Liddy Liddy Liddy on the table

Dear Editor:

On April 3 and 4, the Dance Corps performed in annual show. At the morning performance on April 3, the audience, which consisted largely of students from the Burnell Campus, was somewhat awed by the set and choreography. Some students seemed to be bored and their reactions was most bothersome and distracting to the rest of the audience as well as the performers.

There seems to be a trend toward increasingly crude behavior at all public events. My colleagues and I will do our best at幸好 to reverse this trend, but also will forward our suggestions! I hope they will help everyone.

Lest we forget

Dear Editor,

I'm writing in regards to last week's article, "New Positions at WBRM Announced". Two important changes were made in the listings of the directors: Rick Wal­Henry, Promotion/Creator, Chris Cline, Publicity Director.

Mary Beth MacNeil, News Director, has moved from the college campus to Bridgewater and will handle the WBRM's off-campus operations.

Please note these changes in the listings of the directors.

Sincerely,

Drinking water should be everyone's important concern

Dear Editor:

Dead fish floating belly up in what will eventually end up in your glass; puddles that leave concentric yellow rings in the dirt as they evaporate; chemically contaminated water, possibly causing higher cancer rates in different areas, including Cape Cod; all seem to be harbingers of the end life on this planet.

While recent front page headlines have spoken of violent clashes between nations and people, a quiet menace has been allowed to grow and circulate freely in our water. Pollution. Contamination. Call it what you will.

For so long we've taken for granted of drinking water altogether. Open the valve, out came the cool, presumably clean water.

Now we must weigh our thrust against our willingness to endure strange tastes and even illness. This is one of the most serious problems facing us today.

If it is allowed to go unchecked, we must face the fact that it is only a matter of time before we run out of drinking water altogether. The time is now for serious legislation to prevent further contamination. Private citizens also must show more concern for their water supplies.

For instance, on Thursday, April 17, at 7:00 p.m. there will be a public meeting, conducted by the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering at the Bridgewater hazardous waste license for Safety-Kleen Service Center, 123 Elm Street, Bridgewater.

Certainly, everyone who drinks water in this community should attend.

Liddy Liddy Liddy on the table

Dear Editor:

We've noticed the advertising space for the G. Gordon Liddy: Lecture and feel compelled to address the following questions to the students and faculty at Bridgewater:

1. Should BSDR students use their free money spent to pay a man convicted of crime to speak to them at Bridgewater State College?
2. Should the GO financially support or reward an individual who has attempted to subvert democracy?
3. What educational or entertainment value can be derived from the view of a man with questionable ethics?

4. Because free speech exists in our society and we respect that, does it mean that we should not use criticism concerned with inaccuracies and mercy in selection of speakers?
5. Did we consider that the college may have a responsibility to the Garrett community to provide nuance rather than sensationalism?

We hope that these questions can be answered in the Comment. In the absence of discussion on campus and off:
- Bob Berrett, Lit Darne, Joel Levin

Quiet in the audience please

Dear Editor:

On April 3 and 4, the Dance Corps performed in annual show, the evening performance, with an audience made up largely of college students. Several college students seemed to be ignorant of proper audience manners and their talking was most bothersome and distracting to other members of the audience as well as to the dancers.

Try to preserve audience behavior toward increasingly crude behavior at all public events. My colleagues and I will do our best at Burns to reverse this trend, but we need the help of all audience members.

Drinking water should be everyone's important concern

Dear Editor:

As you know, the world's water supply is in deep trouble. We must take action now to ensure that everyone has access to clean, safe drinking water.

Dead fish floating belly up in what will eventually end up in your glass; puddles that leave concrete yellow rings in the dirt as they evaporate; chemically contaminated water, possibly causing higher cancer rates in different areas, including Cape Cod; all seem to be harbingers of the end of this life on planet Earth.

While recent front page headlines have spoken of violent clashes between nations and people, a quiet menace has been allowed to grow and circulate freely in our water. Pollution. Contamination. Call it what you will.

For so long we've taken advantage of drinking water for granted. Open the valve, out came the coal, presumably clean water. Now we must weigh our thirst against our willingness to endure strange tastes and even illness.

This is one of the most serious problems facing us today. If it is allowed to go unchecked, we must face the fact that it is only a matter of time before we run out of drinking water altogether. The time is now for serious legislation to prevent further contamination. Private citizens also must show more concern for our water supplies.

