Fee increase causes students to dig deeper into pockets

By Ron Hayes

All full-time Bridgewater State College students will be receiving a bill for an additional fee -- $125 for the spring semester. The college's board of trustees raised the fee, which passed the action by a vote of 6-1. President Donald S. Longo voted no. The bills are due to be mailed out on Feb. 1.

The board has raised a cut of approximately $642,000 for the spring semester. In order to keep the $125 in the budget, the board cut the basketball grants for student athletes by $550,000, according to Priscilla O'Neil, Assistant Director of Housing, and staff. The fee increase is supposed to compensate for the state cuts this year.

Curtis also said that the $125 fee will, in effect, increase the current student fees. The Student Government Association blocked the administration from wasting money from in state funds, and the cuts are being made in order to make up the difference again, next year. Longo said that he would vote against the increase.

Wilson leads public info group

By Ron Hayes

As a result of the Commonwealth's initiative to increase public information campaigns by Massachusetts' state colleges, the Student Information Campaign is being planned. The Council of Presidents and the State Colleges have appointed Dr. William G. O'Neil, President of the Massachusetts College of Liberal Arts, to oversee the campaign which will help in promoting the state colleges' own David Wilson, Director of Public Affairs, to become the overall coordinator of the campaign.

The campaign will be designed to promote awareness among the people and legislators of the importance of the state colleges and their contributions to the state. The team must make sure to keep an eye on the students who are asked to make up the difference again, next year. Longo said that he would vote against the increase.

Alford attributes the lighter security at Shea-Durgin Hall is far fewer than that of other halls. According to Resident Director Brian Alford, this has been the result of past experience as well as from observance of how other colleges handle the security in their residence halls.

Although his lecture concentrated more on the faces of post-apartheid South Africa and the problems it will face, he did spend a great deal of time explaining the meaning of the important problems facing South Africa.

"South Africa," Domingo explained, "has the most severe form of racial repression in the world, and the apocalyptic struggle will continue throughout every aspect of life." To illustrate, he observed that, "Wore this South Africa, I would not be able to walk in the house in the morning and would not be allowed to go to school every day to the after school.

Domingo then spoke about his education in South Africa and some of the problems he encountered during the 35 years he lived, classified as "Black." The current system of education is designed to preserve and perpetuate the system of apartheid, allowing some to be educated separated from other minorities as well as from whites if they are considered politically "safe.

Domingo believes that the solution in South Africa will ultimately be both violent and non-violent. He believes that the country will eventually come more peaceful. We have tried for over 50 years non-violently, but now the struggle has entered a new stage," stated Domingo. He added that "apartheid will not be ended, but overcome and replaced."

What will replace apartheid specifically Domingo did not say. He assured that the solutions will come from South Africans themselves. Groups like the African National Congress are already trying to plan a moment that will provide a better life for all South Africans.

The solution will not be easy or quick one, Domingo said. He pointed out more than a few of the many problems that will face South Africa two aparthad. The country will need not only cons. exp. 3, but..."} "I was invited here to speak about South Africa because I teach geography. But also, because I am a South African," explained Dr. Vereen Domingo, of the Bridgewater State College Earth and Society and Geography Department. Domingo lectured Tuesday night regarding the problems facing post-apartheid South Africa.

Domingo maintains that it is important to consider in which direction South Africa will be headed. He believes that events will lead to the ultimate demise of apartheid, a system which is more white minority holds total political and economic power over a large black and "colored" minority. Therefore, Domingo feels it is important to consider what will occur the day after the present palaces gone through open and apartheid is abolished. He day believes will cause sometime within the next 20 to 25 years.

London questions Guardian Angels

The New York based group Guardian Angels arrived in London, with four members, to train over 20 volunteers who will patrol London subways. A crowd, including the terminal when they arrived, however, was not pleased by the group's presence. The four members were detained for over seven hours by British officials at London's Gower Airport.

Finally, Police Office said that Guardian Angels could stay for a six month period, as long as the active citizen can help the police fight crime.

The Guardian Angels will meet once a week with the police to continue to discuss their plan.

Salvador peace talks

On Tuesday, Salvadoran rebels offered to take part in elections, but this request was rejected by the ruling Christian Democratic Party's presidential candidate, Francisca Mena. "Voting past March 31 would be unnecessary," said Mena.

Earlier in the week, the United States offered to mediate talks between the two sides.

