Bears open with loss
Football team falls to Curry

By Bob Paterson

The Bridgewater State men's varsity football team traveled to Curry College matching-up against a stronger and more experienced challenger, coming out a 36-21 loss.

Before Bridgewater's fourth quarter surge, which produced two touchdowns, Curry dominated the game.

Curry was led by senior quarterback Rob Bacon and junior running back Michael Wiese (18 carries, 116 yards). Bacon, asked if he was one of the best quarterbacks in small college football, "By College president, or office was called the 146 years of the school's history.

Payne responded to the challenge. He moved the Bridgewater offensive line 25 yards for the first time in the game. Payne set tight end Tom Harland with a 20-yard touchdown pass with 1:30 to go in the first half. Curry's lead was cut to 21-7.

Late in the second quarter, Curry intercepted on its 35-yard line. They made advantage of the turnover. The team scores for its second touchdown, giving Curry a 34-7 lead.

On Bridgewater's first possession of the second quarter another easily turned into a third Curry touchdown. Bridgewater fumbled on its 18 and 1 yard line. Curry recovered. Seven plays later Wiese plunged from one yard for his second touchdowns of the game. A converted extra point advanced Curry's lead to 21-7.

Late in the second quarter, Mazzaferro reentered starting quarterback, sopho­ more Mike Walls, with freshman Greg Payson. Payson responded to the challenge. He moved the Bridgewater offensive line 25 yards for the first time in the game. Payson set tight end Tom Harland with a 20-yard touchdown pass with 1:30 to go in the first half. Curry's lead was cut to 21-7.

Curry went to the air in the start of the third quarter. They scored their fourth touchdowns on a pass to run by halfback Ed Ferretti. The point after fai­ led to their lead 28-7.

Later, a Curry field goal widens the gap over 10 points.

Despite the margin on the scoreboard, Bridgewater kept to its running game plan. "We're traditionally a running team," Mazzafero said after the game. "Our game was to keep the ball on the ground to keep their defense of the ball." But tradition fell victim to a superior team this time. Bridgewater was unable to sustain an effective running attack against a stable Curry defense.

The fourth quarter showed a no­ mean­ side. Bridgewater's Alfonso came back off the bench to cut the Curry lead with two touchdowns.

Homecoming committee plans campus festivities

by Hope Darcy

On November 1, Bridgewater State College will celebrate its annual Homecoming. The event brings together old as well as new friends. Students, faculty, administrators, alumni, and boosters of all ages show up to share in the festivities.

This is one of the few events of the year that makes use of the entire college. Not many communities can boast an event of this size. Homecoming is the centerpiece, at which the Bears take on the UMass Minutemen. There will also be the school-wide parade. Clubs and organizations are invited to participate by decorat­ ing and entering their own floats.

There will be a special morning and a special lunch. The Homecoming Committee hopes to have a special activity which will add to the college community's spirits. The Committee hopes the festivities will be enjoyable.

The Homecoming Committee needs the help of other people on campus. At the present time, the Committee consists of a few people who are ready to round out the committee. This is a great way to meet new people.

A 1983 female student was assaulted Sept. 11 on the dirt path that runs between Barrett Avenue and the Lower Great Pond. According to the campus police, the attack occurred between 9:30 and 10 a.m.

According to Vice President Dan Darcy, the administration could not wait for the S.G.A. to act.

It's still their project," said Darcy, "but we'll make sure that they get started working on it.

Also on Thursday, work crews were down trees and cleared underbrush that lined the path where the woman was assaulted. Spotlight was included along the path.

The woman was transported to the hospital treatment. Funding was frozen to know exactly where the money was going. Assistant Treasurer Sue Sullivan stated at a meeting that she had never seen security on campus. Other S.G.A. members commented that campus visibility was a major problem.

According to a map that Darcy presented, the path where the attack occurred would have been part of the patrol route. The security officer mentioned that the path was marked with numbers, of the S.G.A. to prepare for expansion coverage to include Worcester Field, according to S.G.A. President John Beaton. Work schedules that expand later into the morning hours and weekends will also be considered.

The officer heading the investiga­ tion offered comment to the Campus Police chief, who could not be reached.

Pity the plight of John Freshman

By Joanna Gruver

It was a day to see old friends and to get to know new ones. The final day of the summer after college was a chance to relax and enjoy the company of others before the busy school year started. Many students looked forward to the preparation of the college for the new academic year, and the excitement of meeting new people.

