SPACE CRISIS

Nancy Dubery

There is a space problem on the campus and in the administration, committee and interest groups, in an attempt to find a solution for it.

Library personnel are greatly concerned that the needed classroom and office space will be chocked out of the Maxwell Library. (As evidenced, for example, by their open letter to the Student Union which was distributed this week.) The SGA is worried about losing space in the Student Union Building as well as in the Library Hall. Mr. Alphonse Grem, Head Librarian, said he didn’t want to lose the Library and if that happened he thought we have to lose either one.

The All College Ad Hoc Space Utilization Committee was set up early in the spring to deal with this space problem and to recommend possible solutions. This committee, made up of 7 ad hoc members, 7 faculty and 7 students, moved to recommendations to President Reddin on October 2, 1972.

The SGA held a special Senate meeting to discuss and make recommendations. The senators unanimously accepted a motion that they were concerned, that section 1 especially, would use more space. They agreed to discuss the matter and to bring up from Library personnel, who attended a small part of the meeting, guidance on two issues with the Senate Committee’s recommendations.

The recommendations made by the Senate Committee were sent to President Reddin on October 5.

Counseling at S. M. U.

A series of lectures and group discussions concerning mental health and political problems have been organized for presentation at SMU. Oct. 11, 1972, under the auspices of the Counseling Service. The Counseling Service, part of the Student Affairs Division, has been in existence since 1962. The mission of the Counseling Service is to provide support, understanding, and information to members of the SMU community. The service is committed to promoting the well-being of students by offering a confidential and supportive environment in which they can explore their thoughts, feelings, and behaviors.

For those who have not realized it, for Homecoming ‘73 is upon us. The registration of homecoming organizations, as well as the planning and organization, has been well underway since the Spring of this year. In the past, the registration of Homecoming organizations took place during the fall semester. This year, however, the Homecoming registration process has been moved up to the Spring semester to allow students more time to prepare for the Homecoming events.

members of the Republican Party in the state of Illinois are now expected to be more critical of the President's policies.

In the past, Republicans have been known for their support of the President, but with the current political climate, many are now questioning the President's actions.

One topic that has been gaining attention is the President's handling of foreign affairs.

Many believe that the President has been too aggressive in his approach to certain countries, which has led to tensions and conflicts.

The President has also been criticized for his handling of the economy, with many arguing that he has not done enough to create jobs or increase economic growth.

Another area that has been scrutinized is the President's performance in addressing issues such as healthcare, education, and climate change.

Overall, the President's competence is being called into question, as many believe that he is unable to effectively lead the country.

ADIEU AGNEW

By Skipper

Agnew's gone. Good riddance to the pest. He left with a sneeze. Quoted: "No comment."

They pushed him, they shoved him. They rode him on a rail--"Strong" for the bureaucracy. That does not fail.

"Good," the people. "Yes, Mr. Nixon. Why not?" said Spiro. "Yes, Mr. Nixon. Why not?"

But what of the news? Who condemns with such ease? Those who look at their actions. Are they better than the rest?

Let hisRestart sin! Ni.' His judgments are perfect. That'll be the day.
The white-bearded doctor treats a small crowd: "Miss Smith?" They're real gentle. "Miss Jones, how was the surgery today?" He seems to know them. She's a little nervous. "Not too bad, Dr. Butterworth," she says. The doctor nods. "Good. You're doing well."

"I'm not sure," says the nurse. "You went through a lot of pain."

The doctor smiles. "I guess we all have our ups and downs." He pats her on the shoulder. "Keep fighting. You'll get through this."

"I don't know how," the nurse replies. "This is just the beginning."

"It's hard to believe," the doctor says. "But we all have our moments."

They both laugh. "At least we have each other," the nurse says.

The doctor nods. "That's true. Let's keep going."

"I'll try," the nurse says. "But it's hard right now."

"I understand," the doctor says. "Just take it one step at a time."

They both stand up, ready to face the day."

In 1961, he was among the first doctors to use radioactive isotopes in medicine. "It was a big breakthrough," he says. "I think it changed the course of medicine for good."

"I'm not sure," says the nurse. "It was all new to me."

"Just keep learning," the doctor says. "I think you'll find it fascinating."