Bridge theater in New England competition

By Ryan Hays

Bridgeview State College students will perform at the American Theater Festival. The event is a production of Shakespeare's "The Taming of the Shrew" at the New England Regional Festival in Providence.

This event will run from Jan. 31 to Feb. 3.

Bridgeview was the only selected from Massachusetts to be chosen to perform on the competition level. Overall, 83 schools from the New England area were chosen for the competition.

Five colleges will compete at this level. The colleges are Brown College, Millbury, Middlebury College, Vermont, New Hampshire, and Rhode Island College.

In addition to the group competition, three solo co-eds will be competing for the title of "Best Acting Scholarship." These are Janice Coulter, for "A Comedy of Errors," and Laura Langan, for "A Comedy of Errors."

Dr. Susan Sparer, director of the Shakespeare Festival, said that all participated in the festivals at the festival level are "National Superstars." She also said that the group is expected to participate in the festival.

This is one of the most important honors that can be bestowed on academic theater," Sparer said.

In 1973, the Supreme Court of the United States declared in the case of Eisenstadt v. Baird that the right to an abortion in the early stages of pregnancy is a fundamental right protected by the Bill of Rights. Since then, the Supreme Court has reaffirmed this decision in several cases, including Roe v. Wade. The Supreme Court has also extended the right to abortion to women in all states, regardless of their marital status or financial ability to obtain an abortion.

The legal and moral questions concerning abortion

The legal and moral questions concerning abortion have been the subject of much debate in recent years. While some people believe that abortion is a personal right and should be available to all women, others believe that abortion is morally wrong and should be illegal.

How do you feel about the hand stamping security policy initiated by the housing staff this week?

"I'm not for it because it's not very attractive for the twenty-five year olds to walk around like kids with stamps on their hands. I think it aggravates the problem more than it will help it."

"It's a good safety measure. I think if someone wore a name tag, that would be better."

"It's a good form of security, however I think it's more of a nuisance than a form of protection."

"I think hand stamping isn't as bad as the hall passes at 'the bill.' The hall passes make you feel like you're in high school again. But since the hand stamping started, the hall hasn't had any trouble."

"I felt that the newly elected system has got good and bad points, it will help our personal safety, it's worth it. However, they need not use permanent ink."

The Far Side

By Gary Larson

Readers of The Comment will soon be able to meet Gary Larson's favorite comic, "The Far Side," in much read issue. The Universal Press Syndicate, which distributes Larson's comic cartoon, will publish background information to be printed with the comic section.

Larson has had three books on the New York Times bestseller list. He appears in a large variety, and sells many at the same time. Via his characters Adams owns more than one dollar in the form of calendars, mugs, T-shirts, and greeting cards. Larson was expected at the quick success and sold, "It's all sort of surreal."

Larson, 38, grew up in Tacoma, Washington and was a typical boy next door. He and his older brother Dean collected dogs, sandals, and stones, and would occasionally flood their back yard to create a swamp. His mother, a reading teacher, and his father a car salesman, would occasionally calm his fears about national disasters.

As a child, he drew quite a bit, but never expected to become a cartoonist. He drew cartoons, dessiners, and other members of his childhood. His interest in drawing stopped after junior high. When music, particularly the guitar, took over his leisure. Music is still a hobby of his. He does, however, enjoy reading the comic strip.

He graduated from Washington State University with a major in communications. At this time he was a self taught person, avoiding the art of cartooning. When does his cartoon career begin? Well, being in a comic strip.

What does a man who is a Reverend, have a Doctorate degree from Boston University, and is named Doug Williamson? He tells people he can call him anything. Yet, he is most comfortable being called Doug. Williamson is the new prominent minister on campus who wishes students of all faiths to use him as a resource of friendship, guidance and, of course, a minister. He wants to have a positive influence on the people he encounters and on those who encounter him, including faculty, staff, administrators, and students.

Williamson, who came to Bridgewater State College from Lindsey Wilson College in Kentucky, looks forward to being involved with the college community.

Smiley-face for the campus, Reverend Williamson.

How do you feel about the hand stamping security policy initiated by the housing staff this week?

"I think it's a good idea because it can help spot people that are roaming around the dorms. Those are the most people likely to cause the damages which everyone ends up paying for in the end."

"I'm not for it because it's not very attractive for seniors to twenty-five year olds to walk around like kids with stamps on their hands. I think it will aggravate the problem more than it will help it."

