Draft Attempts Return

Registration, a recurring issue in 1979, becomes a recurring issue in 1980. Although the Vietnam War is over, the Department of Defense still returns us the Selective Service System. Registration is the rule, the penalty for failing to register is severe, and the Selective Service System is still a part of our lives. The Selective Service System has a new Arbeitsamtsstelle in Germany, and the U.S. Army is still in the process of reorganizing.

By Sue Ani

On Friday, January 30, it was announced that the Selective Service System had returned to the United States 69,391 draft cards to the Selective Service System for the current year. This is the first return of draft cards for the current year and is the first step towards reinstating the Selective Service System.

Commuter Rail Proposed

By Sue Ani

Senator McCarthy spoke before the Bridgewater Board of Selectmen Monday evening concerning a proposal for an improved commuter rail service. The Senator was at the meeting to get a sense of opinion for the plan as it is the preliminary stage. Legislation has been introduced in the Legislature to establish an authority to study the idea. Senator McCarthy also said that a service of this type being proposed is supposed to meet the needs of the nation's cities and to provide a necessary measure in the planning outside the immediate area. There is a need for a service such as this to provide a public service for the people.

Work in Europe

Dear Editor,

I am writing to express my concern regarding the recent developments in Europe. The unemployment rate in many European countries is rising, and the situation is particularly dire in certain sectors such as manufacturing and agriculture. The European Union has implemented various economic policies to combat this crisis, but the results have been mixed. The situation is also exacerbated by the increasing number of refugees and migrants涌入欧洲, causing social and economic challenges.

I urge the European Union to take more proactive measures to address this crisis. This includes investing in renewable energy projects, promoting education and skill development, and providing social safety nets to those most affected by the economic downturn. The international community should also support these efforts through increased aid and investment.

Sincerely,

Problems of Vandalism

Dear Editor,

Recent incidents of vandalism on campus have caused concern among students and faculty. The vandals have been targeting public spaces, including the library and hallways. This behavior is unacceptable and should be addressed.

The administration must take action to prevent future incidents. Increased security patrols and surveillance cameras could be installed to deter potential vandals. Additionally, disciplinary actions should be taken against those found guilty of vandalism.

Sincerely,

[Your Name]

Dear Editor,

Last week’s article “Students Frustrated by Dorm’s Pricey Food” was a rather irresponsible piece of writing. Dorms are expensive and the food is not the best, but to suggest that the staff is not working hard enough or that the University is not doing enough is not fair.

Dear Editor,

Vandalism has reached an all-time high on campus this semester. It is apparent that the University is not doing enough to combat this crime. Vandalism is a serious problem and should be treated as such.

ECONOMIC LOOK in '80’s

by Larry Parker

On January 9, 1980, Professor Stan Amorin took part in a conference in Boston with seven other economists to discuss the outlook for the 1980’s. Professor Amorin, of the BBC Price Science Department, was a corresponding member to the panel of the Economist.

To predict the future we must know the past. Of ten, that’s the past. On February 15, 1971, the Dow Jones Industrial Average, the President of the day.

Today by Chris Sullivan with a focus on stock prices

Now that we are in the process of the presidential race, we must be more concerned to have more attention drawn to what’s happening on Wall Street. But there are other elections and decisions to consider.

The series continues as readers are encouraged to read information about other elections. We will also have additional information about these lesser known but still important facets of our presidential race.

Sharon Pollard, but rather the lesser known ones.

In the past, women in politics is seen different women involved increasingly at all levels. Ms. Cynthia Kelly is just one example of the new roles women are playing in politics today.

Ms. Kelly also has the distinction of being the only young Democrat of Mass Amherst. After graduation, Ms. Kelly has gone on to work in the new roles women are playing in politics today.

The class of 1980 was the first generation of females starting out at ground level, and some panelists believe, or it may come true.

Prof. Amorin was one of the few who would venture to predict the future. “My view is that there will be more depression and the unemployment rate will probably rise.”

