Lady Bears suffer a heartbreaker

By Joe Croley
Special to The Comment

The Bridgewater State Field Hockey team competed in the NCAA Division III Regional Field Hockey Tournament on Saturday, November 5. Following the tournament, the Lady Bears were seeded number one in the NCAA Northeast regional poll and secured third in the tournament.

The team that qualified for the tournament was Central State University, William Smith, Bridgewater State and Salem State. The number one seeded college, Central State, in New York, Bridgewater was scheduled to play the number two team, William Smith at 2 p.m. on Friday.

Bridgewater came out strong in the first half, accumulating possession of the ball from the start, but William Smith soon gained strength of their own and the struggle began. Bridgewater scored off a corner in the first half when Charlie Puzzo crossed the ball to Francesca McGrath who hit a strong shot into the goal. Players from each team fought for the ball in front of the William Smith net, but the ball went in, bringing the score to 1-0.

At this point, the game was evenly matched. Halfway through the game, however, William Smith scored. Bridgewater tried diligently to score again, but by the end of the second half the score was 1-1. The game continued two extra overtime periods in which Bridgewater swarmed Bridgewater with right defensive play, aggressive offensive play and maintained possession of the ball for the entire time. The Lady Bears were unable to score however.

The Bears were forced into two overtime overtimes and the officials called for a sudden death. Final William Smith photos were taken in the middle of the field while the Bears sat on the floor. On Friday, November 3rd, the Heritage General Reception was held in the Maxwell Library. At this event, he was able to converse with faculty, staff and the students. He then thanked everyone for coming and spoke of the college as a strong success story and stated that, "Bridgewater stands to benefit in years ahead."

Eckman explained that he's been to tap in the book on the Greek Council may agree to allow Alpha Epsilon's return

By David Flannery

The council asked that Alpha Epsilon provide a list of all active members, the name of an advisor and planned activities for the year. The three representatives of Alpha Epsilon did not provide a list of members or the name of an advisor because they were presently unrecognized by the council and the administration. They indicated that they would provide both names on the following Monday. They also mentioned the presence of new programs and a list of potential advisers at next week's meeting in the event the vote is taken.

The members of Alpha Epsilon are hoping that they can be voted in and then be able to get as many pledges as they can. They are also looking for a house to move into, such as a house. Overall, they want to be active again and receive pledges, which is something they say they cannot do until they are recognized.

If the council accepts Alpha's petition, it will take place on several conditions. First, Alpha Epsilon will have to recognize their pledges and attend Greek Week in the spring of 1987, as well as some zoning law violations. Alpha needs a two-thirds vote of the council next term to get recognition or probation as a non-recognition member and later, at the end of the academic year, will need a one-third member vote to be accepted back on the council as a full member. As a voting member, they would be a part of the Greek Council and the Greek Council would encourage a council on why their inactivity should be taken back, using information guidelines set by the council.

The council asked that Alpha Epsilon provides details of the new programs and a list of potential advisers at next week's meeting in the event the vote is taken.

Lastly, the council asked that Alpha Epsilon provide details of new programs and a list of potential advisers at next week's meeting.

Dr. Ravi Chopra, the Director of the People's Science Institute in Dehra Dun, has come to speak to Bridgewater State problems that India faces today over the main topics of discussion. 'By helping increase the wealth of the nation will help increase the wealth of the people.' This will happen by the trickle down theory. This is the theory of the Indian Republic. A University student's perspective on the Indian education system, which decreases productivity. This is a government project known as the Green Revolution. Chopra said, "the government is buying time, 20-40 years at the most." The removal of taxes for industrial use has had adverse effects. Only 11% of India has a fertile productive soil. It is a country which was once covered with forests. "The loss of the forest effects the soil," he stated. The India government is aware of this.

India faces major problems because of the exploitation of the environment. Chopra stated, "we are in a state of the environment you are living in." India's environment has been altered by the presence of agricultural soil and the removal of trees. The population of India will reach one billion by the year 2000. To deal with the country's dense population, they have strapped up food production. The effects of intensive agriculture is wealth trickles down. 'The rich get richer, the poor keep getting poorer.'

