"When you're not there, you're selling yourself. I want you to be successful and make a lot of money. But you've got to dress successfully and look that way," said Kathleen Pratt as she addressed the Dress for Success seminar held last Friday.

The program was co-sponsored by both the Society for the Advancement of Management Science and the Career Planning and Placement Office, and attracted a moderate crowd to the Heritage Rooms at the Maxwell Library.

She has worked personally with more than 500 men and women from varied careers and backgrounds in the areas of color analysis, career search, education, and image on the job, and brand awareness.

She quoted a great deal about fashion. She said that "fashion is an art form that expresses the personality of the individual," and that "it is an expression of self-confidence and self-esteem."

She spoke from her personal experience and从from many clients she has worked with. She explained that "fashion is not just about looking good, but about feeling good about yourself. It is about being confident and comfortable in your own skin."

She also emphasized that "fashion is a tool for self-expression, a way to communicate your personality and your message to the world."

She concluded by saying that "fashion is a powerful tool for personal growth and development. It is a way to express your inner self and to show the world who you are."

Student Trustee candidates

F. Scott Longo

Why do you want to remain student trustee?

To be honest, I think it's important to keep a little constancy on the board. The board made a lot of decisions last year. That's not going to happen again if I can re-elect, I can use that happen before. Also I have three years of student advocacy work behind me, I've been in the mainstream, I've fought for financial aid, I've fought for student rights, and I can stand up for students and work for the students, whether I agreed with them or not.

What are your qualifications?

Housing changes in store on lower campus for next year

The housing changes that are in store for lower campus may have a significant impact on students. The changes are being driven by several factors, including increased enrollment, limited space, and the need to provide more options for students.

The changes will likely include increased density in the dormitories, the introduction of co-ed living arrangements, and the implementation of new policies regarding moves, room assignments, and community events.

These changes are expected to have a significant impact on students, and it is important for them to be aware of these changes and to prepare for them appropriately.

DON'T FORGET!
China and the revolutionary spirit Mao and beyond

By Christine Howard

To the average American the concept of revolution is related to the American Revolution, which happened and its over. The concept of a cultural revolution in China is the way to understand the years. Mao Zedong and the Cultural Revolution is a part of this.

"This is one of the many concepts that Dr. Nancy Street has covered in her lecture, "The Revolutionary Spirit China," in the United States. The concept of the Cultural Revolution seems to have come to an end in the late 60s, Street explained. "This is still causing distress in China for many people who were Red Guard at the time, and who were 14 or 15 years old and thought that they were working for a greater vision, and turned in friends and family to the Red Guard."

People who were turned into the Red Guard were placed in prison. Professors were often incarcerated in their own classrooms. They were also sent to factories, the army, and to the country. "Since they were an educated elite who were taking the wrong road, the capitalist road, they then had to go live with the peasants to be re-educated," Street said.

Dean Si, one of the victims of the Cultural Revolution that Street interviewed, was sent to Shanxi after being in solitary. "It would be a 5-15 year plan to make all the buildings accessible. The amount of money for this type of project which is allocated by the SGA is 1 million dollars, and Bridgewater's total comes to two million dollars. There is not enough money to go around," Perry said. Huber continued to say that the Administration will be buying another machine to allow the handicapped students access from the pool deck to the pool, itself. Stated Huber, when asked why couldn't the administration of the college buy both machines, "there is simply not enough money to buy both."
An insider's up on tipping

Have you tipped your waitperson today?

To the Editor:

Perhaps it was the announcement that the Bell Ringing Ball would be held in the Student Union that left you with the desire to tip. That's a reasonable suspicion, as that event does promise to be more enjoyable than usual. However, the carefree spirit of the Bell Ringing Ball is not the only reason to be generous. There is another reason that is just as good:

The bottom line is this: if student employees put in the time, they should not only get their tips, but also be paid.

The SGA is aware of the problems that arise from this issue; however, the current method of payment for student employees is flawed. There are three main problems:

1. The system for determining how much to pay student employees is not based on their time. Instead, it is based on a percentage of the total amount of tips collected.

