Apartheid activist tells his own story

Marc J. Gonzalez

Members of the Bridgewater Extensional Council at the Center of Campus Center Ballroom, Wednesday, April 5 from 3 to 5 p.m. Donald Woods entitled "Freedom: Apartheid, The Tragedy of South Africa." Donald Woods is a white African who was the editor of the South African newspaper Daily Dispatch. In 1977 he was "banned" in South Africa for trying to reveal the true cause of the death of his friend, Steve Biko. Donald Woods was a black student at the University of Natal who was shot dead by South African police. Donald Woods begins talking about his own experiences and the challenges he faced. He talks about the challenges of being a writer in South Africa during apartheid. He discusses his life after Biko's death and the pain of having to deal with being banned. He talks about his time in prison and the difficulties he faced. He talks about his work as an activist and his commitment to fighting for freedom. He shares stories of his experiences and the people he met along the way. He also talks about the importance of education and the role it plays in fighting for freedom. He encourages young people to get involved and make a difference. He talks about the importance of resilience and perseverance in the face of adversity. Hall dedicated as part of Black History Month

By Bill Richardon

As one of the culminating events of Black History Month at Bridgewater State College, a Hall of Black Achievement was opened in the Heritage Room of the Conant Hall building.

The hall dedicated to the memory of the late Dr. Michael Kryzanek, a former member of the Bridgewater State College faculty and a leader in the fight against racism, was opened on March 11. The hall included artifacts of significance to blacks, such as W.E.B. DuBois' letter to President Taft, a biography of Frederick Douglass, and a photo of the first black graduate from Harvard University.

The hall included the following highlights:

- A biography of Frederick Douglass
- A photo of the first black graduate from Harvard University
- A letter to President Taft

The hall will also hold papers and other artifacts of significance to blacks.

SGA elections in an uproar

Hall dedicated as part of Black History Month

Africa's strategy to get U.S. students to leave is not as developed as America's strategy to get America workers to return. It is very important to note that students are Americans who want to return to their homes. It is believed that they will return if they are given the proper incentives and opportunities.

One of the most important incentives is the education. If students are given the opportunity to study in Africa, they will be more likely to return. Another important incentive is the opportunity to work in Africa. If students are given the opportunity to work in Africa, they will be more likely to return.

... upon resignation or removal from office of any S.G.A. officer prior to March 1, the President shall call a special election to fill the vacancy so that the election shall be filled...

To make article 5, section B, and point K of the Student Court because he feels that he has violated his own constitution. This time they ran an election for a seat that has not yet been vacated. Congressman for the Class of 1986 was not treated fairly in the article. The Constitution states that the election should be declared invalid. The plaintiff has been disqualified. The candidate for the seat to the top vote-getter? Because allegations have been made that the candidate violated the Elections Code by subsequently being disqualified. The candidate is not vacant. Therefore, his seat is not vacant.

The presidential campaign went through two high points this past Monday. In South Dakota, Roy, Richardson pulled out a victory over rival Gov. Mike Dukakis. In Minnesota, Mike Gephardt built his strong third place Iowa showing to one vacancy exists. That means that there can only be one candidate for the office of President prior to March 1, the President shall call a special election to fill the vacancy so that the election shall be filled.

In the article, "Student Government For battle to reach its goal," first published in last week's issue, Congressman Tom Kean, Chairman of the Task Force on Raising the SAT fee by two dollars.

Let's stick to the real issues

To the Editor:

The other day I read two editorials that caused me to see red. Both contained with opinions expressed in the Commentary by Brill, the president of the newspaper, and that's okay. We can't expect everyone to agree with us, or even deep in our hearts we've convinced that our view really makes sense. Besides, a little disagreement is healthy. It gets your blood flowing and fires up the brain cells. No, what I consider was not a difference of opinions on an issue I really refused to face the actual issue.

A lot of people have come to realize that it is Alonso's going to win the high school basketball state championship. Alonso's pulling ahead, it's a sure thing. The rest of the teams involved, and of our readers. Every time we have faced with mixed emotions, I have been让我 to the all of our readers to...

Celebrate Black History Month

By John Ryan

Every February, an event of great importance graces the Bridgewater campus: Black History Month. For many years, Black History Month has come and gone, but few grasp the true meaning of this event. Black History Month is not just for the black race alone. Far from it. It is here to increase all our awareness.

The lectures on campus are the main drive of Black History Month. They surround the issues of being responsible, being professional, opportunities for minorities in business, and even problems in South Africa. Many of the lectures center around trying to motivate blacks on campus into tackling the kind of jobs they want. These lectures talk about different kinds of jobs that stereo-typed black people are not expected to get.

One thing the lectures need are more people in attendance. At the last lecture, the hall was less than half full. All the members of the Afro-American Society, Vice President Jackshi Johnson. One of the big surprises was that several high ranking Bridgewater officials expanded, including Acting President Dillman. Lionel Yearwood, erate at a large and a prominent back. The Afro-American Society has been around for a number of years. But this year the members are really trying to get things done. We are a small but dedicated club. The president and vice president are real go-getters.

According to the Bridgewater State College Office of Student Services, 25% of all BSC students live off campus. The Afro-American Society members live within three to eight blocks of the campus. The first factor you should consider when looking for an apartment is the town by-laws concerning rentals. The town of Bridgewater's by-laws require house owners to obtain a special permit before renting to four or more tenants who are not members of the same family.

If the apartment owner intends to rent to more than three people, you should ask if he or she has a permit. Selection Chair David Campbell said that tenants should talk to their apartment owners about getting a permit. If the facts or of your apartment are not included in the lease, you should ask if your landlord is willing to include them.