The pitfalls of registration

By Byron Hayes

It's fall of the year again, when students across Bridgewalker State College register for their spring semester courses. Registration begins earlier this week, on Monday, November 7, and will conclude on Friday, November 11.

When students register, however, there are several aspects which they should take into account. First, students should make appointments with their respective advisors early in the registration period, as this is the annual "crunch" which occurs at the end of the semester. This will alleviate the search for advisors, who will be shuffling busy schedules at the registrar's office.

Second, meeting with one's advisor will allow the student to discover which courses must be taken to satisfy General Education Requirements (GERs), and ones which fulfill vacancies in a student's major and minor fields of study.

It's the last day of fall again, when students across Bridgewater State College register for their spring semester courses.

Registration began earlier this week, on Monday, November 7, and will conclude on Friday, November 18.

When students register, however, there are several aspects which they should keep in mind.

First, students should make appointments with their respective advisors early in the registration period, as the annual "crunch" occurs at the end of the semester.

This will alleviate the stress for advisors, who will be shuffling busy schedules as the registration period comes to a close.

Second, meeting with one's advisor will allow the student to discern courses which must be taken to satisfy General Education Requirements (GERs), and ones which fulfill vacancies in a student's major and minor fields of study.

Students who register should also avoid the "last minute rush" of filling out the courses.

Students should always try alternatives to their "first choice" classes, another option of the one chosen as a student's first pick. This will ensure a better possibility of receiving a seat in the course.

Another point to watch is to make sure that the student's chosen classes are the social science or history classes.

When signing up for a laboratory course, students are advised to make sure they sign up for both the correct lecture and lab combination.

Teaching or bearing the course from one to a result in a mismatch of the computer, and a loss of courses.

Necklace Exchange Program Initiated

The first government-sponsored "necklace exchange" program will give drug addicts chances to return to society.

The program is aimed at helping drug addicts return to their families and communities.

Under the program, drugs will be exchanged for valuable items such as jewelry, clothing, or for lamp beads, or for other items.

The program is designed to help drug addicts reintegrate into society and avoid further prosecution.

The program has been successful in several countries, including the United States and Canada.

The program has been praised for its potential to reduce drug use and to improve the lives of drug addicts.

The program has also faced criticism for its potential to create a market for illegal drugs.

The program is currently being expanded to other regions in the United States.

Where are all the ‘movers’ and ‘shakers’ on campus?

Apology. No. 1, lack of emotion. 2. lack of interest. 3. join any activities. Is there really no one interested in anything anymore? Is it time to give up the ghost and accept the fact that there are no more students involved in extracurricular activities? Does anyone have any idea of what goes on here at Bridgewater State College? College is a one shot deal. It is a place where one goes to for self-development, to be taught about the world, to find out what they are doing in their future. Anybody who is at all involved in extracurricular activities, or in the world of academia is certainly doing the right thing and should be commended for their efforts. To the Editor:

Where are all the ‘movers’ and ‘shakers’ on campus?

A ady, n. 1. lack of emotion, 2. lack of interest/biased condition; indifferent; apathetic, lethargic, snorenc. Webster’s Unabridged Dictionary. The Bridgewater State College campus is filled with ‘movers’ and ‘shakers’.

When 90% of the residents students go home on the weekends, the remaining 10% that are there are not as active. Yet when asked about campus, hardly anyone qualify as ‘movers and ‘shakers’ in the Almanac Staff, Madison Ball. College is often described as the best four years of one’s life.

Is staying locked away in a dorm room the epitome of fun? Are students waiting for Mr. Fun to come knocking on their doors? He does not exist. Whatever happened to people participating in events that are made for the students? Do the students want? Do the students know what they want?

They are students who have ‘real’ jobs, family obligations, and other programs. How many students are involved in activities? Do they participate in any other events if they do not sponsor? Where are all the ‘movers’ and ‘shakers’ of this college? Does anyone have any pride for the social scene of BSC college?