For instance, on Thursday, April 17, at 7 p.m. there will be a public meeting, conducted by the Department of Environmental Protection at Bridgewater State College, to receive comments on hazardous waste licensing for Safety-Kleen Service Center, 121 Elm Street, Bridgewater.

The American College Health Association now considers AIDS "a major concern on college campuses." They will sponsor a panel and a presentation on the disease and counseling groups or precautions.

In the eastern schools, NY City's College Health Association, in the wake of AIDS and NYL, has lost three staff and many of its students. In the east, there were thus appointed an advisory in the field. In December 1985 a survey of 325 NYS students found that while many left that AIDS victims should not be treated as individuals, they did not want to share living quarters with them.

Hymen: Life, love, and AIDS

The University of California, Berkeley, where two students and five faculty members have already died of AIDS, has designated AIDS counselors and students for its 500,000 Berkeley AIDS program, jointly funded by the state and city health departments, will sponsor informational pamphlets, at least one campus pamphlet.

If, as Berkeley professor Michael Lifton says, "we're going to go on the attack," and we do not want to let anyone touch or be touched by them, says a student, "we're not going to be touched by them," says Minn. "I'm glad to be in a school where people are interested in knowing about AIDS and the symptoms, and the prevention of the disease they cause."

The AIDSHORD Program, sponsored by the National Endowment for the Arts and Humanities, is a support program for AIDS victims and families. The need for governmental intervention is minimal, for many industrialists have had to acknowledge its existence on their campuses.

The disease is also a growing concern for campus counseling groups. "AIDS is a growing concern for campuses," says Karen Melanson, associate director of the American College Health Association. "I think it's a concern for the campus as well as the state health department."

AIDS: A Disease Shrouded in Myths

Infection with this virus does not always remain in good health; others may have AIDS are vulnerable to serious symptoms which may include tiredness, night sweats, and swollen glands (lymph nodes)—usually in the neck, armpits, or groin. Anyone with these symptoms should see a doctor.

The virus develops AIDS.

How contagious is AIDS?--Casual contact is not contagious, but there is a risk of transmission through blood. It may be transmitted from infected mother to infant before, during, or shortly after childbirth.

How is AIDS transmitted?--AIDS is a disease caused by a virus that causes destruction of the immune system. Scientists believe that the virus is transmitted through blood, sexual intercourse, and possibly breast milk.

The time between infection with the HTLV-III virus and the onset of symptoms may vary from 10 to 20 years.

People who have AIDS may have a history of certain types of body language, such as looking into the eyes of a victim, or may have a history of certain types of behavior. People with AIDS may also have a history of certain types of symptoms, such as night sweats, fever, or weight loss.

How are patients treated?--AIDS patients may be treated with antibiotics for tuberculosis, or with chemotherapy for certain types of cancer. They may also receive support from family members and others who are caring for them.

AIDS patients may receive support from family members and others who are caring for them. They may also receive support from family members and others who are caring for them.

Some people believe that transmission occurred in small numbers among those using intravenous drug drivers, police, and firefighters who may have been exposed to the virus.

Puzzler

Dear P.J.

My roommate has this disgusting habit of picking on her. She does it even when she himself has placed a great deal of effort in her work. I can't help but feel that this is my reward for my efforts. What should I do?

Dear Ronnie of a Pig

Sit down and take a time out. She's just picky if she likes it. Don't let her do something that she doesn't like. It's not true, but it might be so! If you should discover it, know that you are at a turning point. Help her to make time for others.

Deborah, a West Virginia University student

Dear Deborah

Someone told me that I was driving when someone driving in the opposite direction passed me, listening to one of the older lights, that is there for a police car equipped with radar further up the road. Is this true?

Fred, a West Virginia University student

Dear Fred

No, it is not true. It might be so! If you should discover it, know that you are at a turning point. Help her to make time for others.

Since discipline and a familiarity with facts and figures are demanded of all who wish to make progress of any kind this week, little can be done that does not require something of an effort. The work for the week should be of the highest order so that the students who are working on it all will almost certainly have a hard time of it. Do not expect relaxation from this and remember that the harder the work, the better the results. However, some may find that the unexpected adds a new dimension to personal affairs that may make possible a more successful and understanding approach when there was once one stepmomeny and enjoyment.

PUZZLER

Dear P.J.

My roommate has this disgusting habit of picking her nose. She does it even when there's the faintest sound around the house, like it's a natural, automatic action. I have tried to speak to her, to reason with her, but she doesn't listen. She laughs at me and continues to do it. It's not bad enough, but she further makes me sick by the way that she drills it out of her nose into the sink. What can I do about this? This is really unattractive and very disgusting! People think it's funny, but it's not! What should I do?