"It's a good form of security, however I think it gives the gusts think it's more of a utilization than a form of protection."

"I think the hand stamping isn't as bad as it's been passed as "the bill." The bill passes more people feel like your in high school again. But since the hand stamping started "the bill" hasn't had any affect on campus."

...for far out minds

introducing zany Gary Larson

By Caitlin Andrews

Readers of The Comment will now be able to read Gary Larson's famous comic, "The Far Side" in each weekly issue. The Universal Press Syndicate, which distributes Larson's comic, forwarded background information to be presented to you, his audience at large.

Larson has had three books on the New York Times Bestseller List. He appeals to a large variety; and offend many at the same time. Yes, his characters adorn many a door in the form of calendars, mugs, T-shirts, and greeting cards. Larson was surprised at his quick success and said, "It's all sort of surreal."

Larson, 38, grew up in Tacoma, Washington and was a like the typical boy next door. His and his older brother Dan collected frogs, salamanders, and snakes, and would occasionally flood his back yard to create a swamp. His mother, a nurse; his father a car salesman and his father a car salesman eventually retired and often called about their bored activities.

As a child, he drew quite a bit, but never expanded to become a cartoonist. He drew garabages, doodlers, and other pieces of the animal kingdom. His interest in drawing stopped after junior high, when music, particularly the guitar, took over his interest. Music is still a hobby of his; just his favorite type of music.

He graduated from Washington State University with a major in communications. At the time he sold his calling as were society from another advertisement.

So when does his cartoon career begin? Well, being in a case, p. 12

Expand your horizons

By Caitlin Andrews

Instead of working at that same old job for spring break and for the summer, expand your horizons. Outward Bound is a non-profit organization that helps thousands of people (mostly college age) become stronger. The program is mentally and physically challenging. Students discover hidden talents, become more self-confident, stronger and learn more about the environment in which they live.

The program offers a diverse selection of activities, some of which include cross country skiing, dog sledding, mountain backpacking, white water rafting, and sailing. The variety is available because there are several states which own the Outward Bound program. Some of the states include Maine, North Carolina, Colorado, Missouri, and Oregon. Due to the various climates, the activities are offered year round.

But one may ask, who are the programs geared for? Well, the programs are open to everyone. The students must be at least 16 years old and in good health. There is no upper age limit. The Outward Bound has a special program designed for people over age 35. It is relatively easy in quality to those under 35, but is training and physical conditioning. During this time a qualified, experienced instructor will teach technical skills, safety, first aid, camp cooking, wilderness cooking, rock climbing, and more. Learning that the more adventurous the experiences, the more care and caution are needed to succeed.

The second part of the program is the extended journey in which eight to 15 people (the team) and instructor develop a working relationship with one another, as each person relies on one another within the team. The middle part and the most memorable for many, is the solo. This period of solitude for one to three days without responsibility, care or distractions from the outside is often considered a turning point in a person's life.

Phase four is the final expedition where the team journeys together with less supervision than in phase two. This event is a challenge, yet quite rewarding at the same time. Team work is the theme during this phase. The final of the trip usually consists of paddling or skiing and then the group reflects on their findings and personal discoveries. This time is used to reflect on what occurred on the Outward Bound adventure was like.

Some interested people are affected by the multiplication of physical activity. Members do not have to be athletic to get involved. Of course, it will be physically challenging, but

Protestant minister wants you to know, he is a resource

Caitlin Andrews

What do you call a man who is a Reverend, has a B.S. degree from Boston University and is named Doug Williamson? "I tell people you can call me anything nice."

"It's me. I am a Protestant minister and I am involved with the college. I have been asked to be a resource of anything nice."

Rev. Williamson is the new Protestant minister on campus who wishes students of all faiths to use him as a resource of anything nice. "I feel my role is to be a resource of anything nice."

PSYCHOLOGICALLY YOURS

Renewed interest occurs in the field of psychology

Contributed by Dr. Richard T. Colgan, Professor of Psychology

"Welcome" to all new BSC students and "Welcome back" to all undergraduates, graduates and even evening college scholars. Best wishes for a highly successful and intellectually stimulating '89 Spring Semester!

For the first time in almost 20 years, college graduates face brighter job prospects as the number of jobs requiring a college degree, especially jobs in professional occupations, is expected to grow by more than 40 percent. Management majors will increase by 60 percent and those for technicians and marketing people will grow by 70 percent or more, according to Gary Dressler, management consultant and professor at Florida International University.