College is a one-shot deal. It is expected that for self-development, discovery and talents are developed. For some, the rest of their life, should students stay in their sheltered milieu?

What about trying some experimentation and taking some risks? The best learning experiences come from learning through mistakes.

In the BSC academia, afraid of failing if they try a new activity? Who knows, they may have some fun or that is a scary thought. At the events such as a band in the ART, if people will try to go, they may meet a new person or two and create a new style of music. Wouldn’t that be exciting?

Is there that pessimism?

It would be assumed that the whole college audience would like the music. After all, they’re ‘movers and shakers’. Often people say that their sweethearts does not know anything about the social events on campus, so the couple stays in through the night.

‘Is twie-twite’ nee able to meet anyone besides his/her true love? If it is their love, their partner will not be abandoned.

Many students complain that the college activities are not all fun. If they are not considered fun, make a better suggestion to a club. Better yet, get involved with club. Make a difference.

Colleges are in an experience to meet a wide variety of people and opportunities are available. There are many clubs to choose from, a numerous amount and each make an impact on the community.

Students do not take advantage of the institution to which they pay tuition and fees. They are not as active, so few participate, and each make an impact on the community.

As Student Government Association President, I feel that our role should not only be to provide services for clubs and other special projects on campus, but also to provide improvements around campus that would affect the most amount of students as possible. For example, fixing up the Burrill Avenue student study room, buying a career information computer, or fixing a basketball court.

Winter parking rules for Bridgewater State College

Campus Police informs students to create fewer problems

To the Editor:

With the coming of the winter months, I would like to offer some advice and to include some reminders regarding parking restrictions as shown in the Bridgewater State College Traffic and Transportation Handbook (1988-1989).

First, assure that parking decals for Bridgewater State College are affixed to your motor vehicle as the diagram shown opposite page 1 or as indicated on page 3.

Second, remove all decals that have expired.

Third, should your vehicle become disabled on college property or on a town street, notify the Campus Police Office immediately at 697-1380.

Fourth, temporary parking is not allowed on town streets. The use of flashers on town streets is not acceptable.

Fifth, during snow storms or other emergencies, resident students living in resident halls are to check the bulletin boards regularly and also listen for the building paging system or the local radio station for instructions (WBIM) as to where vehicles are to be moved to if necessary to permit the plowing of walkways and parking areas.

Sixth, in accordance with paragraph 1, page 5 of the Traffic Handbook, there is to be no parking of student vehicles in Harrington Hall (lot C) during the period from November 15, 1988 through March 31, 1989.

For some reason you find that you will be away from the campus for even a short period of time during the winter months, contact Campus Police with some who will be responsible for moving your vehicle (page 4).

Where has all of the students' money gone?

The holidays are not so far away, but before any student can expect to look forward to some time off, they must first look forward to some time on. It is time these people wakes up to the fact that the system of education is far too good to be true.

The higher education system is far too good to be true. It is time these people wakes up to the fact that the system of education is far too good to be true. It is time these people wakes up to the fact that the system of education is far too good to be true.

As the holiday season approaches, it is time these people wakes up to the fact that the system of education is far too good to be true. It is time these people wakes up to the fact that the system of education is far too good to be true.

It is time these people wakes up to the fact that the system of education is far too good to be true. It is time these people wakes up to the fact that the system of education is far too good to be true. It is time these people wakes up to the fact that the system of education is far too good to be true.
Is holiday glory fading?...some thoughts on Veterans Day

This year's election is just one more example as to why the American political system is in need of reform. After all, what would you call a system in which the Democratic Party shifted from their traditional liberal to conservative views, and the Republican Party changed from their traditional conservative to liberal views? It is a system in which both parties do not have enough commonality to represent the interests of the American people.

The elephant in the room is the current political system, which is broken beyond repair. The two major political parties both have their own set of interests, and they are not interested in working together to solve the problems facing this country.

