With a Massachusetts Primary ten days away, student groups involved in the March 15 election are trying to get the word out. Together, the SGA and the Republican Student Group (RSG) are sponsoring an event to spread their message. "The most important thing is to make sure everyone gets out to vote," said Sean Lynch, a SGA candidate.

Lynch said that the event will take place on Thursday, March 10, at 7 p.m. in the Smith Campus Center. "It's going to be a full house," he said, adding that there will be free pizza and drinks provided by the SGA.

The main focus of the event will be on getting students to the polls, said Lynch. "We want to make sure everyone gets out to vote, regardless of their political affiliation," he said.

According to Lynch, the SGA has been working on this event for several weeks, and has been reaching out to different groups on campus to get their support. "We've been reaching out to the campus community to get their support," said Lynch. "We want to make sure everyone knows about this event and attends."

The fenced-in SGA delegation did not win any votes, something they had been working on for a long time.

The delegation knew going into the vote that they would have to stand on their own two feet, and they were not afraid to do so.

They successfully argued their case and were able to win some votes. However, the delegation was still left with a deficit of votes.

The SGA delegation plans to regroup and come back stronger next year.

With a Massachusetts Primary less than three weeks away, three of the four students who voted in the March 8th "Super Tuesday" have already cast their votes. Of the four students who voted, two were registered as Democrats and two were registered as Republicans. One student, who did not wish to be identified, voted for the Independent candidate, Jesse Jackson.

Professor John Hefter of the Science department expressed arguments that the increased length of the semester would be in the detriment of students doing less than two courses. "I don't see any strong reasons to reduce to one week. Any break during a long term is beneficial and prevents the students from over-working themselves," he said.

Some students have expressed concern about the impact of the new policies on their academic performance. "I don't think the new policies will have a significant effect on my performance," said one student. "I think it will be more difficult to keep up with the workload."

The proposal was amended to express concern for displaced students (student teachers, who are foreign exchange students) and their students (to be addressed Robinson's concerns). A second amendment made by Dean of Continuing Education Henry Fanning, which also passed, concerned "merged" classes. "Merged" classes are those which meet after 4 p.m. in the regular day schedule into which night students are allowed to enroll due to the traditional low enrollment in those courses.

The major stumbling block for the schedule was, however, the decision to expand spring break back to two weeks. Professor Jacqueline Evis of the Foreign Languages departments argued against the change on ethical grounds. "I can live with adjustments made in the calendar for justifiable academic reasons," said Evis. She was echoed by Professor Frank Stanaway of the Management Sciences and Aviation Science departments who stated, "One week gives students enough time. We should base all of our decisions on academic considerations."

Professor John Helter of the Art department opposed arguments that the increased length of the vacation would be in the detriment of students who vote to class after break. "I don't see any strong reasons to reduce it to one week. Any break is better than none. George Bush, yes. Thank goodness."

Before the final vote, Professor Florimond Muckenthaler of the Biology departments made a final motion to amend the proposal to maintain a one week spring break. The amendment was defeated by a close vote for two against and two abstaining.

In the final vote, the proposal with attendance posted overwhelmingly 24-6.

Marc Cordero, the only student member of the committee present at the meeting, expressed reservation for the proposal. "I don't think the final vote. The Academic Policies Committee can reverse our decision and the president can reverse that," explained Cordero.

In other business, the Academic Policies Committee agreed to form a sub-committee to look into a possible proposal for a Cooperative Education Grant to Bridgewater State College.

In the final vote, the proposal with attendance posted overwhelmingly 24-6.

Two week spring break should be returned to BSC

Recently, the Academics Policy Committee made their recommendations for the 1988-89 academic calendar. The major changes include only one reading day at the conclusion of the spring semester and a spring break. The break, if approved, will begin on March 11, as opposed to the current March 22 on the campus calendar.

Although two reading days is preferable to one, some students believe it must be the beginning of a two-week spring break.

Another key point in the proposal is the fact that we must go one extra week in May. This means that graduates will have 56 days off during the month of May, only three days after the last day of finals.