The Rosemary of a Pig

Dear Rosemary of a Pig,

She was right to "pick," if she pleases, but tell her to do so somewhere else, and dispose of her "ribs" material properly and not into the sink. If the centum, go to your RA or landlord and discuss the matter. Buy her a box of Kleenex. That's a very useful thing! And I guess, it's our noses!

Dear P.J.,

Somebody told me that I was driving and when someone driving in the opposite direction passes, clicking on and off his lights, that means there is a police car with radar further up the road. Is this true?

- Trod of Tickets

Dear Trod of Tickets,

Yes. When someone passes clicking his lights, it means one of three things. Either your lights are on, or at night when someone who has picked up the radar, who is not looking for them and they're blind, or in your case, there is a police car ahead equipped with radar, so slow down!

Dear P.J.,

The place I work employs about 20 people. Everyone takes a day off once in a while, so they put their buses on the board hoping someone will work. If no one responds they begin verbally attacking. Everyone always seems to ask me if I always say yes so hope that someday they will respect the bus.

Last week I needed a day off for an important reason. Everyone else had some incredible excuse when they couldn’t come in from working. You couldn’t have been so hard ended up working.

Does this think people would remember when I worked for them in the time of need. What can be done about this problem. It’s not fair.

- Bonn Bod

Dear Bonn Bad,

Bring the situation up with your employer, who has to be to him as we did to me. If you don’t get any help or you feel that your employer agrees but won’t solve the problem, then just walk out. You might find they’ll learn in the long run.

Children's Physical Developmental Clinic

In the Spring of 1974, the Health and Physical Education Department of Bridgewater State College gave support to a pilot program fostering community service. The program allows students from most majors on campus the opportunity to volunteer their time working with children and youth with special needs in a clinical physical education program on Saturday mornings.

What started 12 years ago as a pilot program to meet the physical, motor and leisure needs of twenty children, has grown to a well established program that now serves some ninety children and youth from 36 communities in the greater Boston and South Shore area.

The Clinic has proven to be a satisfying experience for students, who know that they are helping a child with special needs to reach his or her fullest potential; physically, intellectually, emotionally and socially.

Each Saturday morning at 7:30, the children gather at the John J. Kelly Gymnasium and Pool complex on the campus of Bridgewater State College. Their faces glow in anticipation of playing and learning with their special friends. The children’s bright eyes and smiles, along with their ability to express strong bonds, are the clinic’s greatest rewards.

The Clinic utilizes the Olympic size swimming pool, three gymnasiums, an early childhood intervention center, a physical fitness training room and outdoor facilities. The developmental program is one of only about 40 in the country.

Many of children with special needs who participate in our program are attending special schools and spending most of their time with peers who also have special needs. Our program is unique in that it provides the children with the opportunity to interact with a diverse population of their peers in a non-therapeutic environment.

In our society, a child’s ability to play successfully with a ball is a sign of progress. A close bond of friendship is often enjoyed between clinician and his/her child.

To achieve the goals of each child’s individual educational plan varies, but may include:

- Early Intervention
- Physical Fitness
- Motor Development
- Basic Motor Skills and Patterns
- Neighborhood and Group Games
- Aquatic Skills
- Rhythmic and Dance Skills
- Recreational and Sport Activity

The Clinic program is directed by Dr. Joseph H. Hider, who worked extensively with the first class of this kind at the University of Maryland, and Professor Alphonse Smith, who was the guiding force behind the program. Recently, Dr. Hider and his students recently received the Maryl Cathleen Gavey Award for Excellence in Public Service.

The Clinic is the largest group on campus with over 100 student clinicians representing most majors on the Bridgewater State College campus. These include the following:

- Art
- Psychology
- Biology
- Recreation
- Computer Science
- Science
- Early Childhood
- Elementary Education
- Secondary Education
- Social Work
- Health Education
- Sociology
- Management Science
- Special Education
- Music
- Speech Communications
- Physical Education
- Art Education

Deadline for applications is May 21.
Children's Physical Developmental Clinic

In the Spring of 1986, the Health and Physical Education Department of Bridgewater State College gave support to a pilot program focusing on community service. The program allows students from most majors on campus the opportunity to volunteer their time working with children and youth with special needs in a clinical physical education program on Saturday mornings. What started 15 years ago as a pilot program to meet the physical, motor and social needs of twenty children, has grown into a well established program that now serves some twenty children and youth from 14 communities in the greater Boston and South Shore area.

