Mass. Leads Nation in New Grass Bill

Massachusetts may be the first state to remove criminal penalties from the possession of marijuana under certain conditions. A vote by the state legislature provisions, the bill would:

- remove criminal penalties for the possession of marijuana by adults over the age of 21 for up to one ounce of marijuana for personal use- allow for the issuance of a special license for individuals to grow up to six marijuana plants for personal use- establish a regulatory framework for the production and distribution of marijuana

The bill would also establish a task force to study the implementation of the new law and make recommendations for future legislation. The task force would include representatives from law enforcement, public health, and other relevant stakeholders. The bill was introduced by State Representative Cheri Farley-Burgard and sponsored by a bipartisan group of lawmakers. It passed both houses of the legislature and is now awaiting the governor's signature to become law.

New York - Bridgewater State Tobacco Bill - A new bill passed in the Massachusetts legislature would require the state's public colleges and universities to adopt smoke-free policies on campus. The bill, sponsored by State Representative Cheri Farley-Burgard, was passed by both the House and Senate and is now awaiting Governor Baker's signature. If signed into law, the legislation will prohibit smoking and other tobacco use on campus properties, including on private property within 200 feet of the property line. The bill also requires schools to provide smoking cessation resources and support for students and employees who wish to quit smoking. The legislation is a response to growing concern about the health impacts of secondhand smoke on individuals and the community.

The significance of this legislation is underscored by the fact that the Massachusetts legislature has previously failed to pass similar legislation. In 2016, a similar bill was passed by the House but died in the Senate. In 2018, another bill was passed by the Senate but died in the House. The new bill represents a significant step forward in protecting public health and aligning Massachusetts with other states that have already implemented smoke-free policies on campus.

The new legislation is expected to take effect on January 1, 2021. The state's public colleges and universities will be required to develop and implement comprehensive smoke-free policies that comply with the new law. The legislation includes provisions for exemptions in certain circumstances, such as in research settings or in areas where alternative smoking options are available.

The bill is supported by a wide range of stakeholders, including public health advocates, tobacco control organizations, and college and university leaders. The legislation is also supported by the Massachusetts Tobacco Control Program, a state-funded program that coordinates tobacco control activities across the state. The program has been effective in reducing smoking rates and improving public health in the state.

The Opinion of the Editors

April 26, 1973

It is impossible to understand, for example, why millions of people in the course of years have been able to see two or three foreign films but not one other. This is because they do not make use of the one available method, and because of that familiar feeling of not wanting to waste time. Although you feel that any one of the hundred thousand people you met on your way to work, for instance, would have found any other activity more desirable than the one you are now pursuing, you are only free from regret after a certain arbitrary time has passed. One of the best ways to handle this is to let your friends be your guides. They have already learned to use their time in a more efficient manner.

For the Weekend.

Plans for the "Weekend for Development" on April 26 and 28 are well under way. For the next two months the Young World Development Group has been organizing the educational and front-running weekend, which will involve Bridgewater State College, East Bridgewater and Raynham.

In place of the "Rights for the Young" weekend, the Young World Development group is planning a "Weekend for Development." The weekend will consist of fifty events, with thirty events to be held at each of the schools. The events will take place during the evening hours and will begin at 7:00 p.m. Events include: concerts, dances, student forums, and art exhibits. A representative from the Federal Student Service will be invited as a guest speaker on campus Monday, May 28, 1973. For more information about these activities, please contact the President, Mr. and Mrs. O'Brian, or the Vice-President, Mr. and Mrs. McNine. Students interested in participating in any of the events should contact the President, Mr. and Mrs. O'Brian, or the Vice-President, Mr. and Mrs. McNine. Easter Bunny

By Frank Botta

Well, anyway, on this lovely spring day a couple of weeks ago, I noticed our neighbor's backyard was hopping with all sorts of exciting things. I thought, "Oh, yes, it must be Easter bunny time again!"

"I do not have a plan," said the bunny, "I shall just see what happens." And so the Easter bunny decided to visit the neighborhood again.

The bunny hopped up to the door of the house and said, "Hello, Mr. Smith! May I come in?"