2. The system for determining how much to pay student employees does not take into account the amount of time that student employees spend working.

3. The system for determining how much to pay student employees is not flexible. It is based on fixed rates for different shifts, and cannot be adjusted as needed.

The SGA is aware of these problems, and is currently working on fixing them. In the meantime, if you would like to tip a student employee, you are welcome to do so.

students should police administrative actions

Commentary by Brian Hughes

Laws work, Monica McNamara stated that the SGA should not be involved in the business of BYU Hall Hall. Why is that? The SGA is a student-run organization, opposed by Congress members and other school organizations. Why should the students who work for the SGA be subject to the same rules as the students who work for the BYU Hall Hall?

It is not unreasonable for Congress members to demand that the SGA follow the same rules as the BYU Hall Hall. Congress members are elected by the students, and are therefore responsible for enforcing the rules that the students have agreed to follow.

However, it is unreasonable for Congress members to demand that the SGA follow the same rules as the BYU Hall Hall. Congress members are elected by the students, and are therefore responsible for enforcing the rules that the students have agreed to follow.

The SGA is a student-run organization, and should be run by the students. Congress members should not be able to dictate how the SGA operates.

The Hot Line: Help is just a phone call away

By Bryon Hayes

A group of students at Bridgewater State College have formed a Campus Based Hot Line. It's not a head-line band or well known comedian. It's a group of students who want to let others know that there is someone willing to listen to their problems and talk to them. This organization is the campus based Hot Line.

The Hot Line, which was started several weeks ago, is finally beginning to be noticed. Founded by the Peer Ministers, an outgrowth of the Catholic Center, this Hot Line serves to help students by letting them know a person their own age is willing to listen to any problems they may have. Renee Mitiguy, a Peer Minister from the Class of 1988, stated that this idea was formed after she and other people tried to determine the needs of the campus and find out in what ways they could help. "The Hot Line seemed like an excellent idea, since this would be a way for students to talk about their problems to people their own age." This, also, would not intimidate the students who might be wary of speaking to faculty members or other groups.

Mitiguy stated that she became involved because she was a member of the Catholic Center, but because she likes to help people and feels she is a good listener. She also wants everyone to realize that the people who work the Hot Line are not there to judge, but to listen and, if necessary, be a referral service. "When a person calls and the listener feels that more help is needed than we can offer, we offer them the number of a group—be it the Rape Crisis Center, the Samaritans, or others. We have a list of other organizations which may be better suited to serve their needs."

Another Peer Minister, Jacques Barbour, is enthusiastic about this program and what purpose it will serve to the college community. He became involved because he has enjoyed assisting others, and was pleased with this type of set-up on campus. "This is something very worthwhile and positive on campus. It tells the students that they are not alone when they have a problem; there is someone out there who wants to know how they feel."

Barbour said that he had done this type of work before and knows how to handle a variety of situations. When one of the first phone calls came through, Barbour stated that he was nervous. "It was strange at first, talking to someone you don't really know. But after the call, it was very rewarding and it felt good saying words which made them feel good about themselves."

He also said that there is always one person out there (in the community) who is willing to listen to what another person has to say. He feels that the Hot Line will provide this, and more people will be willing to phone the group. Mitiguy believes that many people may have misconceptions about the Hot Line. "This is here to help the students, not to recruit people for the Catholic Center. All too often, students hear those two words and shy away from any aspect which deals with it. But feels that many students have this misconception, but wants that it is not true. "One goal is to listen to their problems and that's all."

Both Barbour and Mitiguy are optimistic about the future of the Hot Line. Although it is only open Thursday, Friday, and Saturday from 10:00 pm until 2:00 am, the goal for next year is to expand the hours to include other nights, not just the weekend.

This semester, the Hot Line will end its service on April 30. Barbour hopes that at this time next year, the Hot Line will still be in service. He said, "During finals, there is a lot of stress about their classes and that they are going to phone their friends, so we are needed. The Hot Line will serve this purpose."