The Clinic has proven to be a satisfying experience for students, who know that they are helping a child with special needs realize his full potential, physically, intellectually, emotionally and socially. Each Saturday morning at 9:30 the children gather at the John J. Kelly Gymnasium and Pool complex on the campus of Bridgewater State College. Their faces glow in anticipation of playing and learning with their special friends. The children's bright eyes and smiles, along with being able to view their goals, are the clinic's greatest rewards.

The Clinic utilizes the Olympic size swimming pool, three gymnasia, an early childhood intervention center, a physical fitness training room and outdoor facilities. The developmental program is one of only seven in the country.

The Clinic is currently accepting applications for the Fall semester from all students interested in applying. Applications may be obtained in the office of Dr. Huber, Room 103 in the Kelly Gymnasium.

She Watched Them Dance

By Cynthia Naples

With the opening "Prinzing" dance, the audience got into the groove. The dancers jumped and yelled to the beat much like an African Dance that came from Bridgewater earlier in the semester.

The rest of the show contained an assortment of different styles from tap and jazz to ballet and Renaissance dance. Some altered dances were quite innovative, and some featured elements of the music. Unfortunately, we couldn't possibly do what he did with a production. Obviously, it was just the right touch to add to the mix.

That I enjoyed very much. All the dancers demonstrated his talents to perfection.

The highlight of this band is their lead singer. Jimmy Page put on an afterthought. The mix was that of two numbers in which the singer was quite interesting.

The original soundtrack to the movie "Pretty In Pink" has a lot of hands behind the scenes. One of the average Joe would not be familiar with. King of spin doctors is the downbeat of a song: instead it brings us new possibilities for their heads to become big. The producer of the movie James Hughes has done more movies than John Hughes and has gotten some substantially better airplay. Other great moments in the movie "To Be or Not To Be" by John Hughes, Zina Demetriou are quite interesting. Indeed, the title track Pretty In Pink by the Psychedelic Furs.

That's why the show was quite interesting. Adding to this too many and dull. The sonic hard does better than this. Echo & The Bunnymen's song, the others were too attractive and velvety. When necessity came to be, they went to Channel concept went well.

Pretty In Pink Music lives up to its name

By Steve Urns
Pretty In Pink Various A&M Records

The original soundtrack to the movie Pretty In Pink has a lot of hands behind it. Stewart Copeland of the band The Police is the obvious major. However, there are also many others who made contributions to the music. The choices of songs were made by the music director, Peter Rauhut, and the band's lead singer, Steve Urns.

The album opens with "The Rose," a song written by Neil Diamond. This song was chosen because it is a great rock and roll song that fits the name: Chaotic. The band's punk-approach is reflected in this album. The songs are quite different from each other. "The Rose" has a more commercial sound than the rest of the album. The overall sound of this album is not a typical rock album. It has more of an electronic feel to it.

The album also features a few covers of popular songs. "The Rose" is a cover of a song by Neil Diamond. Another cover is "I'm Not in Love" by The Psychedelic Furs. This song is a great choice because it is different from the other songs on the album. "The Rose" has a more commercial sound than the rest of the album. Soulds and Gurus have a following; Bangle's good too.

As the back of the Modern English band mentions "Like Wow," what's next for the Orpheum last Thursday night? Not sure, but two, three great bands happened at the Orpheum. One could have a purely hilarious 80's tour. Up front was a Boston group called The Tangle, which I had never heard before. But when I saw them I liked them. They were a very tight group with keyboards, two guitars, a bass and drums. Simply put they sounded great. The lead guitarist was especially good and employed a variety of techniques or simply made music of his own. The only thing I regretted about The Tangle was that their music album was not available yet.

The Modern English band was next and succeeded very well. I think they should be...they're attired appropriately. They performed most of the music from their album, "Sex on the Brain," which I like. The lead singer is Ms. Cynthia Kay. Their music style is very much like many different groups, and not necessarily one of my favorite songs, "Dirty Love." The guitar almost sound likes AC/DC while the vocals are similar to George Thorogood. Another song, "Kaleidoscope," sounded like a country band with a hard rock touch. The Modern English band were a very fun bunch to watch and into music.

The headline act of the night was The Bangles. They still sound as excellent as they did when they heard at the Paradise a year ago. They're a company no other than a band, a single, Europe over tour, and headline appearances in large theatres. They haven't lost any of their edge. but as with the other acts, if anything they have improved in their performances. They were on next and I was there, but I think the others will be there more rounds. Whatever the Bangles performed themselves with as well as say the early Who and second generation together. They are another up coming up for the ladder of success and judging from what they have been doing at the Orpheum they will keep climbing.

