As an open letter to the students of Bridgewater State College:

To the Editor:

In the past year or so, I have had the opportunity to visit the other student college newspapers and was impressed with the quality of work produced. However, none of them had the atmosphere of The Comment, which is probably the most attractive.

The editing team and the staff have worked hard to maintain the high standards set by the previous editors. The staff has worked hard to keep the campus clean. The Comment is a better newspaper and has won more awards for its articles and columns.

I would like to make all students aware of the fact that the Comment has never had any students involved in its editorial department. This is a simple fact that I hope the students will take note of.

Sincerely,
Carrie Killick

The Disabled Awareness Coalition is a student organization that was founded in 1983 to address the needs of handicapped students. The group was formed in response to a series of events that highlighted the discrimination faced by handicapped students. The group has been instrumental in bringing about many improvements to the campus, such as the installation of ramps and the construction of a new stadium. The group has also been successful in bringing about changes in the policies of the administration, such as the installation of automatic doors and the construction of new classrooms.

The Disabled Awareness Coalition is supported by the generosity of students, faculty, and staff. The group relies on the support of these individuals to continue its work. The group is always looking for new members, and anyone who is interested in becoming involved is encouraged to contact the group.

Research Board of Directors. In 1972 Mr. King received a Master of Education degree from Northeastern University and the University of Massachusetts Amherst. In 1971 he joined the Mass­achusetts Institute of Technology. His first position was Associate Director of the Community Fel­lows Program (a program he helped to found) and resident in the Department of Urban Stu­dies. In 1975 he became Adjunct Professor and Director of the Community Fellows Program. Mel King has been a vital force in community development for thirty years. Fifteen of those years were spent at a youth work­ers' center for United South End Settlements. In 1967 he became Executive Director of the Urban League of Greater Boston. As Executive Director of the Joint Center for Urban Studies, he successfully led the 1983 reform campaign to establish district elections in Boston. He introduced and sup­ported legislation to create the commu­nity Development Corporation, which received an appropriation of $100,000. As one of its projects the Boston Bank of Commerce recently received funding in the amount of $800,000. Mel King's final legis­lative victory in 1982 was his achieving an overruling vote to override Governor Ed King's veto of legislation to withdraw public pension funds from South Africa.

Mr. King resides in the South End with his wife Joyce and six children.
ARE YOUR DRIVING BUDDIES DRIVING YOU NUTS?

Colby Tindale

Good times mean getting together with good buddies and Budweiser. There’s nothing like a couple of beers with friends that makes for great conversations. Beer is meant to be enjoyed with a sunset on the water and the sound of MODERATION. Good judgment should be your number one rule. Be careful about the type of beer you drink and the friends you hang out with. So we’re going to help you out with that. Here are some tips on how to enjoy your beer and have a good time.

Sizing Up Your Friends

What kind of friends do you have? Do they drink for fun or do they drink to get drunk? Do they always act weird when they’ve been drinking? Do they ever get into fights or start fights? Do they ever get into trouble? Do they ever drive when they’ve been drinking?

Moderation Key Ring

At Anheuser-Busch, we’re concerned about your health, not your wallet. We provide education and treatment programs aimed at combating alcoholism and alcohol abuse. Please help us protect our planet by letting other drivers know you’re drinking. It’s easy to do with our key ring:

1. Buy a Key Ring
2. Put it in your car
3. Get awareness

Type A

Type A’s are known for their good judgment. They never get too drunk and they never drive when they’ve been drinking. They always have a designated driver and they never drink and drive. They’re the ones who always have a good time and never get into trouble.

Type B

Type B’s are known for their poor judgment. They always get too drunk and they always drive when they’ve been drinking. They never have a designated driver and they always drink and drive. They’re the ones who always get into trouble and never have a good time.

Type C

Type C’s are known for their inconsistent judgment. They sometimes get too drunk and they sometimes drive when they’ve been drinking. They sometimes have a designated driver and they sometimes drink and drive. They’re the ones who sometimes have a good time and sometimes get into trouble.

Type D

Type D’s are known for their bad judgment. They never get too drunk but they always drive when they’ve been drinking. They never have a designated driver and they always drink and drive. They’re the ones who always get into trouble and never have a good time.

Type E

Type E’s are known for their good judgment. They never get too drunk and they never drive when they’ve been drinking. They always have a designated driver and they never drink and drive. They’re the ones who always have a good time and never get into trouble.