Henry Rollins is not just the singer for Black Flag

Henry Rollins is not just the singer for Black Flag, he is a writer, an editor, a publisher, a film director, a photographer, and a musician. He has been a member of the band Black Flag since 1980, and has been a prominent figure in the punk rock and hardcore scenes for over 20 years. Rollins has a diverse range of interests, and his music and writing often reflect his love of literature, philosophy, and politics.

Rollins was born in Los Angeles, California, in 1954. He began his career in music as a member of the band Black Flag, and has since founded several other bands, including Dead Kennedys and Guns N' Roses. Rollins is also the founder and editor of the magazine, The New York Times, and has written several books, including "This Century," "The Time, the Place & the People," and "Shut Your Face!"

Rollins' music is often characterized by its raw, aggressive sound, and his lyrics often address political and social issues. His work has been praised for its intensity and honesty, and he has been described as a "punk prophet."

Henry Rollins has been a significant figure in the punk rock and hardcore scenes, and his work has been influential in shaping the music and culture of these genres. He continues to be an active musician and writer, and is widely regarded as one of the most important figures in contemporary punk rock.
Henry Rollins is not just the singer for Black Flag

By Max Speed

Henry Rollins is not just the singer for Black Flag, he is a talented musician and performer in his own right. His stage presence is captivating, and his music is diverse and experimental.

I don't know who does it, but whoever it is, I wish they'd stop. I'm talking about the person who books a really awful heavy metal band in between two really good punk/hardcore bands. Monday night at The Living Room in Providence, Psycho and Toxic Shock opened up for Henry Rollins, and it was like a flashback to the Circle Jerks show a few months ago.

Toxic Shock is a death-metal band that is so stereotypical that there's no need to go into what they're like. With song titles like "Stairway to Henn" and "Gates of Fire," I think you get the picture.

First on, however, was Boston's Psycho. As usual, they blistered through their set with hardly a breath, and tried to crank up both of the people who were there early enough to see them. Charlie Infective's drumming never fails to amaze me, as he sits behind a kit that even Keith Moon would be proud of and belts out the fastest rhythms that I've ever heard. He does this while he sings, folks. They played a lot of stuff from their new album that will be out soon.

Toxic Shock came next, and I think the rest of the crowd shared my feelings about them because when the lead singer said that they were going to play their last song, they all cheered and threw stuff. On came Rollins who explained to the audience that he was surprised that he was invited back because there were only about fourteen people there last time he played The Living Room. By this time, the crowd had filled out quite a bit and Henry gave them more than their money's worth. He didn't play any Black Flag or Henrietta Collins, but he did play one of the most diverse sets I've ever seen. At times it bordered on post-punk, reminiscent of Joy Division and Bauhaus, and at other times it went beyond the speed of anything he's ever done. Speaking of post-punk avant-garde art-rock, (let's compartmentalize a little more, shall we?-Ed.) after the set, the bassist left his bass on top of his amp and let it feed back while Henry banged it around and made weird noises with it.

Rollins is quick with a comeback—when a member of the audience yelled out "You Suck!," Rollins quickly replied "Wait a minute ... There's a difference between what you say and what I say. You say that I suck, and I say that I'm the greatest. One of us has to be right, so it might as well be me." Maybe you had to be there.

Anyway, Rollins is a man who's always looking for something new, and he closed his encore with a song that he wrote two weeks ago called "I Feel Like This." Can't get much newer than that, can you?

Rollins has a special way of getting an audience into his own moods and feelings through his actions and expressions. If there's ever been a performer as enigmatic as Rollins, I don't know about it.
Bridgewater basketball team easily defeats Mass. Maritime, 70-45

Men's Lacrosse

The Bears are on a roll in the season's final stretch with a 12-4 victory over UMass-Lowell Saturday at Legion Field. The win gives BSC control of the Maritime Center again.

Bridgewater batters Mike Marini and Kevin Higgins and put together a fast double play to score two runs. The hit by Marini was a sacrifice fly, and Higgins moved over second on the play for the final run of the game. BSC led the game 9-0 in the bottom of the fourth, with Bridgewater's second runner, Tim Bishop, crossing the plate to make it 9-0.