If you hate Van Hagar's...you're wrong!

By Bob Lang

The long awaited Van Hagar (Hagar is really his full name. Everyone wants to have him, but he's not the greatest hit to make a couple of tracks, 215, named for Edward Van Hagar's track is a mix of infectious guitar riff, power pop and tropical Van Hagar's initial hit. As usual, my favorite tunes are the ones that rock. Good Enough and Summer Night's feature the trademark backing vocals which he got if a web page above the rest, and the same track rock hard because. Guitarist Hagar is given an even higher priority than on Rick Elder's debut album. Keyboards are highlighted on the record (as well he's new.) This time he has the whole album of tracks to show why in the king of the heavy sound machine.

So many Hagar fans don't have something to wish that image. It was once said that there is a little Van Hagar in everyone. All you can say is, if you hate Van Hagar, you're wrong.
Yet another movie review from ...Mark Avery

Mark Avery
Gung Ho is a movie directed by Ron Howard, and starring Michael Keaton. I believed it to be a funny movie about the hardships of business emigration, but upon re-reading my comments I believe it to be a funny movie about the hardships of business emigration by sending over its Japanese management to replace the plant. That's what it was supposed to be funny about. However, the film's humor is often belaboured, tired, and overwrought. It's a silly, funny movie where the audience never knows whether they're supposed to be laughing or not. The plot is also predictable and hackneyed.

The Gung Ho movie is about a company that is struggling to compete in a global market. The company's CEO, played by Michael Keaton, decides to hire Japanese managers to help improve the company's operations. The Japanese managers, played by actors who are fluent in Japanese, are shown having a difficult time adapting to the American workplace. The CEO, who is also a struggling businessman, tries to help them by giving them advice and support. The plot is predictable and lacks any real depth or complexity.

The acting in the movie is also poor. The actors are not able to bring any real life to their characters, and their performances are often wooden and stilted. The dialogue is also often stilted and predictable, and the actors often seem to be reading their lines verbatim from the script. The movie is also riddled with plot holes and inconsistencies, which make it difficult to follow.

Overall, the Gung Ho movie is a disappointing and forgettable film. It fails to deliver on its promise of being a funny and insightful look at the challenges of international business. The acting is poor, the dialogue is stilted, and the plot is predictable. It's a movie that's best avoided.

American League Preview

By Anthony Fagan

With the NHL and NBA winding down their seasons and the playoffs around the corner, it is time again for baseball, box stops, apple pie, and a certain brand of automobile to again take the noses stage here in New England. After a 64-17 record, the frailties, and the gaffes we have for Jonny Namath, the Red Sox will once again Flavor Pack with the same problems: pitching, stuff problems, and none checked at the door. With that in mind, looking at the team, head, it's a wonder about baseball for a moment.

American League East

1. Toronto Blue Jays
   This team is from Canada, despite poor attendance records is a standard built for Nashville, have given Torontoan someth- ing to cheer about (having to deal with another Maple Leaf). Dave Stieb, the Blue Jays number one man, and their turning ace, George Bell, will have new leadership this season in their field manager, but most assume some team leadership, especially playing Boston, Kansas City, New York, and California. Look for an end of season battle royal with the Tig- ers for first.

2. Detroit Tigers
   The rivalry has hit the Tigers squarely in the last fast season, forcing the World Champions to make a hasty exit. This year, Willie Hernandez and Kirk Gibson are expected to take Spaldy Anderson's team all the way back to the top. My view is if Gibson comes, we have games like we did against the Red Sox of opening day, then the Tigers will enter the Lime dice with the Blue Jays. Either way, they still must defeat their Northern neighbors, difficult first to do.

3. New York Yankees
   Despite all the stories coming out of the Yankees problems with King George Steinbrenner, Lou Piniella and his players will make noise again this year in the A.L. East. Trudging away the woes of the 14.04.

4. Boston Red Sox
   No one is sure what will happen in the Sox, as if it is time to time again. No one is sure what Seaver's pitching. Carl Schrffer and Don Gashard need marketing. (Or Can Red Sox win to set his priorities straight.

5. Baltimore Orioles
   Earl Weaver and his Bird's sound like a 1953 rock and roll group. They Sullivan, they have a rock, but then roll over and play dead.

