STATE COLLEGE AT BRIDGEWATER

APRIL 13, 1966

THE LIBERAL LIT is not obscure, declared Assistant Attorney General Charles Long, on Thursday, April 7; thus, another page in the history of LIBERAL LIT is added to the record.

The LIBERAL LIT has been published at the college since 1915. The new qualification, a 3.3 qpr irrespective of class or major, has been established by the student body, as recommended by the Selective Service Committee.

The Selective Service Committee has recommended that the qualification be adopted by the college, as it is the only one that will make it possible for the college to obtain the necessary funds for the operation of the college.

The Selective Service Committee has also recommended that the college adopt a new qualification, a 3.3 qpr, irrespective of class or major, as it is the only one that will make it possible for the college to obtain the necessary funds for the operation of the college.

The Selective Service Committee has further recommended that the college adopt a new qualification, a 3.3 qpr, irrespective of class or major, as it is the only one that will make it possible for the college to obtain the necessary funds for the operation of the college.

The Selective Service Committee has also recommended that the college adopt a new qualification, a 3.3 qpr, irrespective of class or major, as it is the only one that will make it possible for the college to obtain the necessary funds for the operation of the college.

From the opening scene the plot, wit, and romance follow in logical sequence. Armand, a rich man, is about to marry Hortense St. Ange. When he discovers that she is not as rich as he was led to believe, he repels her and leaves her to marry Eddy Price, a rich man. Eddy, however, dies before the wedding can take place, and Hortense is left with nothing. She then goes to Paris to look for her lost fortune. There she meets a rich man, who promises to help her, but is only interested in her beauty. She is finally saved by her own cleverness and resourcefulness, and she wins her fortune back. The story is a lively and entertaining one, with many humorous and romantic moments. It is well written and well acted, and it will appeal to all ages.