John Freshman was a typical freshman, eager to start his college career. However, he soon realized that college was not as exciting as he had imagined. The long hours of study and the pressure to perform well were more challenging than he had anticipated.

John's first class was a disaster. He didn't understand the professor's lectures and felt overwhelmed by the amount of work. He spent the entire class daydreaming about his next meal. After class, he went to the student union to grab a bite to eat. He ordered a cheeseburger and a cup of fries, but he couldn't even enjoy his meal. He was too busy thinking about his next class and how he was going to do well in it.

John's second class was marginally better. The professor was more engaging, and John was able to follow along with the lectures. However, he still found the material challenging. He spent the entire day studying for his next class, but he wasn't sure if he would be able to keep up.

As the weeks went by, John's situation only got worse. He struggled to keep up with his coursework and began to feel like he was failing. He was also struggling to make new friends and felt isolated from the rest of the freshman class.

John knew that he needed to change something, but he didn't know where to start. He talked to his advisor about his struggles, but he didn't feel like he was getting anywhere. He decided to start going to the tutoring center and spending more time studying. He also tried to be more social and attend some of the events hosted by the student union.

Despite his efforts, John's situation didn't improve. He continued to struggle with his coursework and felt like he was falling behind. He was also dealing with a lot of stress and anxiety, which made it hard for him to focus on his studies.

As the semester came to an end, John realized that he needed to make some big changes. He talked to his advisor about his options, and they recommended that he take a break from school and consider a gap year. He also talked to his family and friends, who encouraged him to take some time to figure things out.

John decided to take a gap year and focus on himself. He spent the year traveling, volunteering, and working. He also got involved in a local community organization and learned a lot about himself and the world around him.

The following year, John returned to school and was able to focus on his studies. He worked hard and was able to get good grades. He also made some new friends and was able to enjoy his time on campus.

In the end, John was glad that he took the time to figure things out. He learned a lot about himself and the world around him, and he was able to find his place on campus. He realized that college is not just about getting good grades, but also about personal growth and development.
Pity the plight of John Freshman

By James Burton

Pity the plight of the fresh­man...his college career may have ended before it has begun. He is lost in the black clouds of college and is doomed to an un­avoidable fate: to graduate only to lose his way once more in the wilds of society.

John, a typical freshman, feels overwhelmed by the immense size of the college. He is confused about his major and his future. His only hope is to find a group of friends who share his interests. But his interests are so varied that it is difficult to find a group that suits him.

John's grades are suffering. He is not used to the rigors of college and is struggling to keep up with the demands of his coursework. He is considering dropping out and starting over at a community college.

Fortunately, John's adviser is working with him to develop a plan to help him succeed. They are discussing majors, study strategies, and time management techniques.

The new president, John Freshman, is a true leader. He has a vision for the future of our institution and is working hard to make it a reality. I am excited to be a part of this new chapter in our history.

Indelicato has big plans for Bridgewater State

Dr. Indelicato assessed Bridgewater's strengths and weaknesses. He feels that it has a very good faculty, a distinct academic environment, and a strong work ethic. However, there are also some areas for improvement.

Dr. Indelicato would like to see the school offer more academic programs. He also sees the need for better facilities and more productive use of space. He hopes to improve these areas in the near future.

Indelicato said, "I want our students to feel at home here. We need to create a welcoming environment for all."
Voices of students should be heard by all

It is the beginning of a new semester. And it is the beginning of a new era at Bridgewater State College. We have a new president. Gerard Indelicato has replaced Dr. Adrian Ron- dition in the campus's equivalent to the Oval Office. Indelicato has promised to lead the campus in a pursuit of excellence. He has set standards, for the school and for himself. He has not taken office quietly. A number of changes have been made over the summer. Most visual are the improvements to campus landscape. New grass has been planted on worn spots. A attractive hedge-row now lines the stairway leading to Tillinghast Hall. The area adjacent to the Kelly Gymnasium, long a muddy eyesight during the spring and fall, has been improved. It is now a grassy island.

If only all problems were so easily solved. During a recent class activity, students were asked to outline some of the major problems of the campus. Understandably, they saw issues through the students' point of view. Parking, traffic, course registration, campus security, false fire alarms and walkways were all mentioned. These problems are not new. Students have been complaining about these issues for years. And this is the point. From the students' point of view, little has been done to address their complaints. Registering for courses is just as painful as ever. The parking situation has gotten steadily worse.