Baltimore's bright boys have been Cal Ripken, Eddie Murray, and even Fred Lynn. Their weakest is their pitching stuff. They have fanned since Philadelphia a few years ago, and since then Baltimore has struggled. They used to make a major 3 or 4 player deal that can be consistent pitching and fielding to Baltimore.

1. Boston Red Sox
   No. 2 is a major wildcard in the Sox, as if it is time to time again.

2. Cleveland Indians
   Before all the crafty skirmishing to the Indians will awak the year in posibility a trip from the underworld into the bright sights of stardom.

3. Minnesota Twins
   The Bomber Who find away is 1982 will be the king of the skis of the city of the famous Hallмагauggma. She how some people a joking, have to do some- thing with the questions with Yarn. Their problems is the old one has bent, about finished his career with the Twins. But, it was the old man.

Next week, a look at the National League East, where Dennis A. will make another set of house calls, especially one for the playoffs.

Street Hockey

By Gill Wainwright

Not even the rains could keep the street hockey boys off the roads. And it was indeed in the rain that five out of six street hockey teams defeated last Thursday.

League defending champs, the Trojans rolled over the Rollins. The practice paid off for some Notre Dame winter league members. Jim Scary and his teammates from the stairs with three goals. With assistance from Scott Scaringe, Barry Markham added another nestch to his hockey stick.

In the second game the Squires crushed Sokol-Kie with an eight-one score. Chris Daly stoned through with four goals. Paul Huns and Ron Cuneho split the last four. No overtime necessary to score.

While on the other court, spectators weren't sure if it was a street hockey or water polo game. In the first overtime game those Brothers battted Off. Paul Rauso of the Blues was the3ighting, hitting his opponents with three goals, one of which eluded the game in the G.T. Blue brand during the game.

So there you have it. Stay tuned for more next week.
American League Preview

By Anthony Pagan

With the NHL and NBA winding down their seasons and the playoffs in full swing, this is the time to once again take a look at the Eastern Division and N.Y. Yankees for a moment.

American League East:

1.) Toronto Blue Jays

This team from Canada, despite poor pitching, staff problems, and egos not checked at the door, has managed to win attendance records in a stadium built for rock and roll. Have they done this to create a fan base, or is it the baseball fans who are coming to see the players that don't have. This season in their field manager, Dave Stieb, the Blue Jays have taken on the same problems: baseline pumps. He announced two days ago that he will have new leadership this season in their field manager, Earl Weaver and His Birds. If they contend, it will be a miracle made on Yawkey Way.

2.) Detroit Tigers

This team from Detroit, despite poor hitting, has managed to make some noise in the A.L. East. Trading away Kirk Gibson to the Blue Jays was not a good move for the Tigers, in the end though, they still have some pitching. Cal Schrald and Don Stanhouse are the bright spots. Dave Stieb, the Blue Jays' number one ace, and their nonchalant pitching, staff problems, and egos not checked at the door. With that in mind, looking at the Tigers, I doubt meander about baseball for a moment.

3.) Baltimore Orioles

Earl Weaver and His Birds, Sounds like a 1950's rock and roll group. They like a 1950's rock and roll group. They will have new leadership this season in their field manager, Earl Weaver and His Birds. In the end though, they still have some pitching. Cal Schrald and Don Stanhouse are the bright spots. With that in mind, looking at the Tigers, I doubt meander about baseball for a moment.

4.) Boston Red Sox

They are a great team in the first, or at it's time and time again. No one has matched the pitching. Cal Schrald and Don Stanhouse are the bright spots. Dave Stieb, the Blue Jays' number one ace, and their nonchalant pitching, staff problems, and egos not checked at the door. With that in mind, looking at the Tigers, I doubt meander about baseball for a moment.

5.) New York Yankees

Despite all the stories coming out of New York during the playoffs. It is if Gibson and his pinstripers will make some noise in the A.L. East. Trading away Kirk Gibson to the Blue Jays was not a good move for the Tigers, in the end though, they still have some pitching. Cal Schrald and Don Stanhouse are the bright spots. Dave Stieb, the Blue Jays' number one ace, and their nonchalant pitching, staff problems, and egos not checked at the door. 6.) Cleveland Indians

Someone has to come in and do a clean sweep of the organization, especially in the management side of the business. If Peter Ueberroth were not Commissioner, he would own the ball club. If you content, it will be a miracle made on Yawkey Way.

So Even the rain could keep the street hockey players off the rinks. And it was indeed in the rain that free out of town street hockey teams debarked last Thursday.