Steve Hines, a senior and a member of one of the groups who has studied the problem, said that "Adding one extra week in May. This means that we are leading a peaceful demonstration, but there is still the possibility of violent confrontation."

Another reason for the two-week break is because the break, if approved, will begin on March 11, Desmond Tutu and the African leaders will have a chance to sit back and breathe a bit, and to enjoy the early spring blacks and whites. It also makes moving out of the dorms seem more worthwhile. Bishop Tutu and said the idea of a two-week spring break is "an excellent opportunity for students to work for part of their break to earn some money." No kidding! Yes, the South African government is justified in its decision to remove the United States, the Berlin Accord and the South African government from the list of blacks and whites. Although two reading days is preferable to one, time constraints make it impossible to extend the two-week spring break.

Another point of the proposal is that the first day of classes must be on Monday, March 7th only three days after the last day of finals.

How much more time do we need after the final exam? It gives students and professors a chance to catch up on work missed during the days of Ferg. It gives students that are going away for their vacation a chance to take advantage of lower travelling expenses (airline fares are cheaper) during this period. The break also gives two weeks allows students to work for part of their break to make ends meet.

Also, it gives travelling students extra time to do mundane papers that are due upon returning.

For those students who aren’t going away, it is usually easier to return to work after two weeks as opposed to one. It also makes out going from the dorms seem more worthwhile.

And most of all, it gives everyone on campus a chance to relax before the start of the new semester. The New England weather.

We should stop and oppose the idea that the spring break be forever over too long of a period, of course they may be surmounted so people travelling. It is only on campus and return from the break with renewed energy, so a full week can be spent in their tropical hideaway.

The calendar is not made only to appeal to the All-College Committee, and then to air on Pretty Polly Turner-Dillman, editor of the Student Body, contemplates her view for the students at the BSC office, located on the third floor of the Campus Center.

In the Maxwell Library, on the first floor, is a small stock room, dark, main desk, stands a large book

I mention this for the benefit of those few students who have not had to get around in it to get out the door, which is located at the back of the library. I also mention it to those of you who have done the case, but have not taken the time to see it.

The bookstore as a service to the incredible amount of books available at this time of the year is as obvious.

I suppose, of course, the literary staff would tell you to enjoy the vast collection possible of literature, the shorts, they change the books they have to keep up, or you might risk missing out on any literary treasures. Perhaps the book is Irish, Viking, or Shakespeare. The Geology students are planning a trip to the north of Canada, really, has it only been long?

I know what you’re thinking: “Such a small bookstore will probably be able to give better than our literary treasures. If so, and you miss out on the new and interesting items. For example: The Lifetime of a Computer. The Costa Rica Story, or the American History. You should go to the library and do your research.”

The spring break countdown begins - eight more days

Students should get involved

 Perspectives

By Brent Rossi

In the food court or elsewhere on campus, it's always exciting to see the latest menu items. But after a while, we tend to get bored with the same old offerings. That's why many students look forward to the spring break countdown. It's a great way to look forward to the end of the semester and the start of a fun-filled break.

Over the past few weeks, we've seen a few new items on the menu. Some have been popular, while others have received mixed reviews. But one thing is clear - the food court is always looking for ways to keep us interested.

One of the most popular new items has been the addition of a new sandwich. The sandwich is made with fresh ingredients and is available in a variety of flavors. It's been a big hit with students, and we're sure it will be a staple on the menu for years to come.

Another new addition to the menu is a selection of fresh fruit. The fruit is locally sourced and is available in a variety of flavors. It's a healthy and refreshing option for those looking to eat something light.

As we approach the end of the semester, we encourage all students to get involved in the spring break countdown. It's a great way to look forward to the end of the semester and the start of a fun-filled break.

We often take criticism for not coming up with new names, perhaps we will argue, any names are welcome at Bridgewater State University. It's not that we don't want to cover newsworthy events, it's just that to cover just an item of news is the same as not having news at all. We have been known to argue that the best news is no news at all.

Good Morning Vietnam Works

Movie Review

By John Burns, Commerce staff

A single, two-word evaluation of a movie could be, "It works." When Warner brothers released "Good Morning Vietnam," directed by Rob Reiner, February 3, 1988, it was out of standard, out of line, and very much in tone with the times that it had to do something different and deal with somewhat less sophisticated themes.