The administration has asked students not to walk on the grass for years. The students have asked the administration to install practical walkways, leading to buildings, for just as long. It would be unfair to say that these problems can be solved overnight. Obviously, there are constraints to what the administration can do. Funding is an persistent problem, and to say. However, from the point of view of the typical student, uninforme of bureaucratic limitations, it may seem that complaints go completely unans­wered. Perhaps administrators are working hard in the background. They may be fighting obstacles every step of the way. They may be reaching impasses.

The reality is, students see only results. Without results, and without open communica­tion from the administration concerning students' complaints, students feel ignored. The same complaints are made over and over. The advice is this. It is for the new president and his staff. Hear the students and let them know they are being heard. Report progress and impediments to the students. Then, perhaps students will feel their voice is heard above the clamoring of others.

A man of high standards in his home community, living as simply as he could. He went alone. Doug Benson had big hands. His habits of strolling into the city for unknown reasons were unusual. He'd walk in with a crooked, sheepish grin. "Hi, where are you?" he'd say deliberately. He riled me up.

My answer would be given quickly, I didn't always have time to see Doug. He lived his life at a leisurely pace, I like mood of his hands. Maybe I've grown too fast." He was carrying a bout $150. But I didn't know that. Doug attended, and invited others to attend, a bible discussion group. The people there were my friends and told the turnover constant, she added. "Doug was very humble," the people there were my friends and told the turnover constant, she added. Benson fondly recalled

Benson had big ideas and big dreams. When he was a boy, he had a habit of writing letters to the editor. A dream of being a newspaper executive was buried in his soul. He had a knack for finding the truth and exposing it.

When Benson was young, he was a member of the editorial board of the high school newspaper. He had a keen eye for spotting stories that needed to be told. This led to a career as a journalist.

Now Benson is an editor for a large national newspaper. He still enjoys the challenge of finding stories that will make an impact.

Caught between the lines at Bridgewater

Caught between the lines at Bridgewater, I am writing to you to express my concern about the current state of the campus.

The administration has made many changes over the summer, but the students feel left behind. I believe that the administration should be more attentive to the needs of the students.

Disarmament Debate

What's in the future for U.S. Soviet relations? Is a limited nuclear war “winnable”? Do the Soviets feel they can trust us, or do the opposite? The answers to these questions are the determining factors for international relations. The summit agreements, as well as the Nuclear Test Ban Treaty, were aimed at reducing the threat of nuclear war. The future may hold a nuclear arms control treaty, or it may not. The debate over disarmament continues until today.

Parking problems

Not Again!

By Knut Eirin

Parking regulations have been implemented by the Trustees of Bridgewater State College under the All-College Student Affairs Board. The regulations are intended to control the parking of cars on campus, and to avoid future parking problems as the college grows. The regulations apply to all faculty, staff, and students. The regulations include time limits for parking, as well as areas designated for specific uses. Although the regulations may seem strict, they are necessary to maintain a safe and orderly environment on campus.

Oil on Canvas

The artist behind the art

By Karen McCarthy

“Very highly abstract” is the term Rita McCarthy used to describe her paintings, currently on display at the Student Union Art Gallery. The reception to welcome McCarthy, Art Rep 10, marked the opening of her display, “Oil on Canvas”. The display will be exhibited until Oct. 6.

What I want to try for is to do more abstract painting, and to experiment with other media,” said McCarthy. “I would like to paint something that resembles the sea.”

Student describes first days at dorm

By Peter Marsiglio

As I drove up to Bolling Ave., my parents finally sat back. In the distance I could see an army of homes, and the hottest day of the summer. The air was humid, and I could not catch any breeze. What could be done about this heat? Starting a car pool program is one possible solution. For the moment we can only grin and bear it.

Parking problems Not Again!

By Knute Eiten

Parking regulations have been adopted by the Student Government and all College Student Affairs staff to solve the parking problem. The Boston Public Library now has a BCSC deal, which means that students who are parking in the library area may be charged a fee.

The library area is currently the busiest location on campus. By implementing the new policy, the library area may become more accessible for students.

Disarmament Debate

What's in the future for US-Soviet relations? Is a limited nuclear war "unthinkable"? Do the Soviets feel they can win in an arms race? Can we win in an arms race? In what way? Do the Soviets want to keep the end of the nuclear disarmament process?

People all over the country are demanding answers to crucial questions surrounding the nuclear arms race. On December 30, 1986, Ambassador Lewis Linfield will detail the issues surrounding the nuclear disarmament process.