By the third inning, the trend has turned, and Bridgewater's lead has dissipated. But in the bottom of the fourth, Bridgewater led 9-0 again. The game was over as quick as a lightning bolt. The Bears took the win, 9-0.

Bridgewater had two sacrifice fly outs, scoring two runs in the bottom of the fourth. Bridgewater's lead was never in question, as they scored nine runs in the bottom of the fourth, taking control of the game from the start.

Baseball team easily defeats Mass. Maritime

By Adrian Huynh

Mass. Maritime player Pete Moreau struck up the day of baseball against Bridgewater State in one minute, but did not offer: "Did you ever lose one of those games when you went right in?"

This game was the first of the two teams and it ended with the score of 9-0.

Bridgewater started their winning streak with a second game against Mass. Maritime and the teams met for the second game at their home court on April 16. The game ended with the score of 6-3.

Bridgewater also faced a challenge against Fitchburg State, but they managed to pull off a win with the score of 17-3.

Men's Lacrosse has their first win of season

By Angela Caraconni

The Men's Lacrosse team, after struggling through tough losses, finally came up with a well deserved win. They defeated Newbury College 15-10 in a hard fought battle.

The second game of the double header was similar to the first, except for the score. Once again, Bridgewater started the scoring. Evans started with a single, and moved to second on another wild pitch by Mass. Maritime pitcher Jack Groes. Evans scored on a fielder's choice hit by Mercadante, giving Bridgewater a 1-0 advantage.

Bridgewater would go on to score one run or more for each inning remaining in the game.

In the bottom of the second, Mass. Maritime pitcher Kevin Higgins reached first, after Mass. Maritime pitcher Mercadante threw out the first baseman. As a result, Bridgewater pitcher Benoit was allowed to score, and Higgins hit a single to third which was Enos allowable. Higgins was then hit by a pitch to load the bases. The next batter, Ken Rentz, got his hit, and was followed by Doug Benoit, who scored a run on a wild pitch by the catcher Mercadante.

Lady Bears Softball team wins

By Angela Caraconni

The Big Bear softball team comes out on top against two of their opponents as they have successfully won both games in the first round of the season. Their last victory was against SMU and Plymouth State College.

Last Thursday the Lady Bears traveled to Bentley College and came out with two wins 6-5 and 6-4.

Taking the scoring in the first game was Kenedy McGough, Kathy Carr, Sue Hodgkins, Sheila Melady, Donna Landry and Kim Newcomb all with one run each.

Rancs were scored by Karl who had two hits, Redwood, Melody and Janet DeGiglio each scored one run.

Bridgewater track: headed for SMU

By Angela Caraconni

The Men's and Women's track team are competing with great success in their last game, once again defeating Nichols College with an excellent day at the Fitchburg Invitational.

For the day, Greuter had two more successful days and the team comes to town.

The Lady Bears played in Plymouth State with the scores of 6-5 and 6-4.

The pitching skills of Kirby Redd held Plymouth to three hits and two runs. Redd also had one walkout. Pitcher pitched the second game 1-0 and striking out three batters. McGough, Melody, Landy and Cathy Fitchett all scored for Bridgewater.

The softball team play two MACSGA league games this week, Saturday day, host Fitchburg State and BSC 1-0 and then Worcester State comes to town.

Don't miss the exciting softball team, as the Lady Bears look to continue their winning streak.

Women's Rugby team challenged by champs

What better way is there to spend a day on the Charles River than playing rugby? The Benedictine Women's rugby team were challenged Saturday for a scrimmage against Harvardians Rugby.

Benedictine, a nationally ranked team, currently hosted a rugby clinic at Latitudes Junior College, attended by some of the women ruggers.

Intramural Softball update

Despite the cold weather, intramurals have been going on. Bridgegard was not successful in winning the scrimmage, as a whole, the team earned a good effort.

Bridgegard was shown what areas they need to work on, and are working hard to improve. It's been a dream of the clinic and the scrimmage, Bridgegard hopes to host Providence College and Bryant College in coming weeks.