While some imbalance is expected, those who carefully select their career objectives, prepare themselves for competitive work and learn how to look for a job and market themselves - skills which can be learned while in college - will still have the smoothest transition from school to work.

Last semester the Psychology Club and the Psi Chi National Honor Society, in cooperation with the Career Planning and Placement Center, conducted a highly successful job planning seminar.

The Psi Chi National Honor Society, in Psychology, executive committee, faculty advisors, and department faculty shall screen for scholastic achievement the credentials of a sizable number of Honor Society applicants early this semester. Announcements to successful candidates to the Life-Membership society will be made later this semester and prior to BSC Awards Day.

Due to the growing interest on the part of BSC students in the field of psychology, nearly 40 percent of the department's undergraduate classes - many of them with a capacity of 50 students - closed out five days before the winter break.

The good news at the national level in the field of psychology. Psychologists attained parity with psychiatrists within the federal judicial system with regard to court-ordered mental examinations and determinations of competence. The half-century of discrimination by the medical-psychoanalytic establishment against psychologists seeking psychoanalytic training is over. This may have been partially responsible for the increased interest in all fields of psychology.

Self-motivated and advanced graduate students, with serious interest in the scientific approach to parapsychology are encouraged to consider the summer study program at J.B. Rhine's former Parapsychology Laboratory at Duke University.

The Institute for Parapsychology Foundation for Research on the Nature of Man remains the leading research and educational center in the field. The intensive eight-week course for which academic credit may be arranged is limited to less than 10 persons per summer session.

Additional information may be obtained from Dr. Richard T. Colgan, Room 330 Burrill Academic Bldg., or via reference to the announcements on the Psychology Club bulletin board. "Welcome to BSC and Psychologically Yours."

Trivia challenge in the College Bowl

By Doug Eckhardt Co-host

Now that the Orange Bowl, Fiesta Bowl, and the Super Bowl are finally over, there are only two bowls to get excited about.

The Toilet Bowl and The College Bowl. The Toilet Bowl is not very exciting, but The College Bowl offers makers of flouderage a chance to compare locally, regionally, and nationally.

In this bowl game you do not have to worry about getting tackled. The only people you will have to do is the questions you have to answer.

The College Bowl is a live game.

Outward Bound

Cost: $99

This is the program to get your feet wet in the field of psychology.

The goals are not beyond the reach of any man or woman who is in average physical condition. Members frequently encounter muscle cramps in the beginning, however endurance and mental attitude is more important than strength.

Safety is the highest priority of Outward Bound. Each activity is carefully planned with first rate equipment.

A student requires only their clothing and footwear. The organization supplies all other equipment and special clothing for each new adventure.

Financially, Outward Bound pays more than it gets back from the participants.

Logically, financial aid is available. College credit is also available for the extension.

The journey varies in the number of days. For more information regarding Outward Bound, call (802) 243-3130. Or write to: Outward Bound National Office, 384 Field Point Rd., Glastonbury, CT 06033.

It's cooler than the Bahamas.

Why sweat in the Caribbean when you can cruise the slopes of Okemo? Midweek lift tickets are 50% off for college students, so it's cheaper than the Bahamas, too. Call (802) 228-5571 for lodging, (802) 228-4041 for general information.

Library Bulletin Board Regulations

Dr. Owen T.P. McGowan, Librarian, has issued the following regulations governing use of the bulletin boards in the Clement C. Maxwell Library.

Notices must be related to college activities. Notices may be stamped by the library security before posting. Otherwise, they may be removed from the bulletin boards. It is required that notices be legible and spelling errors be observed. Those posting notices are responsible for removing them when no longer needed.

Notices should be on poster-sized paper. No size smaller than 11" by 11" or larger than 17" by 22" shall be posted. Notices of activities which will continue throughout the year should not be changed more than once a week.

Board must be stapled by the library security before posting. Otherwise, they may be removed from the bulletin boards. It is required that notices be legible and spelling errors be observed. Those posting notices are responsible for removing them when no longer needed.