The usefulness of this card, says Larry Spears, director of CCCO, is that it provides a mechanism for students to demonstrate their opposition to war. Some attrition has occurred in the past, but so far it has not put a dent in the numbers.

There is a very real possibility that Congress will try to pass a bill, after the 1980 elections, requiring the mandatory registration of young people with Selective Service. Young American men should start thinking about the implications of this and how it might affect them personally.

The class of 1960 was like the “I’M AFRAID THAT IN THE LONG Run” generation. The class of 1980 is worried about jobs, and some panelists believe, or it may come true.

Politics

Today by Jorl Parker

On January 9, 1980, Professor Stan Amnozich took part in a conversation in Boston with other leaders of the American Legion about the 1980 elections. The American Legion is a group of veterans who fought in World War II and Korea. They were discussing the need for a strong United States. The topic of the evening was: Will we go back to the same wishy-washy about defense and now we are dearly paying for it. I personally don't think we can make at this time is that, the United States would not be in this mess if it wasn't for the Soviets. He once insulted Idi Amin on a human rights question which led these attacks to violent outbreaks. We will not yield to blackmail.

The President is also concerned about the situation in Afghanistan as well as the problems in the Persian Gulf. He is especially interested in the Selective Service System and the volunteer system. The volunteer system is adequate for current defense needs. The volunteer system seems to bring out the best qualities in people. But, what will happen to leadership. Yet, history has proven that a crisis changes people whether they are officials or civilians. It is always difficult to motivate the volunteer service.

ECONOMIC LOOK in 80's

by Gary Trudeau

The current economic outlook is the most widely discussed subject today. The economy is experiencing a period of growth, but unemployment remains high. The government is working to stimulate the economy through various policies, but the effectiveness of these policies is uncertain. The future of the economy is unclear, but it is expected to continue to improve.

WAR OBJECTORS

The current wave of conscientious objection is the largest since the Vietnam War. Many young people are choosing to serve in the military, but some are objecting to the war in Iraq. The government is working to address these concerns, but the issue is complex and controversial.

DEVELOPMENTAL CLINIC GROWS

The Children's Physical Development Clinic at Bridgewater State College is expanding. The clinic provides services to children with various developmental disabilities. The clinic has been receiving more funding and is growing in size. The clinic has been well-received by the community and is making a positive impact on the lives of the children it serves.

Beyond the Classroom

by Pereira Rendall

There are some comments that the person that students are saying, "Man, I've mostly members are working on academic projects that will be done by the classroom."

The research that Dr. Curley has been doing for the past five years is an excellent example. Dr. Curley has been teaching here since 1972, and as one of the course professors in the English department, he is involved with a lot of different projects. He is interested in the field of literature and the humanities, and he is currently working on several projects. His main focus is on literature and its impact on society.

This summer, Dr. Curley will be traveling to the United Kingdom to conduct research, and he is very excited about the opportunity. He is currently working on a project that will look at the impact of literature on 18th century thought. Since then, he has been working on several projects that will benefit the students at the school.

Dr. Curley's interest in literature is what makes him such a good professor. He is able to explain complex concepts in an easy-to-understand way, and he is able to engage his students in the material. He is very passionate about his work, and he is always looking for ways to improve the quality of his courses.

There is no question that Dr. Curley is a great professor. His dedication to his work and his passion for literature make him a valuable asset to our campus.

Insulating Against the Draft

by Professor Richard Schuerman

"Soviet Vagaries at the Price of Liberty," said Wendell Phillips back in 1848. There is a scandalized outcry of the kind the poet did not write—not because any Russian action has happened over the last summer. A vast, unsupervised, armed force was assembled in the center of a city. It was a well-conceived action: the military response to an act of terrorism which was carried out in a manner that left no doubt about the identity of the planners. But the tragic fate of the people of the city was a result of the actions of a regime that is not what we are supposed to be talking about.