The editors and the crew would like to thank the opportunity to let you know what we think about beer and its effects on our lives. We hope you enjoyed this article and we look forward to hearing your thoughts in the future.

Dr. O'Brien, a nationally recognized authority on the American Catholic Church and a key contributor to such magazines as America and Commonweal, pointed out that while recent years American Catholicism could be regarded sociologically as a strong subculture.

As such it was especially successful with ethnic groups, offering them roots, and a means of preserving both their native subculture and their heritage.

The church, he said, was seen as the ordinary means of salvation; a strong faith. But in actuality Christians are almost everywhere in a minority and should be regarded as social minorities in the modern world.

"It's present where there's poverty and human dignity," O'Brien said, "and Christ is supposed to be in the midst of the world's poorest and the most serious problems of the world".

Regarding the church from the inside; and to an overflow audience Tuesday, O'Brien declared the Christian church must be built on the personal commitment of its members; and the prophetic voice of such groups as Catholics for a Free Choice.

Supporting the church from within, O'Brien insisted that the Christian church must be built on the personal commitment of its members and a critical consciousness of the church from the inside, and with the help of the faithful toward Church reform.

In a discussion period following his talk, O'Brien declared that the contemporary Catholic Church is one of the most interesting and significant institutions in the world. It's present where there's poverty and suffering; and that the Bernardin pastoral declared the Church is almost everywhere in a minority should be prepared to accept the possibility of persecution and even martyrdom.

"It's the Church of Ireland's landscape and peoples," said O'Brien, "and many of us are going to have to visit the Irish countryside and the saints' festivals to find this attitude, said O'Brien. "Very comfortably at home in America today, they are managing to reconcile Catholicism and American life.

In contradiction to this, he said, "the contemporary Catholic church must be built on the personal commitment of its members and the prophetic voice of such groups as Catholics for a Free Choice. The ancillary worker must not be disembodied.

Other hoped-for characteristics, in O'Brien's contemporary Catholic Church are integrity of life encompassing moral activity, and family and work commitments; civilly conscious of the church from the inside, and an awareness of the possibilities of constructive change.

Supporting the "national" programs of the church are the "new" programs proposed by Chicago Cardinal Joseph Bernardin. "What can the average Catholic do," O'Brien asked, "to support the Bernardin pastoral?" He answered, "to support the Bernardin pastoral, and the prophetic voice of such groups as Catholics for a Free Choice."

Shape of the Church

By Per McGowan

"The Shape of the Church in the '80's" was the topic of Dr. David O'Brien, associate professor of religion at Holy Cross College, Worcester, who spoke recently at the Catholic Center of Bridgewater.

Dr. O'Brien, a nationally recognized authority on the American Catholic Church and a frequent contributor to such magazines as American and Commenswear, pointed out that while recent years American Catholic Church could be regarded sociologically as a strong institution.

As such it was especially successful with ethnic groups, occur-ing them, and in a manner of preserving both their ethnic culture and setting them.

Dr. O'Brien said, was seen as a moral crusade of the Catholic Church "it wasn't impossible but it was hard to be a minority." In the mid-60's, however, the picture changed and the ben-
ter. The "strong church seemed to be transitioning," he gave several reasons:

- Changes in the Catholic subculture, as education gave people more mobility, they left the integrated working class,
- Development of the "first truly American Catholic parishes," coming with the postwar growth of suburban areas, increased the number of young families from ethnic places.
- Renewal of faith by the young, "in the mid-Seventies," by Cardinal John F. Kennedy, the first Catholic president, who symbolized American Catholicism's new find in the social structure.
- "Rebuilding," brought about by Vatican II, which altered the form of the church from "an institution of the [Catholic] church," to "an institution of the church from [a] Catholic." Religion, said O'Brien, became a majority voice for Catholicism, "not theologizing but in actual practice." Many people, he said, are making moral decisions, such as those relating to birth control and abortion, for themselves, in a new place called "first-century Catholicism." He said that the popular partial revival programs are typical of today's church. Other changes that O'Brien mentioned included:
- A renewed understanding of the people's role in the Church's life.
- Programs and much more for religious education of the people.
- The copycat contemporary Christian church that must be built on the personal commitment of its members, the image-friendly appearance of both religious groups.
- Religious and lay people with the same mission and with the same goals.

In the last section, Dr. O'Brien concluded that while the church has been successful in preserving its identity and in promoting parish activities, family and work contribute, the community consciousness of the church from the inside, and a sense of independence, are constructive changes.