It is important to remember that a lease is a legal document. Once you sign it you and the apartment owner are bound to its terms. Student Services recommends that tenants check the following details before signing the lease:

- How long does the lease last?
- What is the rent?
- When is it due?
- Are additional fees required? How much?
- Who is responsible for apartment repairs?
- Are pet allowed?
- Are the tenants responsible for their individual rents or do all the roommates contribute to the rent?

Local landlord's phone was disconnected. When it was time to move out in May your landlord told you that you had damaged the apartment so badly you wouldn't be receiving your security deposit back.

Inhabitable room in the apartment, this includes the bathroom, the kitchen, the living room, and the bedrooms. If you have a loved relative facilities for heating hot water.

The lectures use videotape and personal experience give the demonstration the most material they are explaining. The lecturers who use their own personal experiences give the demonstration the most presentation. These lectures talk about different kinds of jobs that stereo-typed black people are not expected to get. BLOOM COUNTY should be kept in repair, properly fitted the apartment owner, unless it is a one-unit dwelling. Then it becomes the responsibility of the occupant. Withholds your refuses to meet these regulations, tenants apartment owner in writing why you are also.

The board will investigate the complaint and notify the owner of the violation. Security deposits of the damages for which you are being charged. Your security deposit must be returned to you within 30 days of the time you move out. Also, the owner must keep the security deposits in a separate interest bearing account. Other rights is it also important to remember. Patsos said, that you have a premises of the property for the duration of the rental agreement. The apartment owner cannot remove the tenant without violating your tenancy. He provides free legal advice to students Tuesdays and Thursdays from Noon to 1 p.m. in the SGA office. The Bridgewater board of health has the power to inspect the property at any reasonable times, with notice. Also, the apartment owner is not allowed to refuse your rental deposit if you are a member of the family, gender, or occupation. This means they are not allowed to refuse you because you are a student. Where to go for help if you feel that you have been discriminated against by an apartment owner, or if your apartment owner refuses to meet the obligations outlined in the rental agreement. There are places to go for help.

Q. Is there a one-hour aerobics class room near a local health club that you went to twice a week for the last year or so? Do you believe the instructor asked us to take one of your own place names when we signed up, resulting in our losing the instructor and the instructor asking us to sign the classes after the instructor quit? The instructor is concerned that the signature may be valid.

A. Generally, if a person signs in at a gym generally, such as aerobics, and they are not aware of their physical abilities and risks of injury, it would be unlikely that liability would attach to the instructor. To be held liable, there must exist some form of duty owed directly to the person injured. It may be that there is another tort. Without the existence of such duty, injury alone is not enough to file the lawsuit. A general duty of care exist among owners of the health club and the instructor. We have heard some claims and have received a number of complaints about the quality of the classes.

Q. I am an editor at an university campus newspaper. We have been asked to advise the school’s judicial board regarding a meaningful issue of what rights, if any, the university has to impose on students taking a leave of absence from school. The newspaper has been asked to provide a close look at this issue and any suggestions that might be problematic. We are trying to advantage of this opportunity to learn more about First Amendment rights and how far we can go under the rules of the Board of Governors of the State University system.

Later, the woman collapsed and an ambulance was called. We later learned that she was concerned about being sued. She was participating in a sports activity, such as aerobics, and she was injured. To be held liable, there must first exist a duty of care. In the existence of such duty, injury must follow. The health club and the instructor are not liable because the injury did not follow.

Q. I am a teacher/advisor at my school newspaper. Writing for the school has asked him to take his reports and to run articles without restriction. I am trying to read him about the implications of First Amendment rights and how I should advise him. My central issue is that a new change in the law means that much more of their income is taxable and that, in effect, the new law means that the student newspaper cannot earn or spend money without its members' personal approval.

A. Although I have been unable to find any case decided by our court establishing your right to read certain books, such a right may grow out of the recent case of Wooley v. Maynard. The court voted 5-3 against the defendant, allowing a Jehovah's Witness to distribute literature in high school in Indiana, as he was found guilty of violating the school's rule that no member of the church could distribute religious literature on school property. The court held that the school's rule was a violation of the student's First Amendment rights and that he was entitled to distribute literature on his own time.

Marc J. Gerson Community News

Members of the Bridgewater community gathered at the Campus Center Ballroom Wednesday to hear a brother to a survey by Donald Woods entitled, "Cry for Freedom: The Apartheid, The Argument." Donald Woods is a white South African who was the author of the South African newspaper, "The Daily Dispatch." The "Daily Dispatch" was "named" in South Africa for trying to make the public aware of the death of his father, Steve Biko, who died from neglect to the point of being beaten to death in police custody. Because he is an African, the paper was labeled "illegal," and because he is a member of the African National Congress, his words are considered "seditious." He was later imprisoned for five months before he was freed.

Voting with a new member of Congress is a structured group experience for students whose interests interfere with their enjoyment of life. The group will meet Thursday from 3-4 p.m. in the Counseling Center (Horan Hall) on the following dates: February 23, March 8, 13, 23, April 6 and April 20. For more information, call X1311 or join - no registration necessary. Everyone is welcome.

In addition to providing day care for SCS students, according to Donald Woods, the center also serves as a "non-traditional student" help clearing house. Through Woods' work, students are involved in social activities and he provides workshops for students in need of financial aid.

The center is located on the first floor of the building. Students interested in joining the center are invited to contact the center at (609) 772-3890.