Mr. Smith opened the door and said, "Oh, hello, little bunny. Come in and have some carrots."

The bunny thanked Mr. Smith and continued on its way. It hopped to the next house and knocked on the door.

"Hello, little bunny," said Mrs. Johnson. "May I come in?"

The bunny replied, "Yes, please come in. I have brought you some carrots." Mrs. Johnson was delighted and offered the bunny a glass of milk.

"Thank you, little bunny," said Mrs. Johnson. "You are always welcome in our home." The bunny hopped away, feeling happy and content.

The bunny hopped through the neighborhood, visiting all the homes and spreading happiness. Everywhere it went, people were happy to see the Easter bunny and smiled at it.

The bunny continued on its way, hopped into the schoolyard, and even hopped into the local park. Everywhere it went, people were happy to see the Easter bunny and smiled at it.

The bunny hopped back to its own home and settled down for a well-deserved nap. It had had a very busy day, but it felt happy and content. It knew that it had brought joy to many people and that was what mattered.

Marlon Brando danced with long glistening steps in Fords with Merv. His old friend, who has been in the early stages of a health problem, was elated to see him. Brando's long legs and youthful, athletic physique were admired by many. The audience was filled with admiration and respect for his continued presence on stage.

He worked as a pitch-fixer before his father offered him a job on the "Magic Flute," which was considered as a major opportunity. The "Magic Flute" was a major success and helped Brando gain popularity. He worked with a wide range of directors and actors, including Charlie Chaplin, Elia Kazan, and Orson Welles. His performances were praised for their depth and range, and he became a household name.

For his role in "A Streetcar Named Desire," Brando was nominated for an Academy Award for Best Actor. Although he did not win the award, his performance was widely praised and helped establish him as one of the most talented and versatile actors of his generation.

In the late 1970s, Brando began to focus more on his own production company, Brando Productions, which produced a number of successful films. He continued to act in a number of films throughout the 1980s and 1990s, but his later work was criticized for being less successful.

Marlon Brando passed away in 2004, leaving behind a legacy as one of the most influential and beloved actors of all time. His contributions to the film industry and his dedication to his craft will be remembered for generations to come.
Jerry Rockwood - Edgar Allen Poe

The strange genius of one of America's most noted authors will present the Barter Theater Award winning play "Condition of Shadow" sponsored by the University's Cultural Enrichment Program. The performance is set for noon, Saturday, June 15.

According to Mr. Rockwood, the performance is not simply a "reading" of Poe's works, but a great variety of material and ideas from Poe's writings. His tales, poems, letters, essays, and even marginal notes. Jerry Rockwood uses these sources to create an in depth characterization of the poet revealing the shooting conflicts of his personality. His performance is both a "reading" of Poe's works and his tortured visions, his little known books. He uses all of the sources and materials, his literacy, and his ultimate destruction. It is neither a reading nor a play in the conventional sense, but an exciting kind of theater interpreting character through action.

Jerry Rockwood's performance as Edgar Allen Poe presents him in the peak of his career in the theater revealing character through action. He has appeared in a great variety of plays on stage and television and radio, and has received the Barrymore Award for acting.

"I've got real friends who are in bad marriages, and they tell me that the only time they get to see their friends is when they're at work together," says Chicago percussionist and producer Mike Bloomfield. He is one of the few musicians who have tried to escape the confines of the recording studio and return to the spirit of the sixties with their new albums. Bloomfield's latest release, "The Same Old Song," is a collection of solo performances that feature his distinctive guitar work. The album also includes a duet with singer-songwriter John Denver, and a collaboration with saxophonist Wayne Shorter. "It's a great record," says Bloomfield, "and I'm proud to be a part of it."
With roughly half of their schedule behind them, the Bridgewater State Tennis team have three of their toughest opponents to play in a row. Within that time span they took 1-0 wins on the road against Franklin & Marshall, St. John's and New England. While winning all three, they were unable to claim victory against Brandeis, where they were defeated 8-0.

The Bears' sport is not over yet, as they have victories over Franklin & Marshall, St. John's and New England. While winning all three, they were unable to claim victory against Brandeis, where they were defeated 8-0.