Supporting the "same groups of people," he said, "people involved in the church's life," can be considered to be the "same sponsors of the church's growth and the church's mission as it's a necessary way of shaping the world," and that the "remote pilar," who would make them the best sponsors of the church, should be revisited.

A large theme in the conversation was to be included in the letter, "Summing up the message, I added, "What we ought to believe is to make changes. The kingdom of God isn't in the sky. It's on earth. If we don't believe it's possible to change the world, we don't believe it."

Ribbon of Peace

In the past two weeks many of BSC's students have broadened their political horizons. Maybe you were running in Fort Lauderdale trying to avoid the sun or you were visiting your folks in Bellingham, Wash., or bird-watching in Barkley, Vermont. Still others may have been visiting friends back home while putting in hours at a job in the campus post-office or a part-time job in the bookstore. Maybe you were studying in the library, writing papers, or even visiting the gym, but perhaps instead of running you were out reading in their student newspapers, particularly in the coming days. We'll get to you in a moment, the reason we're doing this.

Spring Sports-Lookin' Good

Joe Yeskewicz has a pleasant problem on his hands. The problem being he has too many talented players to know what to do with them all. Lining up for the Violets is veterans Mark Desrouchers, Brad Masran and Joel Storey. Heading the newcomer list are freshmen Mike Davis and junior Rick Bouchner and George Troupe. Under their belts is experienced talent, which Yekewicz says is much better than his last years (3-4). He can't wait for the season opener against Stony Brook on April 9th.

MEN'S TENNIS

For Yekewicz, there is nothing to worry about, as he can't wait to see the freshmen in action. The team is much better than the last years, and the Violets are looking very promising.

Heading the freshmen are the pitchers John Duddy and Paul Congreau. Both will be looking for strong results this season. The other veterans who need to excel are John and Rich Pacione (pitcher), Rich Sugnon (first), Mike (404) last year with a successful season.

With only a week of practice under their belts, the Bears seem much better than the last years. However, with the added depth, there are many options available to them this year.

Without knowing what to do with them all, Yekewicz is excited about the potential of the freshmen. There is no limit to what they can do, and they are all eager to play.

The Bears will be playing a 35 game schedule this year, with the earliest game being April 10th against a tough team. The team will have a new look, with some key players returning for a successful season.

CAREER FAIR

On Wednesday, April 10th from 1:00 to 4:00 p.m., there will be a CAREER FAIR in the Student Union Ballroom. The CAREER FAIR (not to be confused with “Summer Job Fair”) will consist of representatives from over 50 companies, organizations, and agencies here for the purpose of informing the students of Bridgewater State College about their companies, jobs, and field of work.

STUDENTS—YOU WILL BE DOING YOURSELF A GREAT INJUSTICE IF YOU DO NOT ATTEND THE CAREER DAY!!

ASK YOURSELF THE FOLLOWING QUESTIONS:

Do I know what I can do with my major? ...

Where will I be next year? (particularly seniors) ...

Am I interested in doing an internship next but have no ideas? ...

What kind of companies are involved in the type of work I am looking forward to? ...

If you find these statements confusing, or have any other questions about your career—THEN DO YOURSELF A FAVOR—TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THIS OPPORTUNITY!!!

The setting will be very informal. This is not a JOB FAIR (although you will have a chance to make some great contacts), this is a Career Information Day.

Seniors may want to bring along resumes just in case.

Employers will be prepared to answer your questions, give you advice about your future, and are genuinely interested in meeting you. MARK THIS DATE ON YOUR CALENDAR RIGHT NOW!!!

RAT TO CLOSE

By Kevin Decker
Staff Writer

Where I come from, having a pub to frequent is an essential part of your social life. I decided to go to a pub to see how it would be like here, in the States, to see if any of the same traditions would exist. I found a pub called "Rat," and I decided to go inside.

The Rat is a small, dimly-lit pub located on the corner of a street in the downtown area. The atmosphere is cozy and inviting, with soft music playing in the background and people chatting and laughing. The drinks are reasonably priced, and the selection is impressive. I ordered a beer and a shot of whiskey, and I was pleasantly surprised by the quality of both.

The Rat has a unique menu that includes a variety of international dishes, such as Indian, Thai, and Chinese. I ordered the Kung Pao chicken, and it was delicious. The presentation was also impressive, with the food beautifully arranged on a plate.

Overall, my experience at the Rat was excellent. The atmosphere was welcoming, the food was delicious, and the drinks were reasonably priced. I highly recommend it to anyone looking for a relaxing evening out with good food and good company.