Instead, they are more concerned with gaining power and controlling the government, regardless of what is best for the American people. They are more interested in catering to their base and winning elections, rather than finding solutions to the problems that our country is facing.

This is a broken system, and it needs to be fixed. It needs to be replaced with a new political system that is better able to represent the interests of the American people and solve the problems facing our country.

In order to do this, we need to start by giving people more power in the political process. This means giving people more tools to hold their elected representatives accountable, and making it easier for them to participate in politics.

We need to make it easier for people to register to vote and cast their ballots, and we need to make sure that every vote counts. We need to make it easier for people to hold their representatives accountable, by giving them more tools to do so.

This could include things like campaign finance reform, term limits, and forcing elected officials to release their tax returns. It could also include things like requiring elected officials to publish their calendars, and making their schedules and appointments public.

By giving people more power in the political process, we can start to fix the broken system that we have today. We can start to make our country a better place, and we can start to make sure that the American people are represented.

It is time for a new political system, one that works for the American people and not just for the political elite. It is time to fix the broken system that we have today, and to give the American people the democracy they deserve.
A baseball film hits a home run

Baseball has enjoyed a resurgence of interest in Hollywood lately. The new baseball film, "Eight Men Out," is the latest entry in the genre, and it's a home run for its depiction of the 1919 Chicago White Sox scandal.

The film is based on the true story of the Black Sox scandal, in which several members of the 1919 Chicago White Sox were accused of accepting bribes to throw the World Series. The film follows the lives of the players, their families, and the fans as they navigate the fallout of the scandal.

"Eight Men Out" is a well-crafted film that balances the drama of the event with the personal stories of the individuals involved. The acting is strong across the board, with particular standout performances by John Cusack as Shoeless Joe Jackson and John Goodman asramids manager Tris Speaker.

The film is not just a retelling of a historic event, but a commentary on the nature of sports and the pressures that can lead to moral compromise. It raises important questions about the role of money in professional sports and the responsibility of athletes to uphold the integrity of the game.

Overall, "Eight Men Out" is a compelling and thought-provoking film that will appeal to baseball fans and moviegoers alike. It's a home run for cinema.

Baseball has enjoyed a resurgence of interest in Hollywood lately. The recent film "Field of Dreams" on the wall momentous set in the minor leagues that became the biggest hit of the season. Under production now in Milwaukee is "Major League," which features the tribulations of a season with the Cleveland Indians, baseball's other perennial loser. Just recently released is "Babe," an account of the 1919 Chicago baseball season.

To the uninitiated, eight members of the 1919 Chicago White Sox, considered one of the finest teams ever to take the diamond, wanted to accept their fines for throwing the Series. While this might not come as such a shock today, at the time it was considered as indefensible against American society.

In Satchel's hands, the views sympathies with the players or at the least their owners. Baseball players then did not consider the outrageous salaries they do today, and oftentimes the players deemed it other.

Eight Men Out is a baseball movie that shows the dark side of all- American pastime. It is poignantly told with admirable adherence to period accuracy and enhanced by a handsome narrative score. Several familiar faces appear: Charlie Sheen, D.B. Cooper, Jack Lemmon, John Cusack and Christopher Lloyd as one of the fixers.

Field Hockey ends season at the NCAA tournament

Stopping is a very difficult and a very emotional way to lose a hockey game, especially a championship game such as this. The Lady Bears, in their first NCAA tournament since 1985, played an aggressive, fast-paced game. They are a young and talented team that can be expected to return and fight next year.

Specialmention must go to Captain Kathy McGough (defense), Andrea Erikson (attack) and Melinda Moleon (defense), the great team support and excellent defensive and offensive plays. To Tricia Cullen for doing a great job as sweeper. To the new freshman who played in NCAA tournament: Kate Sullivan (goalie) a tough, intelligent and aggressive player. To Erika Hardiman for her aggressive team support and great passing combinations with Andrea Erikson. And, lastly, to Michele Magner the team co-captain, a senior playing in her second NCAA tournament.