Star Wars After the S sexes: Opposing Forces introduces Ambassador Lewis Linfield, who was the Chief Negotiator of the SALT II Treaty and is among the most authoritative and knowledgeable sources regarding nuclear disarmament. US-Soviet relations, and arms negotiated will be detailed in areas where agreements have been made, as well as those where negotiations have been unsuccessful. The recent nuclear arms agreement, the SALT II Treaty, and its implications will be discussed.

Human Factor fails to impress Bridgewater crowd

By Max Speed

Human Factor is a Hartford-based "cover" band. Actually they’re an original band that does covers. Well, they’re a little bit of both. They played in the coming and going of Friday, September 12, in a crowd of several. It was an intimate room and people just didn’t show up. The fact that people left after they showed up was their fault. I’m not saying that they’re a bad band, but they’re not as good as the best that they could be. The band contains five very talented musicians. I wish we didn’t have to rain on their parade, but we ran out of musicians.

How To Escape Audio Animals & Video Vampires

Lesson 1

There are lots of places to shop for TV, VCR, and stereo equipment.

But some of these places have salespeople who hate the blues.

Like smiling.

Or being helpful.

Or answering your questions knowledgeably.

Or simply leaving you alone when all you want to do is browse a little.

And pick up a catalog.

And learn what the salespeople make.

And nothing else.

And then exit.

Lesson 2

There are also lots of places to rent movies.

And, yes, you can even pick up copies of Ranso.

With our weekly pool shop.

Or Rock's, with a wide selection.

But try renting Warren Bott's Shauk's next to the Road & Shade Outlet.

Or Game With The Wind.

In that little strip of video voters.

In fact, there's very few reasons why you wouldn't find the kind of selection that you're looking for.

With a chance that you'll find something you'll really enjoy.

Lesson 3

And, you probably think all the best stores, like

L-1-A-T-O-R

...are D-1-M-G-

...and, well, you know the rest.

This is a common mistake.

Often, the best buy is at a store you'd barely ever imagine having good service.

Until you compare.

We're like everyone else.

In fact, our best customers are the ones you won't find.

So, why are they buying?

Lesson 4

There are literally thousands of places where you can get your TV, VCR, or stereo equipment serviced.

But most of these places have salespeople who hate the blues.

Sorry, we forget.

There aren't.

Lesson 5

Get the same service to all your D-1-M-G-

...and, well, you can't afford the best.

The difference came with 1:11 left in the 111 minute overtime when USM's Kristin Fader scored the winning goal off a rebound.

BCC junior Arleen Rexford (7 Saves) and junior Sharon Lee had exceptional games. Each stopped diffusion shots from points black and beyond.

Bears open with loss
Football team falls to Curry

By Bob Patterson

The Bridgewater State men’s varsity football team travelled to Curry College, matching-up against a stronger and more experienced challenger, enroute to a 38-21 loss.

Bridgewater closed out the scoring with slightly more than one minute left in the fourth quarter. The team was unable to sustain an effective running attack against a stable Curry defense.

Bob Barrett, tabbed as “one of the best quarterbacks in small college football,” by Bridgewater head coach Peter Mazzaferro, marched Curry 87 yards on nine plays. The drive was capped off by a 24 yard touchdown by senior running back Kevin Collette.

Barrett, lead by senior quarterback Bob Barrett and junior running back Michael Waithe (18 carries, 116 yards), dominated the game.

On Bridgewater’s second possession the running game started to collect yardage, but two costly penalties and a quarterback sack forced Bridgewater to punt on fourth and 28.

Bridgewater’s starting running back Mike Albertson was knocked from the game early in the first quarter with a rib injury. The running duties were left to sophomores Tom Ryan (11 carries, 101 yards) and freshman Frank Dinniman (18 carries, 44 yards).

Late in the first quarter, Curry intercepted a Bridgewater pass and ran off the play. They took advantage of the turnover to score, giving Curry a 14-0 lead.

On Bridgewater’s first possession of the second quarter another costly error led to a third Curry touchdown. Bridgewater fumbled on its own 19 yard line. Curry recovered. Seven plays later Wachle plunged from one yard out for the second touchdowns of the game.

The fourth quarter showcased a never-say-die Bridgewater offense. Wallace came back off the bench to cut the Curry lead with two touchdowns.

Bridgewater’s Mike Gallagher recovered a Curry fumble on the Curry 37 yard line. Wallace quickly hit flanker Gary McGarity with a 32 yard pass. The ball was spotted on the Curry five yard line. Two plays later, Wallace ran around the left end for a touchdown. But Curry answered with another fumble.