Lady Bears beat out Worcester State
Womens Basketball racks up some solid numbers

By Tom Magee
Comment staff

Last Tuesday night the Bridgewater State Bears took their 41-40 win over the Worcester State Lancers continuing their winning ways and bringing their overall record to 10-3 and their MACC record to a perfect 4-0 record. This team has been on a roll this season with no losses against MACC opponents and a good showing in those games will help the team earn a berth in either the EACCA or MACC playoffs. The high scorer for Bridgewater was forward Lynn Kozowyk who shot seven of twelve free throws scoring fourteen points on the evening. She was averaging over eleven points for the fifteen games leading the team, she also had two offensive and four defensive rebounds. Forward Karina Arciniega led the team in scoring eleven points on the evening and also got two offensive and two defensive rebounds. Defenders, Colleen De Vito led the team in rebounds, two offensive and six defensive rebounds by far the highest leader with nine points on the afternoon.

Gymnasts lose second meet

By Tom Magee
Comment staff

The Bridgewater State University Gymnastics Team moved dropped to 0-2 with their loss to the University of Bridgeport last Sunday January 22. The meet was lost on Monday January 23. The team was actually a very good one for the team, their record is better than last year. The meet was forced to use a substitute for the first time ever. The second meet is scheduled for Saturday, February 4th at 1:00 in the Kelly Gymnasium.

Swimmers fight tough odds

By Tom Magee
Comment staff

The B.S.C. swim team is showing great determination by fighting their way back to the top and a tough schedule this season. Both the men's and women's team have received training for their second season this year. The women's team began their training in the reopening of the pool. Because of the new pool work done during the semester break, the pool was delayed to not be opened until ten days after it was believed to be ready. The women's team numbers are actually up, from last year's low of 13, in eighteen members this year. Injuries and illnesses have afflicted a few and that is why they have not helped the team this season. The team will be getting on the winning track as soon as they are healthy and in time for their goals.

Top新鲜 included Brecken Frye from the State College, Kolyn Kozowyk, Michelle Mackin, and Heather Weldon. Adding depth are freshmen Nicole Collette, Lisa Lea, Lauren Payne, Michelle Peterson, Karen Salib, and Kerri Toler. Upperclasswomen giving the team a strong return include Julie Kobilis and Deanna Towns. The men's team is confident that they will have good meets against even, p. 13

Sean Carey named to Basketball honor roll

Brigges State College was named to the EAC Division III Basketball Honor Roll for their outstanding performance throughout the week of January 8-14. During that time the BSC Bears (6-7-2) on the week with wins over Western State (51-75), Framingham State (82-72), UNITE, while losing a close decision to UMass-Boston (66-61). The BSC Bears finished the season with three losses and had two wins. The team is looking strong heading into the season.

Wilson leads public info group

As a result of the Commonwealth's budget crisis and the lack of public information campaigns by Massachusetts State College, the Student Government Association has appointed Dr. William O. Malkasian, president of the Massachusetts College of Art in Boston, to assist them in their campaign. Dr. Malkasian is presently an associate professor of fine arts at the Massachusetts College of Art in Boston, a position he has held for over ten years. The Student Government Association is currently working with the Massachusetts State College to help with the campaign and is expected to announce details soon.

Fee increase causes students to dig deeper into pockets

By Bryan Hayes
Comment staff

All fall-time Bridgewater State College students will be receiving a bill for an additional $152 for the spring semester. The college's board of trustees passed the action by a vote of 6-2 last week. The bill is due by the end of February. The bill will result in a decrease in the students' financial aid packages. The college will also be sending out statements to all students who have received financial aid to help them understand how the increase will affect their financial aid. The college has also stated that they are working with the students to find ways to reduce the impact of the increased costs.

For further information on the cost of attendance, students may contact the Resident Hall Council. The Student Government Association is building a hall community for Project S.P.I.R.T. Project S.P.I.R.T. is a creative program that will involve a variety of student leaders and a number of programs throughout the semester of February. In order for the program to be successful the student leaders are highly encouraged to participate and be involved.

What is Project S.P.I.R.T.? What does it stand for?

Increased security found at dorm entrances

Handstamping is the new secretary for entering a residence hall

By David Planey
Comment staff

To increase the amount of security in the residence halls at Bridgewater State University, the Residence Hall Council has implemented a new security measure at the dorm entrances. The new security measure involves the use of handstamps that are placed on the dorm doors.

The new system is in place at Assistant Director of Housing, Simony Milllicent, who will be responsible for monitoring the system. Other changes include the addition of a sign-up sheet for the dorm residents and the addition of a security officer.

The new system is expected to be in place by the end of the week. The Residence Hall Council will continue to monitor the system and make any necessary changes.
