herbert Johnson and Joe Szmatovicz ...

Dr. Adeline Oakley, Professor Emerita 1914-2001

Dr. Adeline Oakley retired from Bridgewater State College in 1982 after 15 years as associate professor of library science. Hers is a story quite different from most of her colleagues in higher education: she was already 45 years old when she entered Bridgewater State College to earn a bachelor’s degree.

Her love of academia led her later to earn a master’s degree in library science from Simmons College and, eventually, a doctorate from Boston University.

Dr. Oakley’s area of specialty was children’s literature and literature for young adults, and she eagerly sought out authors at conferences and national book association meetings to broaden her knowledge of their work. Energized by her encounters with the creative people behind the literature that she taught, she brought anecdotes to the classroom that allowed her to bring the authors and artists to life for her students.

At Bridgewater, Dr. Oakley founded and funded an annual essay contest for students on the meaning and influences of children’s books, and amassed a large collection of autographed children’s books that she donated to the Maxwell Library at the time of her retirement.

Dr. Oakley was affiliated with the Women’s National Book Association and held many offices in the organization including national secretary, Boston chapter president, member of the Book and Author Luncheon Committee, and archivist.

In 1989 she was given the first award by the Boston Chapter and was named The Boston Bookwoman. The citation honored her for “her nurturing, buoyant spirit, her intellectual accomplishments, and her exceptional ability to open the world of books to children and adults.”

Dr. Oakley’s friend, Jane Manthorne, remembers their first encounter some 40 years ago. Jane was a librarian at the Boston Public Library and Adeline was the librarian at Catherine Labouré School of Nursing. “She invited me to speak to the student nurses about current books, quite a change from their textbooks. She wanted to broaden their knowledge and excite their minds,” Ms. Manthorne recalls.

“Adeline once gave me a page from Family Circle Magazine in 1980 entitled The Sky’s the Limit,” Ms. Manthorne continues. “It revealed the 12 characteristics of the no-limit person you could be. Among them: ‘seeks out the unknown; some­times feels anger, especially at injustices; displays a strong sense of purpose; thrills to the mastery of an ever-changing world.’ Dr. Adeline Oakley was truly a ‘no-limit’ person.”

A profile written in 1984 by WNBA friend and editor Marie Cantlon in “The Bookwoman” offered a bright, sensitive view of the many sides of Adeline: her late entry into formal education - after raising and educating two children - and her journey through the world of higher education. Marie Cantlon suggested, and her readers agree, that Adeline Oakley is legendary, "the bookwoman par excellence in the East."

Dr. Oakley leaves her son Kenneth Oakley and daughter-in-law Miriam of Woburn, and her daughter Judith Mazenko and son-in-law Gene of Chicago, and three grandchildren.
The Annual Fund...This Year and Every Year
The funds raised through annual giving at Bridgewater State College represent thousands of gifts from loyal alumni and friends who care deeply about the college and its mission. Many of these gifts are made via our phonathon, which brought in over $138,000 in gifts and pledges this past year. Other dollars are raised in response to direct mail campaigns and personal solicitations. The annual fund totaled over $258,000 as of June 30, 2001. Unrestricted annual giving provided $100,000 for faculty and librarian research grants and $50,000 for undergraduate student research. Thank you for your generous support!

Over $1,500,000 Raised in Fiscal Year 2001
Because you cared, over $1,500,000 was donated this past year from both unrestricted and restricted sources. These gifts from alumni, friends, foundations and corporations are extremely important to the college. Alumni giving counted for almost 40% of this total. Many thanks to our loyal alumni for leading the way once again. See Decade Chart below.

Alumni Amount Given by Decade

Endowment Exceeds $7.5 Million
At the end of June, the combined endowment stood at $7.5 million. In addition, we have pledges to the Campaign for Bridgewater totaling $1.5 million. This has been an exciting year as we received many new endowed gifts as well as additions to current funds. Most notable was the Class of 1951's gift. During their 50th reunion celebration, the Class of 1951 established a scholarship fund for undergraduate students planning to enter the teaching field. This $176,000 endowed fund is a record-breaking contribution! We thank our alumni and friends who made all of this possible.

Class of 1953 Fund

1840 Society
Bridgewater State College
Foundation

The 1840 Society was established in 1997 to recognize individuals who have notified the college that they have designated a gift to Bridgewater State College Foundation either through a bequest, or a current life income or a planned gift. These gifts are vital to the future of the college.

There are two ways to participate in the 1840 Society. First, an individual may establish a charitable gift annuity, or a remainder trust with the college, or with their own bank or financial adviser. Second, alumni and friends of the college are encouraged to include Bridgewater State College Foundation in their will, or as a beneficiary of an IRA, or pension fund.

There are 37 individuals that have notified the Foundation that they have included the college in their estate plans.

For further details, or sample bequest language, please contact Jane Bradford, '72 G'76, assistant vice president for development, Davis Alumni Center, Bridgewater State College Foundation, Bridgewater, MA 02325, or phone her at (508) 531-2946.

Campus and community unite in sorrow, hope

The Bridgewater State College community and the town of Bridgewater united in the aftermath of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks on the U.S. during "A Day of Hope and Remembrance" Sept. 19. Hundreds of people gathered on the Boyden Quadrangle to listen to inspiring messages from community and college leaders and to hear moving music from the BSC music faculty and students.

"We have all struggled to cope with a tragedy of enormous dimension," President Adrian Tinsley (below left) said during the program. "We come together today to remember the victims, but also to hope for the future."

Student Government Association President Donovan Fauvelle expressed his hope that the spirit of cooperation born out of the devastation would eventually change the way the date of the attacks is remembered.

"Sept. 11, 2001 will be the day that hate taught America how to love," he said.