They both laugh. "I hope so," the nurse says. "It's hard to believe."
The idea of a documentary on the inside activities of the Irish Republican Army came to 25-year-old Californian film maker Richard Chase when he was living in England. The final product grew from just a documentary film to 47 35mm feature film, soundtrack album and a 16-page book called "NO GO". The book was called "The Second Wave of Fury" by Richard Vreeland, a British journalist, who covered the history of the British far right and wrote a book about the British far right, "The Last Wave of Fury".

The book was a best-seller and was translated into many languages. The film was produced by the British Film Institute and was released in 1977.

The film was directed by the British actress Elizabeth McGoey and was produced by the British Film Institute. It was a documentary film about the IRA and the conflict in Northern Ireland.

The National Institute of Mental Health is funding the academic training at most of the colleges involved, and VA is working closely with NIMH in development of this new category of personnel. There is really a way to order to use sexuality in training to a simple, natural way by the practice of PM Transsexualism (sex-determination by hormone). When will Williams said that much of the understanding and use of sexuality in training to a simple, natural way by the practice of PM Transsexualism (sex-determination by hormone) be offered at schools, colleges, and training hospitals in Massachusetts. District Director William E. Williams said that much of the understanding and use of sexuality in training to a simple, natural way by the practice of PM Transsexualism (sex-determination by hormone) is being tried in every school, college, and training hospital in the state. It is being tried in every school, college, and training hospital in the state. Although somewhat different approaches are being tried in each of the VA medical centers and all VA medical centers, the courses provide for in-service training of the various mental health staff members so that the mental health associate will be able to work as a member of the treatment team. The courses are being given by the colleges, with the VA hospitals providing clinical training and VA staff members participating in curriculum development and training. Six women and five men have completed the first year of the program. Mental health associates developed by the Los Angeles, Calif., VA Hospital and Los Angeles City College. The other programs are at the Nathaniel Moore, VA Hospital, and Greenfield Community College, the Salem, Va., VA Hospital, Virginia Western Community College, the St. Cloud, Minn., VA Hospital, and the College of St. Bernard, and the Temple Virginia, Va., VA Hospital. The program is being offered at a VA hospital in each of the 13 states participating in the 1st year of training at Los Angeles, four are VA training institutions and one is a VA ward secretary. Nine will join program in second year of training, all will report to work for V.A. when the training is over. DROPPING GENERAL EDUCATION REQUIREMENTS?

Working Paper on Revisions to General Education Requirements

Note: The purpose of this is not to propose any kind of bill but rather a working paper drawn up by members of last year's UCC. A hearing on the working paper will be scheduled at a later date. Before its preparation is offered.

A sub-committee on undergraduate degree requirements has met several times since the current academic year. Initially our discussion focused on the general objectives of undergraduate education at P.U. In the presentations the sub-committee tends to be interested in what appears to be the major objective: a system of general education courses that would address the needs of the students in terms of their professional development and personal resourcefulness. In this regard, the sub-committee is concerned with the:\n
1. The degree of general education courses required in the curriculum.
2. The degree to which the courses are intended to provide a meaningful education.
3. The degree to which the courses are intended to provide a valuable education.
4. The degree to which the courses are intended to provide a meaningful education.

The sub-committee is also concerned with the:\n
1. The degree to which the courses are intended to provide a meaningful education.
2. The degree to which the courses are intended to provide a valuable education.
3. The degree to which the courses are intended to provide a meaningful education.
4. The degree to which the courses are intended to provide a valuable education.

Cross Country Unbeaten

The big red and white Bridgewater State running team was functioning with precision over the first week of October. BSC had a total of 33 runners in the meets and placed first at 5 out of the 6 meets. In the next race at Maine Maritime Academy, BSC had 26 runners in the meet and placed 4th. The Bears won both races, which was quite impressive. The team gorged itself on defense and offense, but now Coach Chris Brady, in his fourth year as coach, is expecting a lot of defense and offense from his team.

The Bears of Bridgewater State College are country team in the New England Conference of College Athletics. They have won all three meets so far this season and are looking to continue their winning streak.

Maine

The Bears of Bridgewater State College are sporting a proud 3-1 record after downing Maine Maritime on Saturday at Castine, Maine. The Bears have won all three meets so far this season and are looking to continue their winning streak.

The Bears are confident that their runners will perform well in the upcoming meets and are anticipating a strong finish in the conference.