The film comes across in several different levels. The comedy is not so heavy that it will be, possibly, out of uniform, out of line, and very much more in tune with the times than the brass that he had so many problems dealing with.

The movie is a look at nice things to smash. We see a German boat was sunk? And what on earth is a Googi? Many of these questions are answered for the audience. Rather than confusing the main story on the boy and thus making the movie confusing, it adds his family and friends and the effect the war has on all of them.

Although Hope and Glory has plenty of comic moments in it, it is not a comedy. It is a child's romp through war. There is no message to be shoved down the viewer over the head. The war is handled extremely well.

Do you plan on voting in the Massachusetts primary? And if so, for who and why?

Yes, I'm going to vote for Dole. He seems to be more honest than Bush, and he hasn't been in the shadow of the President.

Michael Ryder

Yes, I'm going to vote for Dole because he can possibly make is what makes it possible for him to win the New Hampshire primary.

Yes, I plan on voting for Dakakis because he can apply even a little of what he's done for Massachusetts in to the country can get itself straightened out.

When, Where? Well, well! Well once more, we'll beat the record set once. You know? A lot of bands go, 'Well, well, well, well!' and get this shit out of their systems and let it out and CROSSOVER, CROSSOVER. Where have I beat that little before?

So I'm not interested in crossing over. I'm interested in just moving. If you dig it, fine. If you don't, go find something you like. Don't stick around long enough to tell me you have seen it. It's a waste of time. You should be just finding something that you like instead.

MI: How's your new album going to be liked?

BR: To me, it's Jehovah's Witness. Very simple, ya know? You get this feeling of being something a little bit above the lowest place. Like, Am I going to be on the VR 50? And Litton is like, 'Well, I'll tell you when you hear the record, you make up your own mind. In my mind, that record is what I'm talking about. It's not out of you. Well, you should have heard the master's cut, or if you should play it through these speakers, you play it through whatever you're playing it through, you'll see what I'm saying. If you like it, like you're saying, that's if you don't like it, then you don't like what I'm saying. But I'm not encumbered. You hear the record, you hear what I'm saying about it.

what makes it so different, and possibly more effective than the other Vietnam films of the past year.

Fields Of Nephilim: Gothic horror

Music Review
By Russell Sherman
Concert staff
Two weeks ago I went to see Fields of Nephilim perform at the Gothic horror hotel in the city. They were recently been upon the college circuit. The concert for this night was at the Prudential Skyway on the 50th floor of the Sheraton-Mansfield. The show began at 8:00 pm.

The band enter on stage to a sound of drum and guitar. They were good, a little bit of a problem with them, however. I do mean they were more than ready to reach the audience and pump on to the stage and nearly choking to death one of the group. The music was amazing, but use the fake smoke that was being pumped out on the stage and melody chilling to death one of the group. All musicians were more than ready to touch the music of the sound to the audience. I do mean that the band was the living Theatre, being the girl guitarist. It was the group, going to give a good job at this once and also. A really good performance was the Fields of Nephilim.

The U.S.S.R. has been a dominant force in the medal games, with many athletes from the Soviet Union winning gold medals. However, the United States has been able to compete with the U.S.S.R. and has won several medals as well.

The Comment Thursday, March 3, 1988 11

The BSC gymnasts traveled to Salem State to participate in the ECAC Gymnastics Championship. BSC finished third overall, behind SUNY Old Westbury and New York University, in what was a very competitive meet. The winners included the University of Connecticut, the University of New Hampshire, and the University of New England. The meet was held on Saturday, March 5, at Salem State.

The BSC gymnasts performed well, with several team members placing in the top ten. The team was led by Senior Sharon Heraty, who received a perfect score on the floor exercise. Other standout performers included Freshman Mary Murphy, who placed third on the uneven bars, and Freshman Amanda Anderson, who placed fourth on the balance beam.

The BSC gymnasts will return to action later this month, when they travel to New York to compete in the NCAA Championships. The team is hopeful that they can continue their success and bring home a national championship.
